JAPAN EXPLAINS RESTATED POLICY TOWARD CHINESE

TO WELCOME DEALINGS

Says Nation Didn't Plan To Censor Other Countries' Relations

TOKYO, April 28.—(AP)—Japan issued an "official" interpretation of her restated policy toward China today.

Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, said in a statement that Japan "can not remain indifferent" to foreign efforts to aid China that "endanger the peace of Asia."

Japan has no desire to interfere with the rights of other powers in China, the statement added, and will welcome other nations' dealings with China provided such dealings rebound to China's benefit.

Hope was expressed that the statement would convince governments alarmed by the April 17 declaration that never had been any intention to assert Japan's right to censor the relations of Occidental nations with China.

The statement in full was delivered only to Ambassador Joseph C. Grew of the United States and to the British ambassador, Sir Francis Lindley, in response to their questions concerning the earlier declaration.

Only the high points of the statement were made public. The text will probably be made public Monday.

A foreign office spokesman declared the earlier statement was not intended for publication. He said it was a synopsis of a communication to the Japanese minister to China.

The communication today to the American and British ambassadors "is the only official statement," it was pointed out.

Hirota told the two envoys that Japan has no intention of violating China's sovereignty and integrity, desires the unification of China, supports the open-door, equal opportunities policies and has no intention of infringing existing treaties.

Diplomatic circles, while pointing out that the new statement is along the general lines of that of April 17, remarked that it was couched in more conciliatory terms.

The foreign office vigorously declared that Hirota was not responsible for the April 17 pronouncement which has become widely known as Japan's "hands-off China" policy.

It is presumed that Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, will present Hirota's statement to parliament Monday.

STATE'S ATTORNEYS CLOSE CONVENTION

LAKE CHARLES, La., April 28.—(AP)—The Louisiana State association closed its annual convention here today by electing U. A. Bell of Lake Charles as president in succession to Henry G. McCall of New Orleans. Alexandria and Lafayette bid for the 1935 convention, whose site will be designated by the executive committee.

Bell moved up into the presidency from the vice-presidency of the third supreme court district and Daniel DeBaillon of Lafayette was named as his successor in the latter post. All other vice presidents were re-elected, including John D. Miller of New Orleans, Pike Hall, Jr., of Shreveport, Judge Carey Ellis, Jr., of Rayville, Charles V. Porter of Baton Rouge, and Robert E. Brumby of Franklin.

W. W. Young of New Orleans was renamed secretary-treasurer.

Numerous distinguished attorneys were heard by the association at the closing session, the principal address being delivered by James Grafton Rogers, dean of the Colorado university law school and assistant secretary of state in the Hoover cabinet.

14 Children Rescued By California Life Guard

MANHATTAN BEACH, Cal., April 28.—(AP)—Fourteen mothers today had County Life Guard Alvin Bixler to thank for the lives of their children.

Caught in a riptide, the pupils were swept out to sea. Life Guard Bixler plunged into the swift surf and rescued three children the first trip. He returned again and brought three more to safety.

Bixler again swam into the strong current, grabbed a hand here, a head of hair there and returned the third time with four pupils in tow. He rescued the other four in another trip.

Man Is Killed As Auto Overturns Near Tallulah

VICKSBURG, Miss., April 28.—(AP)—Fred M. Crane, president of a constructing company building levees near Delta Point, La., was almost instantly killed late today when his automobile overturned on the highway three miles west of Tallulah, La.

Witnesses said Crane apparently lost control of the car and it plunged over on the side of the road. The body was taken to Tallulah.

IT IS GOOD NEWS that railroads and employes have arranged their differences, particularly good news that workers will have restored the 10 per cent cut in wages. It will be done slowly, in three advances, beginning July 1, but better slowly than never.

Railroad unions, including in their membership the finest type of American citizenship, sober, careful, patient, industrious conductors, engineers and others, set a good example to labor in their patience, and unwillingness to delay return of prosperity. Railroads, perhaps the greatest of sufferers from the depression, fortunately find conditions improving. In March, 1934, they took in more than $30,000,000 as against $5,500,000 in March last year. For the first quarter of this year the net operating income

RICHLAND PARISH MAN IS SLAIN IN DRUNKEN AFFRAY

Victim Reputedly Objected To Being Put In Room With Babies

As a result of what officers termed a drunken brawl near Mitchiner community in Richland parish, one man was fatally shot at 4 o'clock Saturday morning and another was arrested by members of the sheriff's department at Rayville as the suspected slayer, according to information received in Monroe.

Robert Moseley, 20, farmer living about four miles west of Mitchiner, in West Carroll parish, was almost instantly killed when struck in the abdomen by a bullet from a .38 calibre pistol. John McGee, 60, was taken into custody after officers had been informed that he fired the shot. McGee lives in Warden community in Richland parish.

The parish coroner and members of the sheriff's department said they had experienced difficulty in getting the facts in connection with the shooting and that the investigation probably would not be completed for several days. McGee was said to have denied responsibility for the killing, asserting that he did not have a pistol on his person.

COURT AID SOUGHT IN AUTO WALKOUT

(By Associated Press)

Court aid against striking employes of the Fisher Body company at Cleveland—out in the auto industry's newest dispute over unionism—was sought yesterday.

An injunction was asked to restrain the United Automobile Workers' federal union from interfering with 3,000 members of the company union. It was believed to presage an attempt to open the plant, where a strike has involved 8,400 workers.

Almost immediately it was announced that negotiation would be attempted Monday, under the aegis of the national labor board.

Negotiation or arbitration did for most of the other strikes. Cleveland's striking tank truck drivers agreed to a 10-day truce, and it was hoped 2,000 striking gas station men would adopt the same plan. Motorists, after 11 nearly gasless days, were assured of fuel for the Sunday drive.

'Obnoxious' Nominee Rejected By Senate At Clark's Request

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(AP)—The senate today rejected the nomination of William R. Taylor, to be postmaster at Fulton, Missouri, on a statement by Senator Clark, Democrat, Missouri, that he was "personally obnoxious" to him.

It was the first time the senate has rejected one of President Roosevelt's nominations, though several have been recalled.

Taylor was reported to the senate by the postoffice committee adversely. Clark asked for the nomination to be rejected.

Senator Long, Democrat, Louisiana, who is seeking to have the nomination of Daniel D. Moore as collector of internal revenue for Louisiana rejected on personal grounds, asked Clark for his reason.

"He is personally objectionable and obnoxious to me," Clark said.

There was no further debate. The nomination was rejected without a record vote.

Field Of Five Women And Eleven Men Narrowed To Three

GRADES ARE RECEIVED

Wooten, Germany And Herring Are Now Left In Contest

The field of candidates for the Monroe postmastership apparently had been narrowed to three Saturday, when most of the 16 candidates received notices in regard to examinations taken some time ago. It is understood that only three of those who took the examinations were rated and that all of the others received notice their applications had been received. The practice usually followed in such cases is that the three highest ratings are considered eligible for the appointment.

Those said to have received ratings were James R. Wooten, acting postmaster, R. W. Germany and John J. Herring. When interrogated, Mr. Germany and Mr. Herring said they had received grades and Mr. Wooten was quoted as saying he was among those who had passed, although he could not be reached for a statement. No grades were shown on the notices of those who were eliminated.

Under the usual custom in naming a postmaster, the three who receive the highest grades among the group of applicants are given ratings and any one of the three is then considered eligible for appointment. Recommendation from among the three is made to the president by the congressman from the district in which the postoffice is located. Ordinarily

TROOP 31 WINS BOY SCOUT MEET

Monroe Boys Take First Place And Tallulah Lads Are Second

Troop 31 of Monroe, with a total of 226 points, won the annual field day and rally of the Ouachita Valley Boy Scout council yesterday at Camp Ki-Ro-Li.

Second and third place honors went to troop 56, Tallulah, and troop 1, Monroe, with 206 and 192 points, respectively. Three troops were bunched closely for the next two places, troop 25, Lake Providence, amassing 140 points for fourth place, and troops 29 and 34 of Monroe, with 135 points each, tied for fifth place.

Approximately 325 scouts and 100 visitors and scout officials attended the event, which was declared to be one of the most successful in the history of the council.

The day's program was begun at 11 a. m. with drilling and inspection. Winners of these features were:

BANK COMMITTEE OKEHS PLANS TO AID SMALL FIRMS

Bill Approved By Senate Group To Give Help With Loans

WOULD PROVIDE JOBS

Day In Washington Brings More Talk Concerning Silver

WASHINGTON, April 28. — (AP) — Federal reserve loans to give small businesses the financial help they cannot get from other sources were approved today by the senate banking committee.

The bill approved would allow about $280,000,000 to be used in that manner. Officials have said they expected such direct loan by the federal reserve to businesses unable to obtain loans from the regular channels.

Such direct loans, however, would be in unusual cases. Most of the loans would be made through regular banking channels with these banks bearing 20 per cent of the risk and the federal reserve the remainder. The loans would be for five years.

Thus, in a round-about way, the government would extent to small industries the same aid already given farmers, railroads, banks and various other forms of national activity through the several emergency and permanent lending agencies that have been set up.

One idea back of the plan is that it will supply business with the funds necessary to stimulate additional employment. Only yesterday, William Green, president of the Amercian Federation of Labor, said the tendency was turning toward the idea of getting more labor out of men rather than that of getting more men to labor.

The day also brought more talk about silver. At the White House it was said the president would like to

YOUNG RUSSIANS TO GET WAR TRAINING

MOSCOW, April 28.—(AP)—The vanguard of Soviet Russia's youth, 5,000,000 strong, comprising the membership of the Young Communist league, was ordered today to undergo three months of intensive training in the rudiments of military and aviation technique and physical culture.

Following the three months' course, the youths will be given an examination.

The league is a junior branch of the Communist party with members between the ages of 16 and 24 of both sexes.

The order for the training, which becomes another phase of militory preparedness, was taken by the central committee of the league in combination with the central council of labor unions, the civil society for aviation and chemical defense, the Red Cross and the supreme council of physical culture.

The movement was described as "of immense political and defensive importance."

Highway Commission Makes Slip, And Honest Contractor Gets Job

Details Show How System Works To Advantage Of Favored Ones

When the legislative probe reaches the vitals of the Louisiana highway commission, it will touch a system of "fixing" jobs for favored contractors so complicated and possessing so many ramifications that it clearly took an expert in devious and crooked methods to perfect it.

In a former article it was shown how an apparently unimportant item in the specifications which most of the bidders could not possibly consider in their calculations was the means of giving the successful bidder, who clearly had information concerning it in advance, immense profits.

This was only one of the ways the racketeers in the highway commission adopted to toss wasted dollars into the laps of favored contractors. The others will be treated and examples afforded, in due time. This article will deal with the case of a "fixed job" that flickered. In spite of everything that could be done to prevent it, the job fell into the hands of an honest man. He is said to have been literally thunder-struck at the profits arising from one feature of the contract.

Incidentally, one half mile of shellroad is said to have cost the taxpayers upwards of $32,000 without the cost of furnishing and laying the shells. Considered in connection with Huey Long's boast that concrete roads in the state system had an average cost of $25,000 per mile, these figures are illuminating.

The contract referred to was a shell road job at Sorrento, in the lower end of the state. Probably to the surprise and chagrin of whoever in the highway commission was responsible for the letting of the job, a contractor named Hoffman is said to have bid surprisingly low on shells and had to be given the contract.

One item in the specifications was known as the "overhaul," that is to say the hauling of dirt from the source of supply to the place where it is laid. This item called for overhaul of 10,000 yards.

The contractor, being a shell man and knowing little about the hauling and laying of dirt, is said to have sent for other contractors experienced in that line and offered to sub-contract the overhaul, at the price which the state paid him. This was 5 cents per yard. Other contractors had bid 1 1-2 cents per yard for the same item.

Allelo & Maggio were the sub-contractors. They saw at once that the sub-contract was a gold mine and promptly accepted the offer of the contractor.

"Only," said Sam Maggio, one of the partners, "it was so patent that the job had been fixed for someone else and had unintentionally fallen into other hands, that my partner and I insisted on paying the contractor 10 per cent of the contract. Mr. Hoffman couldn't understand it. That was evidently something entirely new to him.

"Ten thousand yards of overhaul at 5 cents isn't much, but 390,000 yards of haulage at the same price is. And that is precisely what the sub-contract amounted in that respect. We laid the dirt at 29 cents

Amazing Profits Revealed By Man Inadvertently Given Contract

True Tabloid Tales

The Louisiana Highway Commission is spoofing either the public or the courts. Its financial statement for the first three months of 1934, filed with the state auditor, shows that the condition of its exchequer is all that could be desired. Yet, in defending a suit brought by the city of New Orleans for $175,000, due March 31, its attorneys claimed that the commission hasn't a thin dime and that its revenues are just sufficient to pay the "current, necessary and usual expenses" of the highway body.

Looks funny! The commission reported for the first three months of this year receipts of $4,818,961.49 and expenditures of $3,578,914.99, leaving a balance on April 1 of $1,240,046.50. Its general fund, which pays "current, necessary and usual expenses," received $3,505,315.98 and expended $2,312,196.00, according to the commission's own figures. In fact, the general fund was so fat that it was able to lend $931,626.94 to the bond fund of highway fund No. 2, the Hammond-Chef Menteur route. In the first quarter of 1934, the highway body got $3,291,798.57 from the sale of motor licenses alone.

It is certainly queer that a body which was fairly wallowing in money on April 1 should be a financial cripple, hardly able to make its own way, at this time. But, here is something queerer still. If the highway commission pleads poverty to escape its honest debts, how can it reconcile that stand with its decision to retire several million dollars of highway bonds several years before their maturity, to enrich certain speculators who bought around seventy and will cash in at one hundred?

The city of New Orleans won its first suit against the highway commission in the supreme court last Monday. But, the chances are that it will have to sue again every settlement day. Meanwhile, what do the farmers think of their chances for constitutionally pledged secondary roads, about which the police jury association of the state was so insistent a few days ago?

Let us hope that they do not think there is a shadowy possibility of Huey P. Long providing them.

California Posse Deals Death To Two Escaped Desperadoes

(By Associated Press)

Guns of the law blazed yesterday as state, federal and local police scored against forces which by kidnaping and banditry have been terrorizing the nation.

While the elusive John Dillinger and his cohorts continued to evade their pursuers, four indictments charging conspiracy to harbor Dillinger were returned by a federal grand jury at St. Paul.

A deputy sheriff reported that he wounded George (Baby Face) Nelson, Dillinger killer, in an exchange of shots near Solon Springs, Wis.

Dillinger himself was reported to have appeared at places as divergent as Binghampton, N. Y., and University avenue, St. Paul, as well as many intermediate points.

Governor White of Ohio and his daughter, Mary, were under guard at Columbus following reports of a Dillinger plot to kidnap them.

JACKSON, Miss., April 28.—(AP)—Rev. J. W. Perry, chairman of the episcopacy committee of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, said tonight that complaints had been filed against Bishop Hiram Boaz, of Houston, Texas.

Dr. Perry said that Bishop Boaz was being investigated by a subcommittee of the committee on episcopacy.

A member of the Texas delegation to the general conference said that the complaints against Bishop Boaz were based on charges of mal-administration. This member declined to let his name be used.

REPORT BRANDED HOAX IN ARIZONA KIDNAPING HUNT

Possemen Search Hills Vainly; Clyde Barrow Is Suspected

BISBEE, Ariz., April 28.—(AP)—A report which sent scores of possemen into the hills of the Mexican border country near Huachuca in search of June Robles of Tucson and her abductors was branded a hoax tonight by Sheriff Tom W. Voelker of Cochise county.

Sheriff Voelker sent word from White City that he was ordering discontinuance of a manhunt in which Apache Indian trackers, deputies, border patrolmen and volunteers had been sweeping through the hills for five hours.

The report that had spurred them on was a statement attributed to a negro woman that she had seen two men and a girl in a supposed stolen motor car near the Fort Huachuca military reservation.

Voelker said his investigation established that no one at Fort Huachuca or at White City, adjacent, excepting the negro woman had seen the men.

Officials said it was impossible the persons described could have been in the district without having been seen by some one else, or found by the forces which quickly surrounded the territory.

The weary possemen trooped toward home, discouraged and angry, and airplanes carried to Tucson the disappointing news to shatter the hope of six-year-old June's parents that the three-day hunt was nearing an end.

The hunt returned again to the city of Tucson, where it started.

Apache Indian trackers had augmented the possemen, who were warned that one of their quarry might be Clyde Barrow, notorious outlaw.

Just why the officers suspected Clyde Barrow in the kidnaping case was not explained.

GUM DROP POISONING CHARGE FACES YOUTH

CHARLESTON, Miss., April 28.—(AP)—Bradford J. Dye, Tallahatchie county prosecuting attorney, said today the state would seek a murder indictment against George Spencer Quinton, 17-year-old high school student, for the death of 11-year-old Margie Mae Scott, alleged victim of a poisoned candy gum drop.

The Scott child died of pneumonia, but the state charges her illness was induced by poisoning.

Quinton is being held for preliminary hearing in the county jail here. Dye said he had been informed the youth had repudiated an alleged statement about the case, slated to be reviewed by the grand jury here May 21.

"I have nothing to say about the charge," the youth said tonight in his quarters in the Tallahatchie jail.

Dye said he will attempt to show that Quinton gave Margie Mae a poisoned gum drop through one of her girl schoolmates while they were en route to the school at Charleston from the Scott home in Springhill on February 14.

Dr. Graves Is Taken To St. Louis Hospital

Dr. J. Q. Graves, prominent Monroe physician and surgeon, who has been convalescing in a Monroe hospital from an operation in which the index finger of his left hand was amputated due to an infection, left last night for St. Louis, Mo., to enter the Missouri Pacific hospital there. He was accompanied by Dr. John Snelling, his medical partner.

Dr. Graves, who is division surgeon of the Missouri Pacific railroad, is entering the railroad company's hospital at the insistence of Dr. O. B. Zeinert, chief surgeon of the Missouri Pacific.

The condition of Dr. Graves was said to have been showing rapid improvement but Dr. Zeinert believes it will be beneficial to Dr. Graves to recuperate at the St. Louis hospital.

Terzia said while here he also would confer with officials of the Reconstruction Finance corporation but declined details of his business pending disposition of negotiations with the RFC.

ROGERS HAS HIS SAY

SANTA MONICA, Cal., April 28.—(Special)—Japan, you got to admire 'em, they are so ambitious, and they just got a sense of humor. Their papers took great satisfaction and glee, and screamed it in headlines: "The American fleet can't get through Panama canal in 24 hours." They never figured that the size of the fleet might have something to do with it.

Nineteen new ships have been authorized, and so, when the fleet comes back through there, and it can't get through in a day and a half, that will be a scream to Japan.

Republicans coming out pretty strong now against administration. Looks like if the Democrats don't get Dillinger they may lose this fall's election.

FORMER POLITICAL BOSS IS CHARGED IN BREMER KIDNAP

John J. McLaughlin Is Accused As 'Brains' Of Snatch Case

CHICAGO, April 28.—(AP)—An old-time political boss, John J. McLaughlin, was dubbed by the government today as the "brains" of the $200,000 Bremer kidnaping plot and with his own accuser was put away for trial at St. Paul while federal agents hunted his treasure boxes for the Bremer ransom.

"I think they're dreaming," said the 66-year-old prisoner, protesting the whirl of events that put him behind federal bars in $100,000 bond.

"Ridiculous," he exclaimed when told that his son, Jack, 17, had been seized on the floor of the board of trade. Department of justice men said they were convinced McLaughlin and his accomplices still held most of the $200,000 collected from Edward Brem-

PITTSBURGH SUFFERS NEWSPAPER WALKOUT

PITTSBURGH, April 28.—(AP)—Torn newspapers littered the streets of downtown Pittsburgh today but few were for sale on the news stands.

The cause of the scarcity was the strike of mailing room employes on the city's three newspapers—the Post-Gazette, the Sun-Telegraph and the Press.

Disregarding the orders of their national union heads, the men walked out yesterday demanding the restoration of a 10 per cent pay cut. Gathering about the offices of the Press and the Sun-Telegraph, both evening papers, strike sympathizers halted trucks, dumping the papers in the streets. Both papers suspended publication after issuing early editions.

As trucks sped away from the Post-Gazette last night, with the early editions of morning papers, men swarmed over the vehicles ripping the papers apart and flinging them to the pavement.

Strikers crashed the offices of the Post-Gazette damaging and removing mailing room equipment.

Monroe Firemen Rescue Youthful Hunters From Drifting Raft On River

This is a tale wherein two boys, carrying two guns and accompanied by two dogs on rafts were rescued on the Ouachita river by two Monroe firemen, after their craft became unmanageable.

Vincent Connely, 19, and Cortland McCoy, Monroe youths, being ardent nimrods, yesterday afternoon polished their guns and thought to hie themselves to the woodlands for game.

They embarked on a large raft, to which was tied a smaller raft, at 1:30 p. m. yesterday. They intended to cross the river near the Louisiana Training institute, at which point they pushed off from shore.

However, they misjudged the current of the stream and could not force the craft across. Consequently, they drifted in the rapid current.

After the youths had drifted several hours to a point near the Bob Benson plantation, a negro saw their plight, notified a white man who in turn called Monroe firemen.

Captain Tom Dupree and John McStravick, of the local fire department, hied themselves to the scene with a boat and brought the youths, somewhat dampened in spirit, safely back to Monroe.

Four Persons Charged With Aiding Dillinger Are Indicted

BIG HUNT IS WIDENED

'Baby Face' Nelson Reported Shot By Officer In Wisconsin

ST. PAUL, April 28.—(AP)—The government made good today its pledge that no friend of John Dillinger would go unpunished, indicting four persons charged with harboring the notorious outlaw and aiding him to escape the law.

The indictments were returned by a federal grand jury as the Dillinger hunt spread from University avenue in St. Paul and Minneapolis to Court street in Binghampton, N. Y., with flurries of excitement at Chicago, Madison, Wis., Duluth, Columbus, O., Marshfield, Wis., and other points.

Accused in the indictments were: Evelyn Fretchette, girl friend of the outlaw; Dr. Clayton May of Minneapolis; Mrs. Augusta Salt, a nurse, and Bert Green, alias Moore, reputed wife of a Dillinger gangster since slain.

In addition, several secret indictments naming a number of other persons accused of aiding Dillinger or his men were reported voted.

Dr. May and Mrs. Salt were charged with treating Dillinger for bullet wounds and caring for him for four days in Minneapolis a month ago. They have insisted Dillinger forced them to treat him at the point of a machine gun.

Miss Frechette aided Dillinger to keep ahead of pursuers for weeks, some times driving his automobile when he fled, and Mrs. Green helped her husband obtain the medical treatment for Dillinger.

Centralization of the marathon hunt centralized in the St. Paul-Minneapolis area as police received reports that George "Baby Face" Nelson was headed this way after being wounded by a deputy sheriff at Superior, Wis., and that Tommy Carroll was bound for the same destination.

Both Carroll and Nelson, gunmen and bank robbers, have been with Dillinger, John Hamilton, Homer Van Meter and other criminals in recent weeks. Nelson killed a government agent near Mercer, Wis., last Sunday, hid out for two days in an Indian's shack, and has been pursued ever since.

Impetus was given to the chase today when Governor George White of Ohio announced he had been informed gangsters were hiding out in Columbus and planning to kidnap himself and his daughter, Mary.

Authorities theorized that the Dillinger allies planned to hold the governor and his daughter prisoner and perhaps kill them unless Harry Pierpont, Charles Makley and Russell Clark were freed from the Ohio state penitentiary.

The three have been convicted, and Pierpont and Makley sentenced to die July 13, for rescuing Dillinger last October 12 from jail at Lima, O., in which delivery Sheriff Jess Sarber was killed.

A possibility that the Dillinger gang planned a reunion in St. Paul was seen when Carroll and another man, unidentified, fled the bullets of Deputy Sheriff Al Johnson at Solon Springs, Wis., and headed toward St. Paul. Sheriff Johnson believed he wounded Carroll's companion.

Authorities were convinced that Nelson either was here tonight or on his way. Nelson, five-foot gangster with a cherubic expression, was believed to have been wounded by a deputy at Superior, Wis.

Nelson and a companion were hunted here after Sheriff Hannes Rypkema of Pine county, outside the city, chased them at 80 miles an hour along a highway. A special patrol was or-

Mexican Girl Reported Slain By Mountain Lion

LAREDO, Texas, April 28.—(AP)—The slaying of a 12-year-old Mexican girl by a mountain lion was reported here today.

The girl was killed while on her way home from school near Freer, Duval county, yesterday afternoon.

The report said she was walking behind several other children. They rushed home and notified their parents.

The father of the girl hurried out in search of his daughter and found a huge mountain lion devouring the body.

He killed the animal.

Mountain lions in this section of Texas prey on livestock but this is the first instance where they have been known to kill a human being.

JAPAN EXPLAINS RESTATED POLICY TOWARD CHINESE

TO WELCOME DEALINGS

Says Nation Didn't Plan To Censor Other Countries' Relations

TOKYO, April 28.—(AP)—Japan issued an "official" interpretation of her restated policy toward China today.

Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, said in a statement that Japan "can not remain indifferent" to foreign efforts to aid China that "endanger the peace of Asia."

Japan has no desire to interfere with the rights of other powers in China, the statement added, and will welcome other nations' dealings with China provided such dealings rebound to China's benefit.

Hope was expressed that the statement would convince governments alarmed by the April 17 declaration that never had been any intention to assert Japan's right to censor the relations of Occidental nations with China.

The statement in full was delivered only to Ambassador Joseph C. Grew of the United States and to the British ambassador, Sir Francis Lindley, in response to their questions concerning the earlier declaration.

Only the high points of the statement were made public. The text will probably be made public Monday.

A foreign office spokesman declared the earlier statement was not intended for publication. He said it was a synopsis of a communication to the Japanese minister to China.

The communication today to the American and British ambassadors "is the only official statement," it was pointed out.

Hirota told the two envoys that Japan has no intention of violating China's sovereignty and integrity, desires the unification of China, supports the open-door, equal opportunities policies and has no intention of infringing existing treaties.

Diplomatic circles, while pointing out that the new statement is along the general lines of that of April 17, remarked that it was couched in more conciliatory terms.

The foreign office vigorously declared that Hirota was not responsible for the April 17 pronouncement which has become widely known as Japan's "hands-off China" policy.

It is presumed that Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, will present Hirota's statement to parliament Monday.

STATE'S ATTORNEYS CLOSE CONVENTION

LAKE CHARLES, La., April 28.—(AP)—The Louisiana State association closed its annual convention here today by electing U. A. Bell of Lake Charles as president in succession to Henry G. McCall of New Orleans. Alexandria and Lafayette bid for the 1935 convention, whose site will be designated by the executive committee.

Bell moved up into the presidency from the vice-presidency of the third supreme court district and Daniel DeBaillon of Lafayette was named as his successor in the latter post. All other vice presidents were re-elected, including John D. Miller of New Orleans, Pike Hall, Jr., of Shreveport, Judge Carey Ellis, Jr., of Rayville, Charles V. Porter of Baton Rouge, and Robert E. 14 Children Rescued By California Life Guard

MANHATTAN BEACH, Cal., April 28.—(AP)—Fourteen mothers today had County Life Guard Alvin Bixler to thank for the lives of their children.

Caught in a riptide, the pupils were swept out to sea. Life Guard Bixler plunged into the swift surf and rescued three children the first trip. He returned again and brought three more to safety.

Bixler again swam into the strong current, grabbed a hand here, a head of hair there and returned the third time with four pupils in tow. He rescued the other four in another trip.

VICKSBURG, Miss., April 28.—(AP)—Fred M. Crane, president of a constructing company building levees near Delta Point, La., was almost instantly killed late today when his automobile overturned on the highway three miles west of Tallulah, La.

Witnesses said Crane apparently lost control of the car and it plunged over on the side of the road. The body was taken to Tallulah.

IT IS GOOD NEWS that railroads and employes have arranged their differences, particularly good news that workers will have restored the 10 per cent cut in wages. It will be done slowly, in three advances, beginning July 1, but better slowly than never.

Railroad unions, including in their membership the finest type of American citizenship, sober, careful, patient, industrious conductors, engineers and others, set a good example to labor in their patience, and unwillingness to delay return of prosperity. Railroads, perhaps the greatest of sufferers from the depression, fortunately find conditions improving. In March, 1934, they took in more than $30,000,000 as against $5,500,000 in March last year. For the first quarter of this year the net operating income

Victim Reputedly Objected To Being Put In Room With Babies

As a result of what officers termed a drunken brawl near Mitchiner community in Richland parish, one man was fatally shot at 4 o'clock Saturday morning and another was arrested by members of the sheriff's department at Rayville as the suspected slayer, according to information received in Monroe.

Robert Moseley, 20, farmer living about four miles west of Mitchiner, in West Carroll parish, was almost instantly killed when struck in the abdomen by a bullet from a .38 calibre pistol. John McGee, 60, was taken into custody after officers had been informed that he fired the shot. McGee lives in Warden community in Richland parish.

The parish coroner and members of the sheriff's department said they had experienced difficulty in getting the facts in connection with the shooting and that the investigation probably would not be completed for several days. McGee was said to have denied responsibility for the killing, asserting that he did not have a pistol on his person.

COURT AID SOUGHT IN AUTO WALKOUT

(By Associated Press)

Court aid against striking employes of the Fisher Body company at Cleveland—out in the auto industry's newest dispute over unionism—was sought yesterday.

An injunction was asked to restrain the United Automobile Workers' federal union from interfering with 3,000 members of the company union. It was believed to presage an attempt to open the plant, where a strike has involved 8,400 workers.

Almost immediately it was announced that negotiation would be attempted Monday, under the aegis of the national labor board.

Negotiation or arbitration did for most of the other strikes. Cleveland's striking tank truck drivers agreed to a 10-day truce, and it was hoped 2,000 striking gas station men would adopt the same plan. Motorists, after 11 nearly gasless days, were assured of fuel for the Sunday drive.

'Obnoxious' Nominee Rejected By Senate At Clark's Request

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(AP)—The senate today rejected the nomination of William R. Taylor, to be postmaster at Fulton, Missouri, on a statement by Senator Clark, Democrat, Missouri, that he was "personally obnoxious" to him.

It was the first time the senate has rejected one of President Roosevelt's nominations, though several have been recalled.

Taylor was reported to the senate by the postoffice committee adversely. Clark asked for the nomination to be rejected.

Senator Long, Democrat, Louisiana, who is seeking to have the nomination of Daniel D. Moore as collector of internal revenue for Louisiana rejected on personal grounds, asked Clark for his reason.

"He is personally objectionable and obnoxious to me," Clark said.

There was no further debate. The nomination was rejected without a record vote.

3 Candidates For Monroe's Postmastership Are Given Ratings After Examination

Field Of Five Women And Eleven Men Narrowed To Three

Wooten, Germany And Herring Are Now Left In Contest

The field of candidates for the Monroe postmastership apparently had been narrowed to three Saturday, when most of the 16 candidates received notices in regard to examinations taken some time ago. It is understood that only three of those who took the examinations were rated and that all of the others received notice their applications had been received. The practice usually followed in such cases is that the three highest ratings are considered eligible for the appointment.

Those said to have received ratings were James R. Wooten, acting postmaster, R. W. Germany and John J. Herring. When interrogated, Mr. Germany and Mr. Herring said they had received grades and Mr. Wooten was quoted as saying he was among those who had passed, although he could not be reached for a statement. No grades were shown on the notices of those who were eliminated.

Under the usual custom in naming a postmaster, the three who receive the highest grades among the group of applicants are given ratings and any one of the three is then considered eligible for appointment. Recommendation from among the three is made to the president by the congressman from the district in which the postoffice is located. Ordinarily

Three troops were bunched closely for the next two places, troop 25, Lake Providence, amassing 140 points for fourth place, and troops 29 and 34 of Monroe, with 135 points each, tied for fifth place.

Approximately 325 scouts and 100 visitors and scout officials attended the event, which was declared to be one of the most successful in the history of the council.

The day's program was begun at 11 a. m. with drilling and inspection. Winners of these features were:

BANK COMMITTEE OKEHS PLANS TO AID SMALL FIRMS

Day In Washington Brings More Talk Concerning Silver

WASHINGTON, April 28. — (AP) — Federal reserve loans to give small businesses the financial help they cannot get from other sources were approved today by the senate banking committee.

The bill approved would allow about $280,000,000 to be used in that manner. Officials have said they expected such direct loan by the federal reserve to businesses unable to obtain loans from the regular channels.

Such direct loans, however, would be in unusual cases. Most of the loans would be made through regular banking channels with these banks bearing 20 per cent of the risk and the federal reserve the remainder. The loans would be for five years.

Thus, in a round-about way, the government would extent to small industries the same aid already given farmers, railroads, banks and various other forms of national activity through the several emergency and permanent lending agencies that have been set up.

One idea back of the plan is that it will supply business with the funds necessary to stimulate additional employment. Only yesterday, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said the tendency was turning toward the idea of getting more labor out of men rather than that of getting more men to labor.

The day also brought more talk about silver. At the White House it was said the president would like to

YOUNG RUSSIANS TO GET WAR TRAINING

MOSCOW, April 28.—(AP)—The vanguard of Soviet Russia's youth, 5,000,000 strong, comprising the membership of the Young Communist league, was ordered today to undergo three months of intensive training in the rudiments of military and aviation technique and physical culture.

Following the three months' course, the youths will be given an examination.

The league is a junior branch of the Communist party with members between the ages of 16 and 24 of both sexes.

The order for the training, which becomes another phase of militory preparedness, was taken by the central committee of the league in combination with the central council of labor unions, the civil society for aviation and chemical defense, the Red Cross and the supreme council of physical culture.

The movement was described as "of immense political and defensive importance."

Details Show How System Works To Advantage Of Favored Ones

Amazing Profits Revealed By Man Inadvertently Given Contract

When the legislative probe reaches the vitals of the Louisiana highway commission, it will touch a system of "fixing" jobs for favored contractors so complicated and possessing so many ramifications that it clearly took an expert in devious and crooked methods to perfect it.

In a former article it was shown how an apparently unimportant item in the specifications which most of the bidders could not possibly consider in their calculations was the means of giving the successful bidder, who clearly had information concerning it in advance, immense profits.

This was only one of the ways the racketeers in the highway commission adopted to toss wasted dollars into the laps of favored contractors. The others will be treated and examples afforded, in due time. This article will deal with the case of a "fixed job" that flickered. In spite of everything that could be done to prevent it, the job fell into the hands of an honest man. He is said to have been literally thunder-struck at the profits arising from one feature of the contract.

Incidentally, one half mile of shellroad is said to have cost the taxpayers upwards of $32,000 without the cost of furnishing and laying the shells. Considered in connection with Huey Long's boast that concrete roads in the state system had an average cost of $25,000 per mile, these figures are illuminating.

The contract referred to was a shell road job at Sorrento, in the lower end of the state. Probably to the surprise and chagrin of whoever in the highway commission was responsible for the letting of the job, a contractor named Hoffman is said to have bid surprisingly low on shells and had to be given the contract.

One item in the specifications was known as the "overhaul," that is to say the hauling of dirt from the source of supply to the place where it is laid. This item called for overhaul of 10,000 yards.

The contractor, being a shell man and knowing little about the hauling and laying of dirt, is said to have sent for other contractors experienced in that line and offered to sub-contract the overhaul, at the price which the state paid him. This was 5 cents per yard. Other contractors had bid 1 1-2 cents per yard for the same item.

Allelo & Maggio were the sub-contractors. They saw at once that the sub-contract was a gold mine and promptly accepted the offer of the contractor.

"Only," said Sam Maggio, one of the partners, "it was so patent that the job had been fixed for someone else and had unintentionally fallen into other hands, that my partner and I insisted on paying the contractor 10 per cent of the contract. Mr. Hoffman couldn't understand it. That was evidently something entirely new to him.

"Ten thousand yards of overhaul at 5 cents isn't much, but 390,000 yards of haulage at the same price is. And that is precisely what the sub-contract amounted in that respect. We laid the dirt at 29 cents

True Tabloid Tales

The Louisiana Highway Commission is spoofing either the public or the courts. Its financial statement for the first three months of 1934, filed with the state auditor, shows that the condition of its exchequer is all that could be desired. Yet, in defending a suit brought by the city of New Orleans for $175,000, due March 31, its attorneys claimed that the commission hasn't a thin dime and that its revenues are just sufficient to pay the "current, necessary and usual expenses" of the highway body.

Looks funny! The commission reported for the first three months of this year receipts of $4,818,961.49 and expenditures of $3,578,914.99, leaving a balance on April 1 of $1,240,046.50. Its general fund, which pays "current, necessary and usual expenses," received $3,505,315.98 and expended $2,312,196.00, according to the commission's own figures. In fact, the general fund was so fat that it was able to lend $931,626.94 to the bond fund of highway fund No. 2, the Hammond-Chef Menteur route. In the first quarter of 1934, the highway body got $3,291,798.57 from the sale of motor licenses alone.

It is certainly queer that a body which was fairly wallowing in money on April 1 should be a financial cripple, hardly able to make its own way, at this time. But, here is something queerer still. If the highway commission pleads poverty to escape its honest debts, how can it reconcile that stand with its decision to retire several million dollars of highway bonds several years before their maturity, to enrich certain speculators who bought around seventy and will cash in at one hundred?

The city of New Orleans won its first suit against the highway commission in the supreme court last Monday. But, the chances are that it will have to sue again every settlement day. Meanwhile, what do the farmers think of their chances for constitutionally pledged secondary roads, about which the police jury association of the state was so insistent a few days ago?

Let us hope that they do not think there is a shadowy possibility of Huey P. Long providing them.

California Posse Deals Death To Two Escaped Desperadoes

(By Associated Press)

Guns of the law blazed yesterday as state, federal and local police scored against forces which by kidnaping and banditry have been terrorizing the nation.

While the elusive John Dillinger and his cohorts continued to evade their pursuers, four indictments charging conspiracy to harbor Dillinger were returned by a federal grand jury at St. Paul.

A deputy sheriff reported that he wounded George (Baby Face) Nelson, Dillinger killer, in an exchange of shots near Solon Springs, Wis.

Dillinger himself was reported to have appeared at places as divergent as Binghampton, N. Y., and University avenue, St. Paul, as well as many intermediate points.

Governor White of Ohio and his daughter, Mary, were under guard at Columbus following reports of a Dillinger plot to kidnap them.

CANNON TO REACH CONFERENCE TODAY

Arrival Is Expected To Bring To Head Several Vital Issues

JACKSON, Miss., April 28.—(AP)—Rev. J. W. Perry, chairman of the episcopacy committee of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, said tonight that complaints had been filed against Bishop Hiram Boaz, of Houston, Texas.

Dr. Perry said that Bishop Boaz was being investigated by a subcommittee of the committee on episcopacy.

"The complaints," Mr. Perry said, "are based on alleged error and are not of a serious nature. You know we all make mistakes."

A member of the Texas delegation to the general conference said that the complaints against Bishop Boaz were based on charges of mal-administration. This member declined to let his name be used.

REPORT BRANDED HOAX IN ARIZONA KIDNAPING HUNT

Possemen Search Hills Vainly; Clyde Barrow Is Suspected

BISBEE, Ariz., April 28.—(AP)—A report which sent scores of possemen into the hills of the Mexican border country near Huachuca in search of June Robles of Tucson and her abductors was branded a hoax tonight by Sheriff Tom W. Voelker of Cochise county.

Sheriff Voelker sent word from White City that he was ordering discontinuance of a manhunt in which Apache Indian trackers, deputies, border patrolmen and volunteers had been sweeping through the hills for five hours.

The report that had spurred them on was a statement attributed to a negro woman that she had seen two men and a girl in a supposed stolen motor car near the Fort Huachuca military reservation.

Voelker said his investigation established that no one at Fort Huachuca or at White City, adjacent, excepting the negro woman had seen the men.

Officials said it was impossible the persons described could have been in the district without having been seen by some one else, or found by the forces which quickly surrounded the territory.

The weary possemen trooped toward home, discouraged and angry, and airplanes carried to Tucson the disappointing news to shatter the hope of six-year-old June's parents that the three-day hunt was nearing an end.

The hunt returned again to the city of Tucson, where it started.

Apache Indian trackers had augmented the possemen, who were warned that one of their quarry might be Clyde Barrow, notorious outlaw.

Just why the officers suspected Clyde Barrow in the kidnaping case was not explained.

GUM DROP POISONING CHARGE FACES YOUTH

CHARLESTON, Miss., April 28.—(AP)—Bradford J. Dye, Tallahatchie county prosecuting attorney, said today the state would seek a murder indictment against George Spencer Quinton, 17-year-old high school student, for the death of 11-year-old Margie Mae Scott, alleged victim of a poisoned candy gum drop.

The Scott child died of pneumonia, but the state charges her illness was induced by poisoning.

Quinton is being held for preliminary hearing in the county jail here. Dye said he had been informed the youth had repudiated an alleged statement about the case, slated to be reviewed by the grand jury here May 21.

"I have nothing to say about the charge," the youth said tonight in his quarters in the Tallahatchie jail.

Dye said he will attempt to show that Quinton gave Margie Mae a poisoned gum drop through one of her girl schoolmates while they were en route to the school at Charleston from the Scott home in Springhill on February 14.

Dr. Graves Is Taken To St. Louis Hospital

Dr. J. Q. Graves, prominent Monroe physician and surgeon, who has been convalescing in a Monroe hospital from an operation in which the index finger of his left hand was amputated due to an infection, left last night for St. Louis, Mo., to enter the Missouri Pacific hospital there. He was accompanied by Dr. John Snelling, his medical partner.

Dr. Graves, who is division surgeon of the Missouri Pacific railroad, is entering the railroad company's hospital at the insistence of Dr. O. B. Zeinert, chief surgeon of the Missouri Pacific.

The condition of Dr. Graves was said to have been showing rapid improvement but Dr. Zeinert believes it will be beneficial to Dr. Graves to recuperate at the St. Louis hospital.

ROGERS HAS HIS SAY

SANTA MONICA, Cal., April 28.—(Special)—Japan, you got to admire 'em, they are so ambitious, and they just got a sense of humor. Their papers took great satisfaction and glee, and screamed it in headlines: "The American fleet can't get through Panama canal in 24 hours." They never figured that the size of the fleet might have something to do with it.

Nineteen new ships have been authorized, and so, when the fleet comes back through there, and it can't get through in a day and a half, that will be a scream to Japan.

Republicans coming out pretty strong now against administration. Looks like if the Democrats don't get Dillinger they may lose this fall's election.

FORMER POLITICAL BOSS IS CHARGED IN BREMER KIDNAP

John J. McLaughlin Is Accused As 'Brains' Of Snatch Case

CHICAGO, April 28.—(AP)—An old-time political boss, John J. McLaughlin, was dubbed by the government today as the "brains" of the $200,000 Bremer kidnaping plot and with his own accuser was put away for trial at St. Paul while federal agents hunted his treasure boxes for the Bremer ransom.

"I think they're dreaming," said the 66-year-old prisoner, protesting the whirl of events that put him behind federal bars in $100,000 bond.

"Ridiculous," he exclaimed when told that his son, Jack, 17, had been seized on the floor of the board of trade. Department of justice men said they were convinced McLaughlin and his accomplices still held most of the $200,000 collected from Edward Brem-

PITTSBURGH SUFFERS NEWSPAPER WALKOUT

PITTSBURGH, April 28.—(AP)—Torn newspapers littered the streets of downtown Pittsburgh today but few were for sale on the news stands.

The cause of the scarcity was the strike of mailing room employes on the city's three newspapers—the Post-Gazette, the Sun-Telegraph and the Press.

Disregarding the orders of their national union heads, the men walked out yesterday demanding the restoration of a 10 per cent pay cut. Gathering about the offices of the Press and the Sun-Telegraph, both evening papers, strike sympathizers halted trucks, dumping the papers in the streets. Both papers suspended publication after issuing early editions.

As trucks sped away from the Post-Gazette last night, with the early editions of morning papers, men swarmed over the vehicles ripping the papers apart and flinging them to the pavement.

Strikers crashed the offices of the Post-Gazette damaging and removing mailing room equipment.

Monroe Firemen Rescue Youthful Hunters From Drifting Raft On River

This is a tale wherein two boys, carrying two guns and accompanied by two dogs on rafts were rescued on the Ouachita river by two Monroe firemen, after their craft became unmanageable.

Vincent Connely, 19, and Cortland McCoy, Monroe youths, being ardent nimrods, yesterday afternoon polished their guns and thought to hie themselves to the woodlands for game.

They embarked on a large raft, to which was tied a smaller raft, at 1:30 p. m. yesterday. They intended to cross the river near the Louisiana Training institute, at which point they pushed off from shore.

However, they misjudged the current of the stream and could not force the craft across. Consequently, they drifted in the rapid current.

After the youths had drifted several hours to a point near the Bob Benson plantation, a negro saw their plight, notified a white man who in turn called Monroe firemen.

Captain Tom Dupree and John McStravick, of the local fire department, hied themselves to the scene with a boat and brought the youths, somewhat dampened in spirit, safely back to Monroe.

Four Persons Charged With Aiding Dillinger Are Indicted

BIG HUNT IS WIDENED

'Baby Face' Nelson Reported Shot By Officer In Wisconsin

ST. PAUL, April 28.—(AP)—The government made good today its pledge that no friend of John Dillinger would go unpunished, indicting four persons charged with harboring the notorious outlaw and aiding him to escape the law.

The indictments were returned by a federal grand jury as the Dillinger hunt spread from University avenue in St. Paul and Minneapolis to Court street in Binghampton, N. Y., with flurries of excitement at Chicago, Madison, Wis., Duluth, Columbus, O., Marshfield, Wis., and other points.

Accused in the indictments were: Evelyn Fretchette, girl friend of the outlaw; Dr. Clayton May of Minneapolis; Mrs. Augusta Salt, a nurse, and Bert Green, alias Moore, reputed wife of a Dillinger gangster since slain.

In addition, several secret indictments naming a number of other persons accused of aiding Dillinger or his men were reported voted.

Dr. May and Mrs. Salt were charged with treating Dillinger for bullet wounds and caring for him for four days in Minneapolis a month ago. They have insisted Dillinger forced them to treat him at the point of a machine gun.

Miss Frechette aided Dillinger to keep ahead of pursuers for weeks, some times driving his automobile when he fled, and Mrs. Green helped her husband obtain the medical treatment for Dillinger.

Centralization of the marathon hunt centralized in the St. Paul-Minneapolis area as police received reports that George "Baby Face" Nelson was headed this way after being wounded by a deputy sheriff at Superior, Wis., and that Tommy Carroll was bound for the same destination.

Both Carroll and Nelson, gunmen and bank robbers, have been with Dillinger, John Hamilton, Homer Van Meter and other criminals in recent weeks. Nelson killed a government agent near Mercer, Wis., last Sunday, hid out for two days in an Indian's shack, and has been pursued ever since.

Impetus was given to the chase today when Governor George White of Ohio announced he had been informed gangsters were hiding out in Columbus and planning to kidnap himself and his daughter, Mary.

Authorities theorized that the Dillinger allies planned to hold the governor and his daughter prisoner and perhaps kill them unless Harry Pierpont, Charles Makley and Russell Clark were freed from the Ohio state penitentiary.

The three have been convicted, and Pierpont and Makley sentenced to die July 13, for rescuing Dillinger last October 12 from jail at Lima, O., in which delivery Sheriff Jess Sarber was killed.

A possibility that the Dillinger gang planned a reunion in St. Paul was seen when Carroll and another man, unidentified, fled the bullets of Deputy Sheriff Al Johnson at Solon Springs, Wis., and headed toward St. Paul. Sheriff Johnson believed he wounded Carroll's companion.

Authorities were convinced that Nelson either was here tonight or on his way. Nelson, five-foot gangster with a cherubic expression, was believed to have been wounded by a deputy at Superior, Wis.

Nelson and a companion were hunted here after Sheriff Hannes Rypkema of Pine county, outside the city, chased them at 80 miles an hour along a highway. A special patrol was or-

NELLY DON STYLE SHOW IS SLATED

Story Of Dress-making Industry To Be Shown At Paramount

A style show, in which the famous "Nellie Don" product of Kansas City will be featured, is to be given tonight at the Paramount theater, sponsored by the Palace show. The show will begin at 8:50 p. m. as part of the regular program of the theater, it has been announced.

The story of the Nelly Don industry is one of the interesting romances of American business.

Nelly Don stitching on a pretty apron of her own design so that she might look the neat young housewife when her husband came home from work, never dreamed that it would bring her unbelievable good fortune. At Christmas she sent aprons to her friends. An immediate demand was created. Would she consider making more aprons?

That is how she happened to approach a Kansas City department store head with a few samples one day about 16 years ago. She left elated, with what she considered an enormous order—18 dozens of aprons! This, when she was still in the first of her twenties) just graduated rfom college. She turned her attic into a miniature factory, installed two power machines and hired two helpers. In a month 216 crisp attractive aprons were ready.

Nelly Don knows that little things are big things. Sleeves must fit—even in a cotton frock or it will not be smart. She has discovered that there is a trick of achieving an expensive effect without adding it on to the cost of the dress.

The business moved out of the attic long ago, but large scale industry has not altered her personal interest in her girls. They themselves are well-groomed, prettily costumed. Since half the fun of making something lies in seeing the finished product, Nelly Don has arranged for her workers to see the completed frocks. To do this she has broken traditional factory rules by dividing them into units of 40. Each woman is trained to perform three operations. Each has the pleasure of viewing her work in the finished frock. The system works to perfection and production, instead of being diminished as one efficiency expert prophesied, has been greatly increased by the added zest within each group.

Negroes Organizing Share Wealth Groups Under Crawfish Plan

BENTON, La., April 28.—(Special)—Negroes who are organizing so-called "share-the-wealth" societies are looking to "Guvner" Long to provide the cash as soon as he "gets around to it," asserts H. Grisham, of Benton, former Shreveport railroad ticket agent, in an open letter to United States Senator Long.

"Negroes here have organized a Share-the-Wealth club and they want to be kings too," writes Grisham in his letter, a copy of which has been forwarded to the American Progress.

Reports come from several places state that negroes are actively organizing societies and are waiting for the $5,000 that has been promised by Huey when his "every man a king," plan gets to working. Reports from several north Louisiana parishes tell of some very strong resentment by citizens against the negroes' organizing and also in some instances against white men suspected of having something to do with their organization.

Refrigerator Reflects Experience Of Users

Because its use has been gradually widened since its introduction, the electric refrigerator more than most articles of home equipment reflects the experience of users, according to Harry A. St. John of St. John Electric company, local Kelvinator sales representatives.

"The first electric refrigerator was little more than an automatic ice box, where the clumsy evaporating coil supplanted the melting cake of ice to provide refrigeration. Later, as it was found that ice was desirable for drinks, the evaporators were designed to permit the freezing of a limited number of cubes.

This change was the first of a series of improvements which have continued until the modern electric refrigerator provides every conceivable type of refrigeration function. Not only does it offer a safe storage place for perishable foods and a supply of ice cubes; it also offers fast freezing of desserts, sub-freezing storage for frozen foods and extra ice supply and other services.

Mr. St. John said that the large crowds of people visiting the company's showroom recently have been extremely interested in the famous Kelvinator "four refrigerators in one" feature and the new "food filing" arrangement perfected for the 1934 models.

STEERING

on a low-priced car

CHEVROLET When you pay the price of a Knee-Action car, you naturally want genuine Knee-Action and all that goes with it. You want the new gliding ride at its best. You want the huskiest, sturdiest front-end you can buy. And, of course, you want shock-proof steering. You pay for them all—but you get them all, in the low-price field, only from Chevrolet. The reason is simple. Fully-enclosed Knee-Action wheels are costly to build—so costly that only Chevrolet, world's largest builder of cars, can afford to make the necessary huge investment in new machinery—and still keep prices among the lowest of the low. Only Chevrolet has the resources and the assured volume of sales that permit this extra production cost. Chevrolet does it because Chevrolet believes that, to KEEP ON SELLING THE MOST CARS, YOU MUST KEEP ON BUILDING THE BEST.

NELLY DON STYLE SHOW IS SLATED

Story Of Dress-making Industry To Be Shown At Paramount

A style show, in which the famous "Nellie Don" product of Kansas City will be featured, is to be given tonight at the Paramount theater, sponsored by the Palace show. The show will begin at 8:50 p. m. as part of the regular program of the theater, it has been announced.

The story of the Nelly Don industry is one of the interesting romances of American business.

Nelly Don stitching on a pretty apron of her own design so that she might look the neat young housewife when her husband came home from work, never dreamed that it would bring her unbelievable good fortune. At Christmas she sent aprons to her friends. An immediate demand was created. Would she consider making more aprons?

That is how she happened to approach a Kansas City department store head with a few samples one day about 16 years ago. She left elated, with what she considered an enormous order—18 dozens of aprons! This, when she was still in the first of her twentiesj just graduated rfom college. She turned her attic into a miniature factory, installed two power machines and hired two helpers. In a month 216 crisp attractive aprons were ready.

Nelly Don knows that little things are big things. Sleeves must fit—even in a cotton frock or it will not be smart. She has discovered that there is a trick of achieving an expensive effect without adding it on to the cost of the dress.

The business moved out of the attic long ago, but large scale industry has not altered her personal interest in her girls. They themselves are well-groomed, prettily costumed. Since half the fun of making something lies in seeing the finished product, Nelly Don has arranged for her workers to see the completed frocks. To do this she has broken traditional factory rules by dividing them into units of 40. Each woman is trained to perform three operations. Each has the pleasure of viewing her work in the finished frock. The system works to perfection and production, instead of being diminished as one efficiency expert prophesied, has been greatly increased by the added zest within each group.

Negroes Organizing Share Wealth Groups Under Crawfish Plan

BENTON, La., April 28.—(Special)—Negroes who are organizing so-called "share-the-wealth" societies are looking to "Guvner" Long to provide the cash as soon as he "gets around to it," asserts H. Grisham, of Benton, former Shreveport railroad ticket agent, in an open letter to United States Senator Long.

"Negroes here have organized a Share-the-Wealth club and they want to be kings too," writes Grisham in his letter, a copy of which has been forwarded to the American Progress.

Reports come from several places state that negroes are actively organizing societies and are waiting for the $5,000 that has been promised by Huey when his "every man a king," plan gets to working. Reports from several north Louisiana parishes tell of some very strong resentment by citizens against the negroes' organizing and also in some instances against white men suspected of having something to do with their organization.

Refrigerator Reflects Experience Of Users

Because its use has been gradually widened since its introduction, the electric refrigerator more than most articles of home equipment reflects the experience of users, according to Harry A. St. John of St. John Electric company, local Kelvinator sales representatives.

"The first electric refrigerator was little more than an automatic ice box, where the clumsy evaporating coil supplanted the melting cake of ice to provide refrigeration. Later, as it was found that ice was desirable for drinks, the evaporators were designed to permit the freezing of a limited number of cubes.

This change was the first of a series of improvements which have continued until the modern electric refrigerator provides every conceivable type of refrigeration function. Not only does it offer a safe storage place for perishable foods and a supply of ice cubes; it also offers fast freezing of desserts, sub-freeizng storage for frozen foods and extra ice supply and other services.

Mr. St. John said that the large crowds of people visiting the company's showroom recently have been extremely interested in the famous Kelvinator "four refrigerators in one" feature and the new "food filing" arrangement perfected for the 1934 models.

Spanish War Groups To Conduct Joint Meeting

A joint meeting of Thompson Wood Lee camp, Spanish-American War Veterans and the auxiliary, will be held at the camp headquarters on South Grand street Tuesday, May 1, at 8 p. m., to celebrate the 36th anniversary of "Dewey Day." Distinguished guests have been invited and a message of interest to all Spanish war veterans will be delivered, it was announced Saturday night by J. F. Block, the camp commander.

"Dewey Day" is celebrated annually by the Spanish American War Veterans on the anniversary of the great victory won by Admiral Dewey in Manila bay over the Spanish fleet. The victory marked the virtual end of the war between the United States and Spain. The Spanish naval forces were practically annihilated, with little or no loss sustained by the American ships. Spanish resistance to American arms crumpled after that episode and the war was soon brought to a close.

BASTROP, April 28.—(Special)—At a meeting Thursday in the city hall, attended by grocery and food dealers from practically every community and every ward in the parish, a Morehouse parish food and grocery code authority was elected. The code provides that the code authority shall consist of three members, one of whom shall represent the wholesalers, one the local chan store and the third member the local retailers. J. B. Higman, Jr., was named to represent the wholesalers, Jamie Collins the local chain store and Thomas Norsworthy of the J. A. Davenport store of Mer Rouge, the local retailer.

Spanish War Groups To Conduct Joint Meeting

A joint meeting of Thompson Wood Lee camp, Spanish-American War Veterans and the auxiliary, will be held at the camp headquarters on South Grand street Tuesday, May 1, at 8 p. m., to celebrate the 36th anniversary of "Dewey Day." Distinguished guests have been invited and a message of interest to all Spanish war veterans will be delivered, it was announced Saturday night by J. F. Block, the camp commander.

"Dewey Day" is celebrated annually by the Spanish American War Veterans on the anniversary of the great victory won by Admiral Dewey in Manila bay over the Spanish fleet. The victory marked the virtual end of the war between the United States and Spain. The Spanish naval forces were practically annihilated, with little or no loss sustained by the American ships. Spanish resistance to American arms crumpled after that episode and the war was soon brought to a close.

Acting On Impulse

The person who acts on impulse had better be certain that his impulses are well trained or naturally right. Some persons seem born with good impulses; some have trained their impulses to be right, while others have impulses that cannot be trusted or are downright bad.

It must be a wonderful thing to be able to know right off the bat exactly what to do in any given set of circumstances. We may well envy such persons. We cannot account for them, except perhaps that they are older, more experienced, more developed souls than the rest of us. Possibly they have been this way before. A boy who had previously done high school work would be the envy of his fellows and the admiration of his teachers if they did not know he had gone over that ground before.

Most of us have to stop and study our impulses. We do not dare trust them. We have to analyze them and think about them before we dare let one go into action. It is noticeable that the older a person becomes, who has given sincere thought to conducting himself properly, the more dependable become his impulses. He is more likely to move instinctively in the right direction than a person who has not given serious attention to sound behavior.

Experience teaches us what to do. That is one of the reasons for experience. It takes considerable time to train a soul to perfection. It may not take long to convince a man that he needs to have his soul perfect; but it does take a good deal of precept and practice to bring the soul into perfect alignment with what is good and true and noble. What is back of it all we may not know, but what is ahead we may have a fairly good idea.

The human soul is a trinity of body, mind and spirit. Without his body he would not be here; without his mind he would not know what to do with his body; without a spiritual sense he would not know how to distinguish between right and wrong. An animal has a body and a mind; he does not know the difference between right and wrong and probably never will. An animal acts on impulse, or instinct, and his impulses are purely mental.

We have known men to be like animals; they have no moral guidance; if they had spiritual sense, it was never awakened. Such men are not immoral; they were unmoral. An immoral man is one who knows better, who is more or less ashamed of himself when he goes wrong. An unmoral man has no sense of moral responsibility. He will do abominable things without any sense of humiliation. Such a man has no moral sense to be injured. He can not be himself hurt by his unrighteous behavior until he develops a moral side; neither can he get anywhere spiritually; he is simply a man-animal, or animal-man. Such a man's impulses are of the earth, earthy. They are dictated by the animal instincts of the unspiritual man.

But what of the man whose body and mind are quickened by a spiritual sense? He is constantly watching his impulses to be certain that they are in harmony with righteous principles. He knows the pitfalls that lie on either side of the straight and narrow path, and knowing them he will want to be sure that his action will not carry him off at a tangent and plunge him into the ditch.

"Which way?" is a serious matter. Training our impulses is a big job, a very important job, and a very necessary task, if we are going to get ourselves into step with harmonious orderly eternity.

SPEED IS RELATIVE

New York's first horse car, built in 1855 and representing the first type of fare-box car, has been placed in a museum to preserve the evidence of one obsolete and abandoned link in the development of city transit.

Museum visitors will find it hard to believe that the first appearance of these cars was accompanied by some misgivings and protests. It was charged that the enterprise was speculative and feared that the cars would be noisy, disturb Sunday worshipers and, because of their "extreme speed," would endanger life and limb.

More fuss was made over the inauguration of this actually slow and safe transportation service than was made by a later generation when the first trans-continental air line was opened. But humanity has become acclimatized to noise and speed.

Modernity complains more of quiet Sundays and holidays and of slow motion on the rails and roads than it does of noise and speed. Its only anxiety as regards speed is getting there in the shortest possible time with the greatest possible comfort. Millions speed from here to there and back again every day and night unmindful of the dangers involved in modern motoring, and the air lines have more business than plane facilities.

But what makes you think college professors can teach him if you haven't been able to teach him anything?

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES A. MONTAGUE

A LOOK AT SPRING

You'll find alluring little trails
And many a winding creek,
Where blossoms in the scented vales
Are playing hide and seek.
You'll find delightful hills to climb
Where timid rabbits lurk,
If you will steal a little time
From dull and futile work.

I've always meant, some far-off day,
When spring is in the air,
To pause beside a woodland way
Or wander here and there,
To listen to the thrush's voice
And hear an eager wren
Upon some tiny twig rejoice
That he is home again.

I hope to watch the dogwood spread
Its petals on the air,
Bright golden stars that overhead
Are gleaming everywhere.
To take a chipmunk by surprise,
To hear a bittern croak,
And watch a fox with furtive eyes
Peer out behind an oak.

But always I must hurry on,
Although I don't know why,
Until the afternoon is gone
And darkness dims the sky.
I've never seen these things, it's true,
But, when it's pleasant weather
Perhaps I may drop in on you
And we'll see them together.

BE REASONABLE

You cannot expect congress to adjourn while there is still unappropriated money in the treasury.

EVERYTHING IS RELATIVE

He Marries Money

By BRUCE CATTON

In "Tender Is the Night," F. Scott Fitzgerald rings the changes once more on the lost generation—the luckless Americans who were left rudderless and starless, not so much by the war itself as by the developments which accompanied and followed the war.

He tells the story of a young psychiatrist, Dr. Diver, son of a Buffalo clergyman, who lives in Europe and who manages to miss what seemed certain to become a great and distinguished career.

The immediate cause of this failure is his marriage to the daughter of a Chicago merchant prince. She has pots of money and he has none; little by little he slips into the role of rich woman's husband.

The great career that he had begun slides, slowly, slowly but surely, out of his grasp. His disintegration, almost impreceptible at first, gradually accelerates; in the end he loses both home and position, wanders back to America, and drifts steadily down the ladder to the bottom rungs.

And yet his marriage is only the surface cause of his downfall. At bottom he fails because he represents a society which carries with it the seeds of failure.

He is part of a circle of well-to-do and cultured folk; yet this circle rings softly with morbid and perverse undertones, its members are people who have got irretrievably lost, the world has moved out from under them and they can never catch up with it.

Mr. Fitzgerald tells this story well, and it is puzzling that the book should be vaguely disappointing. One feels—illogically, perhaps—that he himself is still adrift.

He's still a promising young writer; by this time he ought to be something more than that.

was $65,000,000 as against $17,000,000 a year ago.

CLEVELAND, WITH a strike of gasoline salesmen and a taxicab strike, may be compelled to "get a horse."

Steel workers strike in Birmingham, trained nurses in Chicago, automobile workers leave their jobs for assorted reasons at a time when employers might sell cars.

ALABAMA COAL mines have concluded one strike that made 21,000 idle and threatened idleness for thousands more. Could not workmen find a way to fight each other and their employers without necessarily fighting the public? If the public possessed intelligence, it would enforce some such system. Unfortunately, intelligence in its own protection seems to be one thing of which the public has none.

ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA., exhibits an alligator named "Old Ponce" that seems to have found the spring that Ponce de Leon was looking for. He is about 900 years old and was 500 years old when Florida was discovered by Ponce de Leon.

"Old Ponce" sits as quiet as Fafner, showing no sign of life until food comes. Then he is as vigorous and youthful as his youngest great-great-great alligator granson, fifty times remove. He weighs 1,200 pounds and eats 75 pounds of meat at one meal. Except for the difference in age, he is not unlike certain prosperous gentlemen that live at Palm Beach or Newport, have yachts and private cars, and imagine they really amount to something, as they eat, drink, and produce nothing.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., reports extraordinary swarms of "buffalo gnats," a name that dates back to days when there were buffaloes roaming around. The insects appear in clouds of untold hundreds of millions, reminding men of the danger of the insect domination always present.

Scores of horses and mules are reported killed by the fierce, tiny creatures that plant poison with their bite, and poison the lungs of animals that breathe them in.

THE ARKANSAS and the national department of agriculture might try fighting these dangerous creatures with airplanes, flying above them, scattering under pressure a fine rain of petroleum, enough to destroy the breathing of the buffalo gnats, not enough to hurt anything else.

Probably in future the airplane will do man's fighting against the buffalo gnats. Florida might try the rain of petroleum some time for the salt-water mosquitoes that appear in their billions. Or Standard or Gulf oil might have their laboratories experiment for the public service and increase sales.

CHARLES OUTLAW, 60 years old, with gray hair, sat down in the Texas electric chair saying: "Warden, I'm too old to die with a lie on my lips. I did not do it."

Law and the jury thought he did murder Mrs. Frank McCall, besides beating her invalid husband, who died later, her crippled mother and her small daughter.

The man may not have been too old to "die with a lie on his lips," for one who will commit a murder almost invariably will lie about it to the very end. It might have been more convincing if he had said: "I'm too old a man for society to kill without disgracing itself."

EUROPE FOND OF AMERICA'S AUTOS

DETROIT, April 28.—America has out-distanced the world in motor car design, and Europe is showing unusual enthusiasm for the newest American models, according to Byron C. Foy, president of the DeSoto Motor corporation, and secretary of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who has just returned from a month's European tour.

"Everywhere I went, tribute was paid to the Airflow DeSoto cars," Mr. Foy said. "These new models were received with great interest by European car manufacturers and stylists. Designers of European cars told me they expected many of the costly foreign cars to adopt a number of the important features of the Airflow DeSoto.

"While Europe has made remarkable strides in creating unusual streamline designs in expensive custom-built cars, the new DeSoto was the first popular-priced car that European designers had yet seen that embraced true aero-dynamic principles and also introduced revolutionary new unit body and frame construction. Just as in America, everybody wanted to ride in our new car."

Brick Store Building Is Being Constructed

FERRIDAY, La., April 28.—Workmen employed by Building Contractor W. P. Skains are making progress on the new brick store building being erected on Front street for the firm of W. Pasternack.

The building will be ready for a formal opening on June 1. It will be occupied by the firm as a variety store. The Pasternack's already own a grocery, hardware and department store here.

The new building is adjacent to the hardware store and the wall will be partially removed allowing considerable new quarters for the growing business. Work on the back walls and side walls of the new structure is well under way.

Centenary President To Preach At Bastrop Today

BASTROP, April 28.—(Special)—Dr. Pierce Cline, president of Centenary college of Shreveport, will visit Bastrop Sunday, it was announced here, and will preach at the First Methodist church at the Sunday evening service at 7:30 o'clock, occupying the pulpit of Rev. W. R. Harvell, pastor.

Dr. Cline was recently elected head of the Shreveport college and this will be his first visit to Bastrop since he became president of that institution. He is considered a splendid speaker and will have a message of interest, Rev. Harvell stated.

A special program of music has also been arranged for the Sunday evening service.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

ONE OF THE SAFEST PLACES IN THE WORLD—Next to bed, a railroad train is the safest place in the world. According to the annual report to the congress of the interstate commerce commission: "Steam railroads carried 480,717,777 passengers 16,997,426,362 miles with but 23 fatalities, or 1 for each 739,018,537 miles traveled." In other words, if a person boards a railway passenger train and travels continuously night and day at an average speed of 40 miles per hour, it would take more than 2,100 years to have traveled 739,018,537 miles. His chances of being killed in a railway accident would be once in every 2,100 years as the average span of life is about 50 years.

Lights of New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—Literata: Louis Bromfield bought a ticket to France, because, he said, he couldn't get a lick of work done in this country. . . .

Raymond Moley, who left the Brain Trust and the state department to edit Vincent Astor's magazine, "Today," still keeps up his teaching at Columbia university and Barnard college. Has five classes a week, on national problems and American politics, and confides that he'd rather teach women than men because women work harder and read more. . . .

Alexander Woollcott allows very few people to call him "Alex." And he's very sensitive about good-natured jibes at his writing style. . . . Christopher Morley, who couldn't change a flat tire, owns a large interest in that three-wheeled, stream-lined automobile which may go into production soon. . . .

It must have been scribblers' night on Broadway. Fannie Hurst, Sophie Kerr and Amelia Earhart Putnam (I think she qualifies for the profession) attended the revival of an old melodrammer, "The Drunkard." Theodore Dreiser, Dorothy Parker and Maxwell Anderson talked together during intermission of a guild play. And in the lobby of another theater a few doors away I saw Dashiell Hammett apparently in a deep study of the faces of other showgoers. An author in search of a character, perhaps. There was Conde Nast, too, who I hear has again rounded the corner where prosperity has been lurking.

Earlier in the evening, at the Algonquin, I met a young writer who was deploring the lack of enough money to ferret out some novel material about a certain Central American country. "Why don't you incorporate yourself and sell stock?" asked a veteran literary agent. "It has been done."

By whom? By Rockwell Kent, I discovered. When he came back from Alaska in 1918, or maybe it was 1919, he had no money to support himself while writing the text and doing the illustrations for "Wilderness." So he borrowed the money by incorporating and selling stock in himself. Dividends were paid from the sale of the book and any of his other work.

It was not an ordinary corporation in every respect, though. Kent was general manager of Rockwell Kent, Inc., and he received as a bonus all earnings in excess of the dividend total. It also was provided that he could buy back the stock any time he liked, and this he did in a couple of years.

So far as anyone knows, however, Kent is still a one-man corporation, and could put a thousand shares of himself on the market whenever he liked.

Jake (The Barber) Factor, Chicago victim of kidnapers, has been getting about Broadway a good deal lately—but not for amusement. He comes to New York occasionally, dons a disguise, and accompanies federal operatives on tours of the hot-spots. Nine of the twelve men in the kidnaping gang have been caught, and Factor is looking for the other three.

Tip to publicity-seekers: Current formula for crashing Gotham newspapers is to tell the reporters that you have it straight from your dear friend Mary or your old pal Doug that there'll be a Pickford-Fairbanks reconciliation. If you're a woman you can cross your knees and smile at the photographers while saying this, and you'll get your picture in the papers—as Dorothy Mackaill did. Anybody can compete, however. Even Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, has been going around declaring solemnly that a reunion is imminent.

The show must go on! Howard Thurston, the magician, received news of the death of his wife just before time for his act in a theater here. He appeared, and didn't fumble a trick. . . .

About the same time a circus aerialist at Madison Square Garden was swinging on a high trapeze just after learning that her sister, Mickey King, another aerialist, had fallen in Cincinnati and might be fatally injured.

Honor Graduates At Winnsboro Announced

WINNSBORO, April 28.—(Special)—The valedictorian of the graduating class of the Winnsboro high school for the present session has been announced as Ernest Robinson, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Robinson. His four-year average in high school has been grade "A." Panyse Wheelus will be salutatorian. There are 39 in the graduating class this year.

A large seventh grade will graduate into high school work this year. Miss Dorothy Brown will be the valedictorian of this class, while Jimmy Cash will be salutatorian. Due to an extension received from the FERA, schools will continue the full term in Franklin parish, closing some time in early June.

WILL DRILL SOON

FERRIDAY, La., April 28.—John Wright and associates of Winnfield have taken over the lease on a well at Monterey and will begin drilling operations within the near future. The well is located on the land of the Black River Lumber company. Service casings have been set and the drillers expect to drill between 3,500 and 4,000 feet.

Acting On Impulse

The person who acts on impulse had better be certain that his impulses are well trained or naturally right. Some persons seem born with good impulses; some have trained their impulses to be right, while others have impulses that cannot be trusted or are downright bad.

It must be a wonderful thing to be able to know right off the bat exactly what to do in any given set of circumstances. We may well envy such persons. We cannot account for them, except perhaps that they are older, more experienced, more developed souls than the rest of us. Possibly they have been this way before. A boy who had previously done high school work would be the envy of his fellows and the admiration of his teachers if they did not know he had gone over that ground before.

Most of us have to stop and study our impulses. We do not dare trust them. We have to analyze them and think about them before we dare let one go into action. It is noticeable that the older a person becomes, who has given sincere thought to conducting himself properly, the more dependable become his impulses. He is more likely to move instinctively in the right direction than a person who has not given serious attention to sound behavior.

Experience teaches us what to do. That is one of the reasons for experience. It takes considerable time to train a soul to perfection. It may not take long to convince a man that he needs to have his soul perfect; but it does take a good deal of precept and practice to bring the soul into perfect alignment with what is good and true and noble. What is back of it all we may not know, but what is ahead we may have a fairly good idea.

The human soul is a trinity of body, mind and spirit. Without his body he would not be here; without his mind he would not know what to do with his body; without a spiritual sense he would not know how to distinguish between right and wrong. An animal has a body and a mind; he does not know the difference between right and wrong and probably never will. An animal acts on impulse, or instinct, and his impulses are purely mental.

We have known men to be like animals; they have no moral guidance; if they had spiritual sense, it was never awakened. Such men are not immoral; they were unmoral. An immoral man is one who knows better, who is more or less ashamed of himself when he goes wrong. An unmoral man has no sense of moral responsibility. He will do abominable things without any sense of humiliation. Such a man has no moral sense to be injured. He can not be himself hurt by his unrighteous behavior until he develops a moral side; neither can he get anywhere spiritually; he is simply a man-animal, or animal-man. Such a man's impulses are of the earth, earthy. They are dictated by the animal instincts of the unspiritual man.

But what of the man whose body and mind are quickened by a spiritual sense? He is constantly watching his impulses to be certain that they are in harmony with righteous principles. He knows the pitfalls that lie on either side of the straight and narrow path, and knowing them he will want to be sure that his action will not carry him off at a tangent and plunge him into the ditch.

"Which way?" is a serious matter. Training our impulses is a big job, a very important job, and a very necessary task, if we are going to get ourselves into step with harmonious orderly eternity.

SPEED IS RELATIVE

New York's first horse car, built in 1855 and representing the first type of fare-box car, has been placed in a museum to preserve the evidence of one obsolete and abandoned link in the development of city transit.

Museum visitors will find it hard to believe that the first appearance of these cars was accompanied by some misgivings and protests. It was charged that the enterprise was speculative and feared that the cars would be noisy, disturb Sunday worshipers and, because of their "extreme speed," would endanger life and limb.

More fuss was made over the inauguration of this actually slow and safe transportation service than was made by a later generation when the first trans-continental air line was opened. But humanity has become acclimatized to noise and speed.

Modernity complains more of quiet Sundays and holidays and of slow motion on the rails and roads than it does of noise and speed. Its only anxiety as regards speed is getting there in the shortest possible time with the greatest possible comfort. Millions speed from here to there and back again every day and night unmindful of the dangers involved in modern motoring, and the air lines have more business than plane facilities.

But what makes you think college professors can teach him if you haven't been able to teach him anything?

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES A. MONTAGUE

A LOOK AT SPRING

You'll find alluring little trails
And many a winding creek,
Where blossoms in the scented vales
Are playing hide and seek.
You'll find delightful hills to climb
Where timid rabbits lurk,
If you will steal a little time
From dull and futile work.

I've always meant, some far-off day,
When spring is in the air,
To pause beside a woodland way
Or wander here and there,
To listen to the thrush's voice
And hear an eager wren
Upon some tiny twig rejoice
That he is home again.

I hope to watch the dogwood spread
Its petals on the air,
Bright golden stars that overhead
Are gleaming everywhere.
To take a chipmunk by surprise,
To hear a bittern croak,
And watch a fox with furtive eyes
Peer out behind an oak.

But always I must hurry on,
Although I don't know why,
Until the afternoon is gone
And darkness dims the sky.
I've never seen these things, it's true,
But, when it's pleasant weather
Perhaps I may drop in on you
And we'll see them together.

BE REASONABLE

You cannot expect congress to adjourn while there is still unappropriated money in the treasury.

He Marries Money

By BRUCE CATTON

In "Tender Is the Night," F. Scott Fitzgerald rings the changes once more on the lost generation—the luckless Americans who were left rudderless and starless, not so much by the war itself as by the developments which accompanied and followed the war.

He tells the story of a young psychiatrist, Dr. Diver, son of a Buffalo clergyman, who lives in Europe and who manages to miss what seemed certain to become a great and distinguished career.

The immediate cause of this failure is his marriage to the daughter of a Chicago merchant prince. She has pots of money and he has none; little by little he slips into the role of rich woman's husband.

The great career that he had begun slides, slowly, slowly but surely, out of his grasp. His disintegration, almost impreceptible at first, gradually accelerates; in the end he loses both home and position, wanders back to America, and drifts steadily down the ladder to the bottom rungs.

And yet his marriage is only the surface cause of his downfall. At bottom he fails because he represents a society which carries with it the seeds of failure.

He is part of a circle of well-to-do and cultured folk; yet this circle rings softly with morbid and perverse undertones, its members are people who have got irretrievably lost, the world has moved out from under them and they can never catch up with it.

Mr. Fitzgerald tells this story well, and it is puzzling that the book should be vaguely disappointing. One feels—illogically, perhaps—that he himself is still adrift.

He's still a promising young writer; by this time he ought to be something more than that.

TODAY

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

was $65,000,000 as against $17,000,000 a year ago.

CLEVELAND, WITH a strike of gasoline salesmen and a taxicab strike, may be compelled to "get a horse."

Steel workers strike in Birmingham, trained nurses in Chicago, automobile workers leave their jobs for assorted reasons at a time when employers might sell cars.

ALABAMA COAL mines have concluded one strike that made 21,000 idle and threatened idleness for thousands more. Could not workmen find a way to fight each other and their employers without necessarily fighting the public? If the public possessed intelligence, it would enforce some such system. Unfortunately, intelligence in its own protection seems to be one thing of which the public has none.

ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA., exhibits an alligator named "Old Ponce" that seems to have found the spring that Ponce de Leon was looking for. He is about 900 years old and was 500 years old when Florida was discovered by Ponce de Leon.

"Old Ponce" sits as quiet as Fafner, showing no sign of life until food comes. Then he is as vigorous and youthful as his youngest great-great-great alligator granson, fifty times remove. He weighs 1,200 pounds and eats 75 pounds of meat at one meal. Except for the difference in age, he is not unlike certain prosperous gentlemen that live at Palm Beach or Newport, have yachts and private cars, and imagine they really amount to something, as they eat, drink, and produce nothing.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., reports extraordinary swarms of "buffalo gnats," a name that dates back to days when there were buffaloes roaming around. The insects appear in clouds of untold hundreds of millions, reminding men of the danger of the insect domination always present.

Scores of horses and mules are reported killed by the fierce, tiny creatures that plant poison with their bite, and poison the lungs of animals that breathe them in.

THE ARKANSAS and the national department of agriculture might try fighting these dangerous creatures with airplanes, flying above them, scattering under pressure a fine rain of petroleum, enough to destroy the breathing of the buffalo gnats, not enough to hurt anything else.

Probably in future the airplane will do man's fighting against the buffalo gnats. Florida might try the rain of petroleum some time for the salt-water mosquitoes that appear in their billions. Or Standard or Gulf oil might have their laboratories experiment for the public service and increase sales.

CHARLES OUTLAW, 60 years old, with gray hair, sat down in the Texas electric chair saying: "Warden, I'm too old to die with a lie on my lips. I did not do it."

Law and the jury thought he did murder Mrs. Frank McCall, besides beating her invalid husband, who died later, her crippled mother and her small daughter.

The man may not have been too old to "die with a lie on his lips," for one who will commit a murder almost invariably will lie about it to the very end. It might have been more convincing if he had said: "I'm too old a man for society to kill without disgracing itself."

EUROPE FOND OF AMERICA'S AUTOS

DETROIT, April 28.—America has out-distanced the world in motor car design, and Europe is showing unusual enthusiasm for the newest American models, according to Byron C. Foy, president of the DeSoto Motor corporation, and secretary of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who has just returned from a month's European tour.

"Everywhere I went, tribute was paid to the Airflow DeSoto cars," Mr. Foy said. "These new models were received with great interest by European car manufacturers and stylists. Designers of European cars told me they expected many of the costly foreign cars to adopt a number of the important features of the Airflow DeSoto.

"While Europe has made remarkable strides in creating unusual streamline designs in expensive custom-built cars, the new DeSoto was the first popular-priced car that European designers had yet seen that embraced true aero-dynamic principles and also introduced revolutionary new unit body and frame construction. Just as in America, everybody wanted to ride in our new car."

Brick Store Building Is Being Constructed

FERRIDAY, La., April 28.—Workmen employed by Building Contractor W. P. Skains are making progress on the new brick store building being erected on Front street for the firm of W. Pasternack.

The building will be ready for a formal opening on June 1. It will be occupied by the firm as a variety store. The Pasternack's already own a grocery, hardware and department store here.

The new building is adjacent to the hardware store and the wall will be partially removed allowing considerable new quarters for the growing business. Work on the back walls and side walls of the new structure is well under way.

Centenary President To Preach At Bastrop Today

BASTROP, April 28.—(Special)—Dr. Pierce Cline, president of Centenary college of Shreveport, will visit Bastrop Sunday, it was announced here, and will preach at the First Methodist church at the Sunday evening service at 7:30 o'clock, occupying the pulpit of Rev. W. R. Harvell, pastor.

Dr. Cline was recently elected head of the Shreveport college and this will be his first visit to Bastrop since he became president of that institution. He is considered a splendid speaker and will have a message of interest, Rev. Harvell stated.

A special program of music has also been arranged for the Sunday evening service.

A survey of Washington university undergraduate reading tastes disclosed a preference for mystery and detective stories.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

ONE OF THE SAFEST PLACES IN THE WORLD—Next to bed, a railroad train is the safest place in the world. According to the annual report to the congress of the interstate commerce commission: "Steam railroads carried 480,717,777 passengers 16,997,426,362 miles with but 23 fatalities, or 1 for each 739,018,537 miles traveled." In other words, if a person boards a railway passenger train and travels continuously night and day at an average speed of 40 miles per hour, it would take more than 2,100 years to have traveled 739,018,537 miles. His chances of being killed in a railway accident would be once in every 2,100 years as the average span of life is about 50 years.

Lights of New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—Literata: Louis Bromfield bought a ticket to France, because, he said, he couldn't get a lick of work done in this country. . . .

Raymond Moley, who left the Brain Trust and the state department to edit Vincent Astor's magazine, "Today," still keeps up his teaching at Columbia university and Barnard college. Has five classes a week, on national problems and American politics, and confides that he'd rather teach women than men because women work harder and read more. . . .

Alexander Woollcott allows very few people to call him "Alex." And he's very sensitive about good-natured jibes at his writing style. . . . Christopher Morley, who couldn't change a flat tire, owns a large interest in that three-wheeled, stream-lined automobile which may go into production soon. . . .

It must have been scribblers' night on Broadway. Fannie Hurst, Sophie Kerr and Amelia Earhart Putnam (I think she qualifies for the profession) attended the revival of an old melodrammer, "The Drunkard." Theodore Dreiser, Dorothy Parker and Maxwell Anderson talked together during intermission of a guild play. And in the lobby of another theater a few doors away I saw Dashiell Hammett apparently in a deep study of the faces of other showgoers. An author in search of a character, perhaps. There was Conde Nast, too, who I hear has again rounded the corner where prosperity has been lurking.

Earlier in the evening, at the Algonquin, I met a young writer who was deploring the lack of enough money to ferret out some novel material about a certain Central American country. "Why don't you incorporate yourself and sell stock?" asked a veteran literary agent. "It has been done."

By whom? By Rockwell Kent, I discovered. When he came back from Alaska in 1918, or maybe it was 1919, he had no money to support himself while writing the text and doing the illustrations for "Wilderness." So he borrowed the money by incorporating and selling stock in himself. Dividends were paid from the sale of the book and any of his other work.

It was not an ordinary corporation in every respect, though. Kent was general manager of Rockwell Kent, Inc., and he received as a bonus all earnings in excess of the dividend total. It also was provided that he could buy back the stock any time he liked, and this he did in a couple of years.

So far as anyone knows, however, Kent is still a one-man corporation, and could put a thousand shares of himself on the market whenever he liked.

Jake (The Barber) Factor, Chicago victim of kidnapers, has been getting about Broadway a good deal lately—but not for amusement. He comes to New York occasionally, dons a disguise, and accompanies federal operatives on tours of the hot-spots. Nine of the twelve men in the kidnaping gang have been caught, and Factor is looking for the other three.

Tip to publicity-seekers: Current formula for crashing Gotham newspapers is to tell the reporters that you have it straight from your dear friend Mary or your old pal Doug that there'll be a Pickford-Fairbanks reconciliation. If you're a woman you can cross your knees and smile at the photographers while saying this, and you'll get your picture in the papers—as Dorothy Mackaill did. Anybody can compete, however. Even Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, has been going around declaring solemnly that a reunion is imminent.

The show must go on! Howard Thurston, the magician, received news of the death of his wife just before time for his act in a theater here. He appeared, and didn't fumble a trick. . . .

About the same time a circus aerialist at Madison Square Garden was swinging on a high trapeze just after learning that her sister, Mickey King, another aerialist, had fallen in Cincinnati and might be fatally injured.

Honor Graduates At Winnsboro Announced

WINNSBORO, April 28.—(Special)—The valedictorian of the graduating class of the Winnsboro high school for the present session has been announced as Ernest Robinson, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Robinson. His four-year average in high school has been grade "A." Panyse Wheelus will be salutatorian. There are 39 in the graduating class this year.

A large seventh grade will graduate into high school work this year. Miss Dorothy Brown will be the valedictorian of this class, while Jimmy Cash will be salutatorian. Due to an extension received from the FERA, schools will continue the full term in Franklin parish, closing some time in early June.

WILL DRILL SOON

FERRIDAY, La., April 28.—John Wright and associates of Winnfield have taken over the lease on a well at Monterey and will begin drilling operations within the near future. The well is located on the land of the Black River Lumber company. Service casings have been set and the drillers expect to drill between 3,500 and 4,000 feet.

PROGRESS SHOWN ON COTTON MOVE

Allotments Under Bankhead Act Being Made, Wallace Says

WASHINGTON, April 28. — (AP) — Secretary Wallace said today the farm administration is making rapid progress in the determination of county and individual allotments of cotton production under the Bankhead cotton act.

"It is important that we move as rapidly as possible in fixing the allotments of counties and individual producers," Wallace said in a statement.

"There is a great amount of work to be done in developing the most equitable arrangement of allocating the fixed quota of 10,000,000 bales among the more than 1,000 cotton producing counties.

"There is, however, sufficient flexibility in the bill so that every eligible cotton producer should receive an allotment that will permit him to produce an amount of cotton in line with approximately a 35 per cent reduction of his five-year average production."

The secretary said his antipathy to the principle of compulsory by the department and the treasury department as effectively and efficiently as possible," he said. "Unfortunately, some have interpreted my expressed skepticism of the necessity for adopting the principle embodied in the legislation as meaning that it will not be properly administered.

Tallulah

The Wednesday club was delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. N. T. Holt with Miss Jessica Green, Miss Katherine Ward, Mrs. W. J. Ward, Mrs. J. H. Devine and Mrs. W. L. Rountree as additional guests. The reception rooms were especially attractive with a profusion of lovely spring flowers. The bridge games resulted in Mrs. J. A. The two circles of the Presbyterian auxiliary met at the church with a good attendance. Several new members were added to the roll. Mrs. R. K. Boney presided and conducted the devotional. A program on Christian Education was given under the direction of Mrs. J. S. Agee. Rev. H. N. Alexander was an appreciated visitor.

The American Legion auxiliary held the April meeting in the Tallulah Book club building with Mrs. R. T. Campbell presiding. A program on child welfare was presented with papers by Mrs. Charles Coltharp and Mrs. W. G. Goza. Mrs. R. K. Boney read "Paul Revere's Ride." The organization in cooperation with the local health unit is doing some very constructive work along the lines of child welfare, sponsors the newly organized troop of girl scouts and will assist in the observance of Confederate Memorial day, May 26.

Dr. T. G. Gillespie, of Jackson, Miss., president of Belhaven college, occupied the pulpit at the Presbyterian church here last Sunday morning and preached an inspiring sermon on Christian Education.

Mrs. J. K. Post entertained her circle of the Baptist Missionary society at her home. There were eight members and three visitors present. Mrs. H. B. Day conducted the Bible study lesson which was followed by the social period when refreshments were served.

There was a large attendance. Mrs. N. T. Holt presided and Mrs. Colvin Todd read the scripture lesson from First Peter. Talks on "The United Thank Offering" were made by Mrs. W. C. Starrett and Mrs. George Webb. A report on the Northern Convocation of the woman's auxiliary, recently held in St. Joseph, was given by Mrs. Holt. A vocal solo, "Mighty Lak a Rose" was sung by Mrs. W. L. Rountree. At the conclusion of the program a social hour was enjoyed.

The Eveready Circle of the Methodist Missionary society met with Mrs. W. H. Hale at her home in Patterson addition. Following the devotional and business session a social hour was enjoyed. Rev. C. K. Smith presented several matters for the consideration of the circle. It was decided to continue the support of the Tallulah mission under Rev. Alton McCready. Mrs. E. S. Moberley directed entertainment features which consisted of several garden contests. The hostess, assisted by Mrs. M. D. Hale served a delicious frozen dessert and cookies.

FIGURES IN TAMMANY SHAKEUP

These men are figuring in the shakeup of New York's Tammany Hall, which was climaxed by the ousting of John F. Curry as leader. James J. Hines (right), and Edward J. Ahearn (upper left), dominate the confused scene. Hines, though he voted for Curry, was accused by the latter of leading the revolt. Ahearn is a candidate for Curry's post. Grover Whalen (lower left) was mentioned as a possible member of a committee which may be named to take over the leadership. (Associated Press Photos)

SENATE ADOPTS AIR MAIL BILL

Amended Black-McKellar Measure Now Goes To The House

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(AP)—The senate today passed the Black-McKellar air mail bill, as amended, to continue temporary contracts, let by competitive bidding, until assumption of regulatory authority and determination of rate scheduled by the interstate commerce commission.

It passed without a record vote.

The bill now goes to the house where a slightly different measure is pending.

Under the measure a presidential commission of seven would be appointed with $100,000 fund to make a broad aviation survey and recommend legislation to the next congress.

Reorganization of large aviation concerns would be forced by provisions barring intercorporate regulationships and rendering ineligible for transporting mail any company having an officer who had entered into "unlawful combination" to prevent competitive bidding heretofore.

One of the chief targets of criticism by opponents of the measure was that it did not specify who should decide whether an aviation company official had been guilty of such collusion.

Stomach Pains?
Stomach Worms Cause Stubborn Troubles Often Mistaken for Digestive Disorders

Round-Worms are by no means a disease of children only. Adults, too, frequently are so afflicted, but the symptoms are mistaken to mean Indigestion, Acid, Ulcers, etc. This is because everyone eats raw fruits, cabbage, carrots, lettuce and spinach regularly. The tiny, invisible eggs of disgusting intestinal worms are carried into your system on these foods, no matter how careful you are. They may also be caught from flies and pets. Grown to full size (up to 15 inches), they travel back and forth in intestines and stomach.

Tangling themselves into large knots, they cause Constipation, mysterious abdominal discomfort and sometimes Appendicitis, Diarrhoea, Rectal Itching, Vomiting, Nausea, Dizziness, Loss of Weight, Anaemia, and Stomach Trouble are other signs. Such conditions, due to Round-Worms, should end as soon as these disgusting, health-destroying parasites have been expelled by Jayne's Vermifuge—famous for 104 years as a quick way to rid old and young of this mysterious trouble which ruins digestion and appetite, saps your strength and vitality, makes blood thin and weak, causes nervousness, sleeplessness, and bad dreams. A trial of Jayne's Vermifuge may end these chronic troubles by ending the real cause — worms! When worms go, watch pep, appetite, weight and strength return as stomach troubles vanish. Jayne's famous Vermifuge and Tonics can be had at any drug store. The only pleasant Vermifuge.

er after his abduction Jan. 17, and they believed the son had the keys to his safety deposit boxes.

Jack, an employe of a grain company, was held without charge, and federal operatives who took him in were reported to have discovered a sheaf of papers secreted in the lining of his hat.

Two others, their identities closely guarded by federal agents were taken into custody late today in the same case.

The man who sent the officers after McLaughlin was William E. Vidler, a gambler, in whose pockets federal agents found $2.665 of the $5 and $10 Bremer ransom bills. He, too, was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Edwin K. Walker and put away under the prohibitive $100.000 bond for a removal hearing on May 7, when witnesses from St. Paul must appear against both men.

"We have information," said Prosecutor Leo J. Hassenauer, "that McLaughlin was the 'brains' of the kidnaping plot, even if he himself did not personally participate in the kidnaping. We believe that he may still have in his possession the unfound portion of the ransom.

The warrants specifally charged conspiracy to possess portions of the ransom, offenses in violation of the "Lindbergh" federal kidnaping act.

McLaughlin was already under $25,000 bond on a federal indictment charging him with a part in the $250,000 Chicago mail robbery of Dec. 6, 1932, when Edward Bremer, the St. Paul banker, was snatched last Jan. 17 by kidnapers who nabbed him in his own car as he stopped for a traffic light. Bremer was a captive 23 days before the tremendous ransom was collected and the band turned him loose near Rochester, Minn.

by the coroner, Moseley was drunk and other men in the party had announced they planned to put him to bed in another room with the babies while they continued to dance. McGee was said to have objected to having Moseley placed in the room for fear that he might injure some of the children.

Ignoring McGee's objections, the men were said to have continued their efforts to put Moseley to bed and when McGee sought to prevent this by force he was severely beaten, it was asserted. During the struggle the shot was fired and Moseley was struck. One person was quoted as saying that McGee fired at a man named Pace, a brother-in-law of Moseley, and that he shot Moseley by mistake.

Juvenile Protective Association To Meet

Rev. E. F. Hayward, pastor of Grace Episcopal church and chairman of the Juvenile Protective association of Ouachita parish, has called a meeting of the association, composed of about 30 members, for 4 o'clock Monday afternoon at the parish courthouse.

Business of the meeting is expected to include a report by E. L. Wright, juvenile officer for Ouachita parish, on the meeting of the State Conference for Social Betterment at Baton Rouge on April 20 and 21. Mr. Wright was one of the social workers who attended the meeting.

At the meeting in Baton Rouge it was decided not to stress the entire children's code at the coming session of the legislature, but to put forth special effort to obtain enactment of legislation authorizing the establishment of a state welfare board and of parish welfare boards. Twelve organizations in the state are said to have given this program their endorsement.

AT LOCAL THEATERS

AT THE PARAMOUNT—Out-doing all previous sensational combinations of stars and spectacles, First National's long awaited international musical drama, "Wonder Bar," is being shown at the Paramount theater today and tomorrow.

Kay Francis plays the leading feminine role opposite Al Jolson, who portrays the proprietor of the "Wonder Bar." Ricardo Cortez and Dolores Del Rio have the coveted parts of the two dancers, while Dick Powell and Henry Kolker have the roles of the American composer-orchestra leader and the husband of Kay Francis, respectively. Hal LeRoy, the sensational Broadway player, plays the role of himself in a thrilling dance sequence.

Guy Kibbee and Hugh Herbert play the two American tourists with Ruth Donnelly and Louise Fazenda as their wives, in important comedy and character roles. Robert Barrat has the part of the army officer, who drives his auto over a cliff and unconsciously covers up a murder. Fifi D'Orsay and Merna Kennedy will be seen as the two flirtatious hostesses in the fashionable Parisian night club.

As "Wunderbar," this unique musical proved an international sensation a few years ago. It played for months in all of Europe's capitals and was brought to this country as a stage starring vehicle for Al Jolson. He took it on the road after a season in New York and no production since "The Miracle" has been so generally and so generously welcomed. A few months ago First National acquired the screen rights to the production and proceeded at once to make extensive plans for its presentation as the greatest film spectacle of modern times.

AT THE CAPITOL—"Jimmy the Gent," the Warner Bros. picture, starring James Cagney, will be the feature attraction at the Capitol theater for a two-day run beginning today.

The picture is based on the hilarious comedy romance by Laird Doyle and Ray Nazarro and concerns two crooks who are both trying to expose the other to impress the girl they both love.

The story unveils in humorous vein the unique racket of heir chasing, that is, the hunting down of lost heirs in order to inherit unclaimed estates. And the two notorious heir chasers, James Cagney and Alan Dinehart, do not stop at bribing persons to act as heirs and coaching them into perjured testimony.

Bette Davis is the feminine lead opposite Cagney and the girl over whom Cagney and Dinehart do battle for her love. Alice White, Allen Jenkins and Mayo Methot are said to supply much of the comedy element although the fast talking and fast acting Jimmy always turns up with his share.

The romantic angle is not neglected and is supplied by two couples, Cagney and Miss Davis and Allen Jenkins and Miss White. Other prominent members of the cast include Arthur Hohl, Phillip Reed, Hobart Cavanaugh, Mayo Methot, Ralfe Harolde, Philip Faversham and Nora Lane.

The screen play is by Betram Milhauser and the direction by Michael Curtiz.

Oklahoma Sterilization Statute May Be Tested

M'ALESTER, Okla., April 28.—(AP)—Preliminary steps in a test of the Oklahoma sterilization law as it applies to habitual criminals were begun here today when the district court appointed a guardian for George W. Winkler, 28-year-old third termer.

Warden Sam Brown said Winkler volunteered for the court action.

If upheld, the sterilization statute, amended recently to include habitual criminals as well as certain lunatics, would affect 225 Oklahoma convicts.

Wisner

Marked interest is being shown in the work of the Wisner Methodist church as evidenced by the large attendance to all of the meetings of the various departments, according to announcement of the church officers. Full classes attended the Sunday school. Out of an enrollment of 120 the report showed 100 present. Rev. C. B. White, the pastor, preached to a large congregation at the eleven o'clock service. The choir has been aided by a violin quartette, Mrs. W. H. Walls, Miss Gladys Roach, Wm. Sheffield, and S. E. Pool.

The World club, an organization composed of junior boys and girls, met at seven o'clock Tuesday with between 25 and 30 members present, in addition to a number of visitors. The purpose of this club is to develop a spirit of friendship toward the children of other lands by the study of the people of these foreign countries. One of the projects of the club last quarter was to write picture postcards to children in Holland, France and Japan. These cards were sent to the boards of education of these three countries with the request that the cards be given to children who were studying English, who were asked to write a card or letter in reply. Already about a dozen cards and letters have been received from Holland. One of the letters stated that a large broadcasting station in Holland informed listeners in that country that they had a number of friendship cards from Wisner, La., and that these cards would be sent to any child who wrote in for them. This station not only distributed the cards, but also translated the letters which came back to Wisner from these little Dutch children, as it happened that none of them understood English. As a result of this correspondence mutual understanding and friendships have been developed.

After the study period little Misses Dorothy Roach and Arlette Pool with their violins, accompanied by Erelene Cannon at the piano, led the club in their song service. Following this the entire club attended the evening worship in the church, which included an illustrated lecture on Korea.

The Epworth League is led by Miss Juanita Funderburk, as president. This organization sent more delegates to the young people's conference at Mansfield last year, than any other Epworth League in this state, in competition with First church Monroe, Shreveport and New Orleans.

The following members of the Baptist Woman's Missionary union of the Wisner church attended the district missionary meeting held in Ferriday: Mrs. T. L. Owen, Mrs. J. N. Risher, Mrs. Jno. S. Barr, Mrs. J. G. Mitchell, Mrs. A. D. Edwards, Mrs. G. K. Laughlin, Mrs. E. L. Hoggatt; Mrs. T. J. Dunn, Mrs. E. Asa Kiper, Mrs. E. J. Shipp, Jr.; Miss Doris Brown; Mrs. Leo. Bondurant, Mrs. Alvin Moore, Mrs. A. M. Watson, Mrs. F. M. Chapman, Mrs. P. R. Hegwood, Mrs. A. McDonald, and Mrs. J. A. Turner.

Several members of the Methodist Women's Missionary society attended the missionary zone meeting held in Mangham. They are as follows: Mrs. C. B. White, Mrs. A. Baer, Mrs. W. A. Mecom, Mrs. S. E. Pool, Mrs. D. R. Knight, Mrs. Geo. S. Cotton, Mrs. R. B. Belcher, Miss Juanita Funderburk, and Mrs. J. T. Jacobs.

OHIO GOVERNOR IS THREATENED

whom the pair had kidnaped had been released a few hours before.

At Tucson a heavily armed posse was standing by awaiting results of negotiations between the family of kidnaped 6-year-old June Robles and her abductors. Two men arrested at Phoenix in connection with the crime were released.

Police guns which barked in a country cemetery near Gower, Mo., brought fatal wounds to Frank Wood, 41, after he had received a package of Dummy extortion money which a note had directed be diverted to the grave yard.

Randol Eugene Norvell, a "lifer" who escaped from the southern Illinois penitentiary yesterday, was being hunted on both sides of the Mississippi river near Chester, Ill. A report that he had been cornered was denied by the prison warden.

Charged with possessing part of the $200,000 Edward Bremer ransom, John J. (Boss) McLaughlin, former political power, was arrested on a suppressed warrant at Chicago.

Two women and a man faced a police lineup at New York, charged with abducting two 15-year-old girls. The girls were held as juvenile delinquents.

A man identified as Isidor "Ip" Careagno was shot to death in front of a Harlem store at New York. He was a former aide to Joey Rao, at one time accused of "bossing" the Welfare Island Prison where he was confined.

Armed guards were stationed at a Philadelphia hospital to prevent another gangland attempt to assassinate Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Fontaine, who was found, left for dead, in a gang hideout Thursday.

Six suspects were under arrest at Chicago in connection with the slaying of one man and critical wounding of another in a tavern holdup.

A lone bandit invaded a bank at Joliet, Ill., cooly presented a sack which he ordered to be filled up, and drove away with $250.

TWO SAN QUENTIN CONVICTS ARE KILLED

VICTORVILLE, Cal., April 28.—(AP)—Sudden death at the hands of a quick-shooting posse of desert folk ended the flight of two escaped San Quentin convicts, one of whom was characterized by authorities as second only to John Dillinger as a desperado.

In a running exchange of gunfire three miles south of this little community, death came quickly to Wanda T. Stewart, 29, and Walter H. Weyth, 40. The two had slugged their way out of San Quentin prison Thursday.

The convicts were trapped by a hastily-summoned band, composed of a deputy sheriff and three deputized civilians, as they drove toward Victorville from San Bernardino where a short while before they had released two policemen, whom they kidnaped in San Rafael and forced to accompany them on a wild ride that led through Death Valley.

Informed of the release of the two policemen at San Bernardino Deputy Sheriff R. Stanley Sneidiger, with three civilians, Lou Miller, M. N. Black and Carl McNew, drove south to meet the escaping convicts. The fugitives rode in a police car which they had taken from their kidnap victims.

An automobile with a red light loomed ahead of Sneidiger, and sped by him and his deputies. Sneidiger ordered the automobile around and gave chase. As the deputy's car gained ground the fugitives opened fire, which was returned.

After a chase of nearly a half a mile, the fugitives' car crashed into an embankment. Both the occupants were dead. None of the pursuers were injured.

ginia churchman who yesterday was exonerated of a charge of conspiring to violate the federal corrupt practices act, is expected to bring to a head several vital Episcopal issues pending before the 22nd quadrennial conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Speculation was rife in conference circles tonight regarding the effect the colorful dry crusader's presence will have on the Methodist assembly. The view was expressed in some quarters that his acquittal at the hands of a District of Columbia jury has served to deaden the movement to retire Bishop Cannon before he reaches the superannuation age, while others declared it still is a "wide open" fight which only a floor battle will settle.

Sharing interest with Bishop Cannon's arrival were proposals to elect bishops for a specific term and to reduce the number of Episcopal officers in the College of Bishops.

Bishop Cannon is scheduled to reach Jackson shortly before 6 a. m. tomorrow. He will be received by a delegation of friends.

Shortly after his arrival he will make his first public conference appearance at the Fondren Presbyterian church, where he will deliver a sermon as guest-pastor.

An outburst of applause greeted reading of a telegram from Bishop Cannon at the general session this morning informing the conference that he was en route to Jackson "to meet the responsibilities and perform the duties which are properly encumbent upon me," after being "delivered from the mouth of the Lion."

The demonstration of clapping hands was interpreted by his friends as lending support to their claims that the retirement movement was "losing cast."

Before the committee on episcopacy is the question of the number of new bishops to be elected. The 1930 conference at Dallas left the number of bishops at 16 by electing two new members to the college. Since then two bishops, W. F. McMurry, Missouri, and W. B. Beauchamp of Virginia, have died. Three others, Bishops Collins Denny, Virginia; W. A. Candler, Georgia, and H. M. DuBose, Tennessee, will be retired under the age limit.

It was unofficially reported that the episcopacy committee will recommend the election of three new bishops. Such a recommendation is expected to meet with vigorous opposition from a group led by W. P. King, Nashville, editor of the Christian Advocate, official church publication, which objects to the election of any new Episcopal officers.

With the election of new bishops the subject of much informal discussion, the names of several prominent churchmen have been frequently mentioned as potential candidates. Among these are: Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, St. Louis, Mo.; Dr. Forney Hutchinson, Baltimore conference; Dr. T. D. Ellis, South Georgia conference; Dr. J. N. R. Score, Texas; Dr. W. W. Feele, Charlotte, N. C., and Dr. J. Lloyd Decell, of Jackson.

Nominations for the bishopric are made from the floor of the conference and election is by a majority vote of the 500 lay and clerical delegates.

At the end of program, Judge W. M. Harper, president of the council, presented a loving cup to troop 31, Monroe, for the first place honors. This cup, presented annually at the rally, must be won three consecutive times before it becomes the permanent property of the troop.

J. W. Rohr, council commissioner, presented a large tent to troop 56, Tallulah, for second honors; and a troop first aid pouch was given to troop 1, Monroe, for third place.

The tent was donated by Mr. Rohr and the first aid outfit was given by the Lions club of Monroe. Mr. Rohr also "treated" the scouts and visitors to ice cream and cakes during the luncheon period.

Troops entering handicraft pieces on which they received points were: Troop 29, Monroe; troop 1, Monroe; troop 56, Tallulah; troop 51, West Monroe; troop 31, Monroe; troop 34, Monroe; troop 17, Ferriday; and troop 25, Lake Providence.

Parker McComb, Monroe, was official scorer and C. M. Mitchell, Monroe, acted as starter.

Visitors at the rally, most of whom assisted in judging the various events, included Barney Oakland, Herman Masur, Ralph Corn, Ed Barnett, Rufus Goza, Rev. M. R. Gremillion, Frank Reitzell, Philip Bernhardt, V. S. Garnett, W. I Neel, P. S. Mulhearn, all of Monroe; and Dr. P. M. Gilmer, Tallulah; and Hadley Leavell, Bastrop.

G. W. Simpson, executive of the council, was highly pleased with the results of the rally, he said, and expressed his appreciation to all who helped to make the affair a success.

FOUR DILLINGER AIDES INDICTED

dered on University avenue, connecting Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Federal and local officials urged that the Dillinger gang hunt become even more intense after the latest incidents charged to the mob, the threat against Governor White and a $6,000 robbery in a Chicago suburb, Villa Park, led by Van Meter. Those two incidents, they said, showed the outlaws intended to continue shooting and killing rather than hide out or attempt to flee the country.

Indicative of the determination of authorities to punish all persons connected with the gang, the city council of Madison, Wis., appropriated $2,000 to purchase machine guns, bullet proof vests and possibly an armored car to guard three young woman friends of Dillinger and his men. The women were arrested after the Mercer shooting, during which the outlaws in escaping Little Bohemia camp Sunday, abandoned them. Another young woman is held incommunicado in Minneapolis.

The search at Binghampton, N. Y., started after six men and three women, parked in two automobiles near a hotel, ordered drinks. The automobiles bore Wisconsin and Illinois license plates, and a witness said he saw weapons in the machine.

In Chicago, a man claiming to know Dillinger reported seeing him riding with two other men, whom he said resembled photographs of Hamilton and Van Meter, in an automobile on Washington boulevard.

Nelson was officially blamed for the killing of Government Agent W. Carter Baum when a coroner's jury at Little Bohemia resort, Wis., named him as the slayer. At Ironwood, Mich., Constable Carl Christensen of Spider lake, wounded seriously in the resort shooting, was reported to be out of danger of death.

dered on University avenue, connecting Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Federal and local officials urged that the Dillinger gang hunt become even more intense after the latest incidents charged to the mob, the threat against Governor White and a $6,000 robbery in a Chicago suburb, Villa Park, led by Van Meter. Those two incidents, they said, showed the outlaws intended to continue shooting and killing rather than hide out or attempt to flee the country.

Indicative of the determination of authorities to punish all persons connected with the gang, the city council of Madison, Wis., appropriated $2,000 to purchase machine guns, bullet proof vests and possibly an armored car to guard three young woman friends of Dillinger and his men. The women were arrested after the Mercer shooting, during which the outlaws in escaping Little Bohemia camp Sunday, abandoned them. Another young woman is held incommunicado in Minneapolis.

The search at Binghampton, N. Y., started after six men and three women, parked in two automobiles near a hotel, ordered drinks. The automobiles bore Wisconsin and Illinois license plates, and a witness said he saw weapons in the machine.

In Chicago, a man claiming to know Dillinger reported seeing him riding with two other men, whom he said resembled photographs of Hamilton and Van Meter, in an automobile on Washington boulevard.

Nelson was officially blamed for the killing of Government Agent W. Carter Baum when a coroner's jury at Little Bohemia resort, Wis., named him as the slayer. At Ironwood, Mich., Constable Carl Christensen of Spider lake, wounded seriously in the resort shooting, was reported to be out of danger of death.

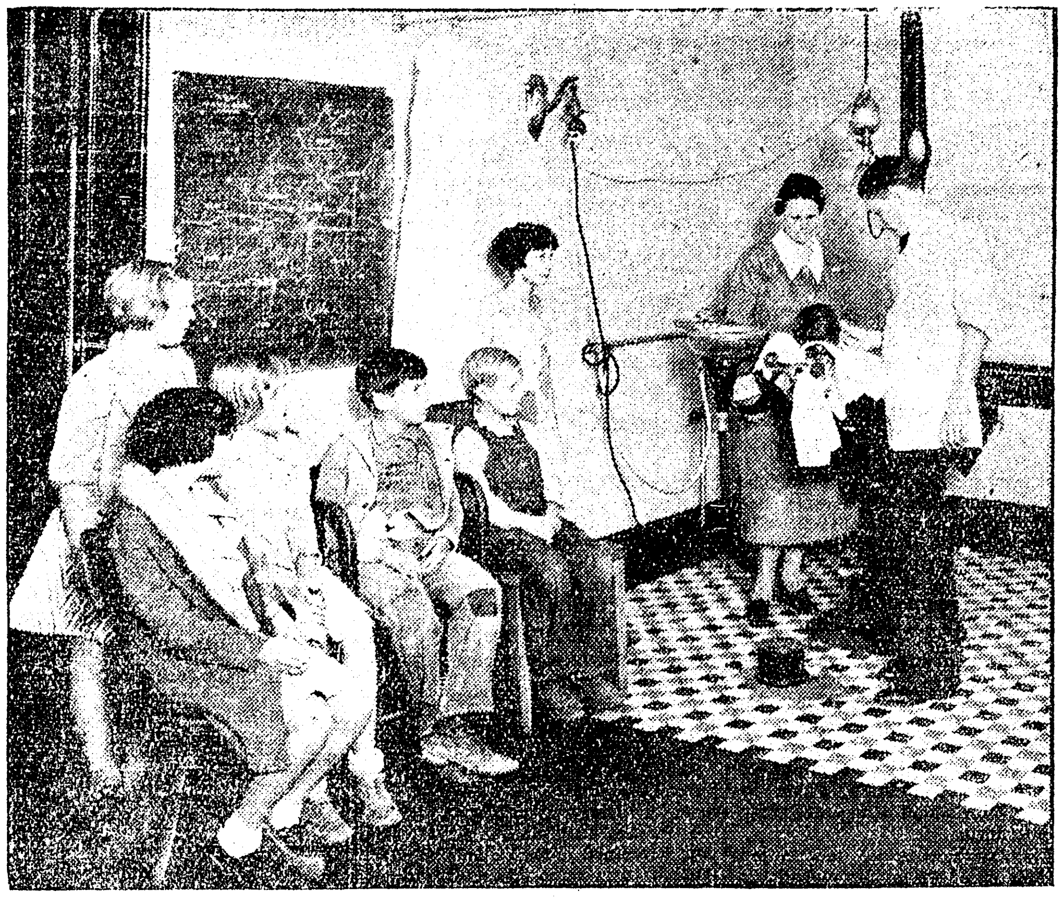
DENTAL CLINIC SPONSORED BY LIONS CLUB



The picture shows the dental clinic, at the offices of the Ouachita parish health unit, sponsored by the Monroe Lions club. The dentist is Dr. J. G. Henry. His assistant is Nurse Jane Thorstad of the health unit. One patient is in the chair. A group of them are seen in the left foreground. The clinic was one phase of the Lions club oral hygiene program, which ended April 17. It started February 1. Four hundred and thirteen school children, members of indigent Ouachita parish families, were given dental treatment without cost at the clinic, which was conducted by Dr. Henry and financed by the Lions club.

413 Poor Youngsters Are Treated At Dental Clinic

Constructive Oral Hygiene Program Sponsored By Lions Club

The most constructive program in oral hygiene ever undertaken in Ouachita parish has just been completed.

The authority for this statement is Dr. John W. Williams, director of the Ouachita parish health unit.

Financed by the Monroe Lions club, the program was carried out under the supervision of Dr. Williams. The beneficiaries were 413 indigent school children.

The program was launched February 1 and brought to a close April 17. It was made possible, according to Dr. Williams, through the generosity of:

The Lions club, which employed a dentist for full time service every forenoon on school days;

Dr. J. G. Henry, local dental surgeon employed;

Monroe dentists, who examined all school children free of cost and recorded their findings for reference at the health unit office;

School officials, who furnished transportation and saw to it that the children were at the dental clinic at the health unit on schedule.

Only the worst affected among the poorest children were accepted for treatment at the clinic, Dr. Williams explained. After their parents had made affidavits that they were financially unable to provide the children with dental care, and after these sworn statements were approved by teachers and health unit nurses knowing the circumstances of the cases, the children were accepted for free treatment, Dr. Williams stated. Every defect of the mouth was remedied before the young patients were discharged, the health unit director asserted.

Schools, with the number of children treated at each and the health unit nurse in charge, were listed as follows by Dr. Williams:

Nurse Allyene Rogers—Lida Benton, 56; Georgia Tucker, 8; Barkdull Faulk, 27; St. Matthew's, 28; Sherrouse, 21; children of pre-school age, 9; total, 149.

Nurse Pauline Tarver—Ouachita parish grammar school, 50; Fondale, 16; Sterlington, 6; Swartz, 29; Fairbanks, 7; total, 108.

Nurse Jane Thorstad—Crosley, 43; Calhoun, 22; Okaloosa, 12; Cheniere, 14; Lapine, 8; Eureka, 7; Cypress, 7; Mt. Vernon, 5; Watson, 4; Claiborne, 7; Lenville, 2; Millsaps, 4; Mitchell, 6; Ransom, 5; Drew, 6; Breard Springs, 4; total, 156.

Of the total number of children treated, 202 were boys and 211 were girls. The clinic was conducted each school day during the 54 days the health program was in progress from 9 a. m. until noon. The patients were treated at an average cost of 25 cents each to the Lions club, Dr. Williams said.

Other statistics compiled by Dr. Williams follow:

Average number of children treated per day, 9 1-2; number of baby teeth filled, 223; number of baby teeth extracted, 487; number of permanent teeth filled, 184; number of permanent teeth extracted, 101; number of sets of teeth cleaned, 224; number of children treated for trench mouth (Vincent's disease), 80.

Besides the value of the dental treatment to the children who received it, the clinic demonstrated the fact that more than 15 per cent of school children have trench mouth, Dr. Williams declared.

In this connection, he exclaimed:

"We must, as a community, insist on sterilized drinking utensils at all soda fountains, restaurants, bars and other drinking places."

Dr. Williams gave unstinted praise to the Lions club and Dr. Henry for their parts in making the clinic a success. He characterized the Lions' contribution as one of the most distinctive examples of civic service he had ever known. He lauded Dr. Henry for his professional skill, his interest in each patient and his willingness to accept a small salary for conducting the clinic.

The health unit director also commended the school officials for their assistance. There were only two principals who thought the dental treatment was not important enough to trouble about, he said. "Naturally," he observed, "their schools suffered."

The home of Major and Mrs. George T. Madison on North Washington street was the scene of a beautifully planned affair on Tuesday afternoon of last week, when the Carney chapter of the reserve officers association entertained at a tea honoring General James H. Reeves of Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga., and his accompanying officers. Picturesque garden baskets and pottery jars, overflowing with lovely boughs of weigela and blue iris were placed at vantage points throughout the reception suite and formed a colorful background for the distinguished receiving line and guests. Captain and Mrs. Leland Howard assisted Major and Mrs. Madison in receiving and introducing General James H. Reeves, Col. H. R. Richmond of New Orleans, Major Schaumberg McGehee and Captain Leonard Daniels of Shreveport, Lieut. and Mrs. Frank H. Reitzell, Lieut. and Mrs. Wm. M. Parnell and Lieut. J. E. Parrish of Monroe, to guests who called during the hours of 4 to 6. The tea table in the flower banked dining room was presided over by two charming matrons, Mrs. Fred W. Howard and Mrs. H. Flood Madison, Sr., who poured tea from handsome silver services. The table was an ode to springtime with its beautiful imported lace banquet cloth and plaque of old fashioned garden blossoms in shades of pink and blue. Slender pink and blue princess tapers burned in silver candelabra and silver and crystal salvers held luscious canapes, daintly embossed mints and cakes. Delicious moulded ices were served. The guest list included Captain and Mrs. V. H. Reitzell, Capt. and Mrs. A. C. Volk, Lieut. and Mrs Lawrence Spier, Lieut. and Mrs. J. C. Young, Lieut. Sol Snyder, Lieut. George H. Monroe dentists, who examined all school children free of cost and recorded their findings for reference at the health unit office;

School officials, who furnished transportation and saw to it that the children were at the dental clinic at the health unit on schedule.

Only the worst affected among the poorest children were accepted for treatment at the clinic, Dr. Williams explained. After their parents had made affidavits that they were financially unable to provide the children with dental care, and after these sworn statements were approved by teachers and health unit nurses knowing the circumstances of the cases, the children were accepted for free treatment, Dr. Williams stated. Every defect of the mouth was remedied before the young patients were discharged, the health unit director asserted.

Schools, with the number of children treated at each and the health unit nurse in charge, were listed as follows by Dr. Williams:

Nurse Allyene Rogers—Lida Benton, 56; Georgia Tucker, 8; Barkdull Faulk, 27; St. Matthew's, 28; Sherrouse, 21; children of pre-school age, 9; total, 149.

Nurse Pauline Tarver—Ouachita parish grammar school, 50; Fondale, 16; Sterlington, 6; Swartz, 29; Fairbanks, 7; total, 108.

Nurse Jane Thorstad—Crosley, 43; Calhoun, 22; Okaloosa, 12; Cheniere, 14; Lapine, 8; Eureka, 7; Cypress, 7; Mt. Vernon, 5; Watson, 4; Claiborne, 7; Lenville, 2; Millsaps, 4; Mitchell, 6; Ransom, 5; Drew, 6; Breard Springs, 4; total, 156.

Of the total number of children treated, 202 were boys and 211 were girls. The clinic was conducted each school day during the 54 days the health program was in progress from 9 a. m. until noon. The patients were treated at an average cost of 25 cents each to the Lions club, Dr. Williams said.

Other statistics compiled by Dr. Williams follow:

Average number of children treated per day, 9 1-2; number of baby teeth filled, 223; number of baby teeth extracted, 487; number of permanent teeth filled, 184; number of permanent teeth extracted, 101; number of sets of teeth cleaned, 224; number of children treated for trench mouth (Vincent's disease), 80.

Besides the value of the dental treatment to the children who received it, the clinic demonstrated the fact that more than 15 per cent of school children have trench mouth, Dr. Williams declared.

In this connection, he exclaimed:

"We must, as a community, insist on sterilized drinking utensils at all soda fountains, restaurants, bars and other drinking places."

Dr. Williams gave unstinted praise to the Lions club and Dr. Henry for their parts in making the clinic a success. He characterized the Lions' contribution as one of the most distinctive examples of civic service he had ever known. He lauded Dr. Henry for his professional skill, his interest in each patient and his willingness to accept a small salary for conducting the clinic.

The health unit director also commended the school officials for their assistance. There were only two principals who thought the dental treatment was not important enough to trouble about, he said. "Naturally," he observed, "their schools suffered."

For several days rumors have been current in Monroe that there will no permanent appointment of a postmaster either at Monroe or Bastrop during the present session of congress. When the World sent a message to Representative Riley J. Wilson apprising him of the rumors and asking for a statement, he replied as follows:

"Have no information on rumors referred to in your wire just received. (Signed) Riley J. Wilson, M. C."

Some persons here were of the opinion that the appointment for the Monroe postoffice might not be made until after the congressional election next fall, in which Mr. Wilson is expected to be a candidate for re-election. Since the field has been narrowed to three, however, others have expressed the opinion that nomination may be made within the next few days.

Government Economy Cry Is Certain To Be Raised

BATON ROUGE, La. April 28.—(AP)—The "government economy" cry is as sure to be raised at the approaching legislature session as the demand for "tax relief."

Insistence upon legislation aimed at one objective will be in measure linked with proposed means of achieving the other. Hewing a middle course between demanded state financial retrenchment and applications for increased state expenditures for educational, eleemosynary and other purposes will call for a fine brand of Scylla - and - Charybdis legislative steering.

Legislators in both chambers have been outlining plans for slashing state money outlays. The specific proposals for increased expenditures, with exception of the Louisiana tax reform commission's educational finance base-broadening program, are slower in being disclosed.

Formally projected state "economy" plans, exclusive of plans for local government economy, include the following objectives:

1. Abolition of the Louisiana highway commission as presently constituted, and the rescinding of the $700,000 of highway funds constitutionally allocated to the city of New Orleans.
2. Abolition of the state supervisor of public accounts office.

The highway commission retrenchment proposals have been advanced by Senator J. A. Richardson of the East Feliciana-West Feliciana district.

Senator Richardson has announced he will introduce a bill to provide for election of a single highway commissioner beginning this fall, and at congressional elections at four-year periods in the future.

He said he suggested the commissioner's election at a different time from other state officials for the purpose of reducing highway commission political patronage.

"I favor rescinding that portion of the highway bond issue amendment of 1930 which gives to New Orleans $700,000 for its streets," the senator recently asserted.

"That provision should never have been written into the organic law, but since the mistake has been made, there is nothing to do but correct it."

Senator Richardson has urged in support of his commission abolition measure that the $5,000 each salaries paid to the vice-chairman and secretary of the commission, in addition to perquisites, could be saved by designation of a lone highway commissioner.

Abolition of the supervisors office, designed to save an estimated $100,000 a year, has been recommended by the Louisiana tax reform commission, which will lay an economy-and-tax relief program before the legislature.

Making it clear that it did "not mean to insinuate or charge any wrong-doing in the conduct of the department," the tax reform commission in its third report urged abandonment of the office, and transfer of its auditing duties to the state auditor and its special tax-gathering functions to the state treasurer.

The report said that the "cost of collecting, inspecting and auditing taxes by the office is altogether disproportionate to the amount of taxes collected," citing the malt tax, the rate for which it asserted, was 40 per cent.

The commission also urged the fact that the supervisors office is exempt from public records act scrutiny as further reason for abolition.

Miss Gilfoil Becomes Bride Of Mr. Burgoyne In Lovely Ceremony At Grace Church

An event of outstanding social interest in this section of the state was the marriage of Miss Alice Gilfoil, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Gilfoil of Lake Providence, and Dr. Bert R. Burgoyne, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Burgoyne of Monroe, Thursday morning, April the twenty-sixth, at Grace Episcopal church.

The church was beautifully decorated with pastel tinted blossoms and the altar banked in white blossoms and luxuriant ferns. Cathedral tapers in tall white candelabrum burned in the background.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was radiantly beautiful in the picturesque bridal gown of mousseline de soie, worn by her mother on her wedding day. The skirt with a long court train, was adorned with medallions of rare old lace. Lace insets also adorned the bodice with its becoming high neckline. The veil of illusion was held to the head with a spray of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of carnations, baby breath and sweet peas. Her sister, Mrs. John Field Montgomery of Bastrop, was matron of honor, and wore a gown of yellow net over satin with short sleeves and long gloves of the same color. Her hat was of blue rough straw with yellow band and her shoes were blue satin. She carried an arm bouquet of yellow snap dragons and blue larkspur, tied with blue ribbon.

Dr. Burgoyne had as his best man Dr. G. S. Hopkins and as ushers Dr. G. D. Williams and Robert N. Amacker. Mrs. F. D. Adkisson presided at the organ and rendered a pre-nuptial concert. "Because" was sung by Mr. F. D. Adkisson, Jr., The bridal party entered the church to the Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin," during the plighting of their troth, "A Venetian Love Song" and "Oh, Promise Me" were softly rendered. Following the benediction Mr. Adkisson sang "Oh, Perfect Love." Mendelssohn's wedding march was used as the recessional.

Following the ceremony the popular young couple left on a motor trip to New Orleans and the gulf coast, after which they will reside in Lake Providence.

May Day Will Be Symbolized At City School

May day will be symbolized on the campus of the Central Grammar school Tuesday afternoon when the pageant, "Children of the Nations at Play," will be presented at 2 o'clock. Three hundred happy children, in colorful costumes, will dance and frolic, reminiscent of the days of long ago in merry old England when May day found every one, rich and poor, young and old, dancing around the May pole on the village green.

The traditional ceremony crowning the May Queen will be enacted and her court will be chosen from among the school children.

Indians, the first Americans, will be numbered among the "children of the nation" forming the colorful pageant with Holland, Russia, China, Mexico, Bohemia, France and England represented.

May day has long been the occasion for put out of door festivities among the children of this country merry making and in England where the custom of dancing around the May pole originated.

Interest Of Many Friends Is Centered In Marriage Of Miss Hodge And Mr. Rhymes

A wedding characterized by much beauty of detail and one in which the interest of many friends is centered was that of Miss Sarah Hodge, lovely young daughter of Mrs. Clara Hodge of Calhoun and Mr. Ray Rhymes at the First Methodist church, of Calhoun, Thursday evening, April the twenty-fifth, at 5 o'clock. Reverend L. Clayton, pastor, officiated in the presence of relatives and a few close friends.

The church was beautifully decorated with southern smilax and pink Radiance roses with myriad cathedral tapers gleaming in the background.

Mr. Jerry Hodge, at the organ, rendered a pre-nuptial concert and also accompanied Miss Dottie Hodge of Rayville who sang beautifully, Cadman's "At Dawning" and "Until." Mrs. J. E. Bryan sang in splendid voice "O Promise Me." Mr. Hodge also played Mendelssohn' wedding march as the wedding party wended their way down the aisle.

Mrs. Glen Backshies, matron of honor, wore a flesh colored crepe frock with accessories of white with an arm bouquet of pink Pernet roses and maiden hair fern.

Anne Bryan Boonman, lovely little flower girl, wore a pale pink frock of batiste and carried a Marie Antoinette basket filled with rose petals. Messrs. Pete Peevy and James Bryan were the ushers and Mr. Newton Knowles acted in capacity of best man.

The bride who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Irwin Hodge, wore a smart knitted suit of white silk with all accessories of white and an exquisite corsage of bride's roses and valely lilies.

The bride, a great favorite in younger social circles, is a graduate of the Calhoun high school and attended L. P. I. at Ruston. She is a member of Kappa Delta sorority and for the past year has been a member of the Ouachita parish school faculty.

Mr. Rhymes is a graduate of the Monroe high school and attended Sewanee university and the University of Louisiana. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He is affiliated with the United Gas company in this city where he will reside with his bride at 1000 St. John street following a brief honeymoon.

Miss Biedenharn's Debut On Eastern Concert Stage Judged Success By Critics

Monroe friends and admirers of Miss Emmy Lou Biedenharn who claim her for their very own, even though the ocean divided for a time, are following closely her career as a singer. Of special interest to these friends was her recent debut on the concert stage of New York and Boston.

Even the severest of eastern critics have been most generous with their praise of Miss Biedenharn's remarkable voice. For instance the New York Times, following her appearance, said:

"Miss Biedenharn possesses an immense voice; big not only in actual volume but in the quality of tone, which suggests vastness to the imagination. With proper direction it might join that small family which has been able to project authentically the cosmic utterance of an Erda, for in addition to its power the tone's centre retains even in the brilliant edging of the upper register the dark, fateful quality of the true contralto. It is rich, true and round. One would be proclaiming perhaps a second Schumann-Heink, for the instrument itself is remarkable. The first phrase of death's answer in "Tod und das Madchen," was perfectly sung. The whole recital, in short, revealed material that might develop gorgeously."

Miss Biedenharn's appearance in Boston elicted the following criticism appearing in the Boston Evening Transcript:

Miss Emy-Lou Biedenharn, contralto, singing at Jordan Hall last evening showed intelligence and taste in her choice of songs as well as in her manner of singing them. The program at first glance may have looked a bit heavy, with only two lieder to lighten it before the diverting last group, but Miss Biedenharn's capacity for variety of interpretation soon dispelled such misgivings.

The program included four songs of Schubert, "Gruppe aus dem Tartarus," "Der Wanderer an den Mond," "Der Tod und das madchen," "Die Allmacht," all of them dramatic rather than lyric lieder; Beethoven's ever-impressive "In questa tomba oscura," and Gluck's "Divinities du Styx" from "Alceste." Throughout this half of the program Miss Biedenharn's interpretive accompaniments were foremost. Her voice is strictly German contralto; full, rich. The utmost control was exerted in Schubert's difficult songs, "Death and the Maiden" and "The Almighty," both sung with fine dramatic intent, with fervor, yet with directness and restraint. In these songs one was impressed with the particularly appealing quality of Miss Biedenharn's powerful high notes.

The third group comprised three lieder by the poet-composer, Peter Cornelius, and two by Arnold Mandelssohn, son of Felix's nephew. The beautiful lieder of Cornelius are always welcome on a program, and the two songs of Mendelssohn, "Die liebende Mutter" and "Aus dem Nachtlied Zarathustras," though of less substantial musicl significance than those of his elder contemporary, are worth the hearing. Perhaps most representative of Miss Biedenharn's capabilities was her singing of "Ein Ton," a song whose beauty can easily be killed even when a rarely warm voice sings it. To a simple weaving accompaniment the poem of Cornelius is sung entirely on one note, B, and the charm of the song depends on intonation, phrasing, purity of tone. The singer left no musical possibility unrealized, for her understanding and feeling penetrated the heart of its poetic meaning.

A touch of lightness was added in the concluding group of trivialities, which included John Alden Carpenter's "When I Bring You Colored Toys" and Carl Engel's "The Sea-Shell." In the final 17th century "Joyous Easter Hymn" her powerful voice brought a sense of vitality and strength and displayed all the merits of her musicianly interpretation. Mr. Coenraad V. Bos supported Miss Biedenharn with the usual clear insight and musical discernment which he shows on the concert stage.

Garden Club Makes Plans For Festival

Mrs. Glen Backshies, matron of honor, wore a flesh colored crepe frock with accessories of white with an arm bouquet of pink Pernet roses and maiden hair fern.

Anne Bryan Boonman, lovely little flower girl, wore a pale pink frock of batiste and carried a Marie Antoinette basket filled with rose petals. Messrs. Pete Peevy and James Bryan were the ushers and Mr. Newton Knowles acted in capacity of best man.

The bride who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Irwin Hodge, wore a smart knitted suit of white silk with all accessories of white and an exquisite corsage of bride's roses and valely lilies.

The bride, a great favorite in younger social circles, is a graduate of the Calhoun high school and attended L. P. I. at Ruston. She is a member of Kappa Delta sorority and for the past year has been a member of the Ouachita parish school faculty.

Mr. Rhymes is a graduate of the Monroe high school and attended Sewanee university and the University of Louisiana. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He is affiliated with the United Gas company in this city where he will reside with his bride at 1000 St. John street following a brief honeymoon.

Miss Biedenharn's Debut On Eastern Concert Stage Judged Success By Critics

Monroe friends and admirers of Miss Emmy Lou Biedenharn who claim her for their very own, even though the ocean divided for a time, are following closely her career as a singer. Of special interest to these friends was her recent debut on the concert stage of New York and Boston.

Even the severest of eastern critics have been most generous with their praise of Miss Biedenharn's remarkable voice. For instance the New York Times, following her appearance, said:

"Miss Biedenharn possesses an immense voice; big not only in actual volume but in the quality of tone, which suggests vastness to the imagination. With proper direction it might join that small family which has been able to project authentically the cosmic utterance of an Erda, for in addition to its power the tone's centre retains even in the brilliant edging of the upper register the dark, fateful quality of the true contralto. It is rich, true and round. One would be proclaiming perhaps a second Schumann-Heink, for the instrument itself is remarkable. The first phrase of death's answer in "Tod und das Madchen," was perfectly sung. The whole recital, in short, revealed material that might develop gorgeously."

Miss Biedenharn's appearance in Boston elicted the following criticism appearing in the Boston Evening Transcript:

Miss Emy-Lou Biedenharn, contralto, singing at Jordan Hall last evening showed intelligence and taste in her choice of songs as well as in her manner of singing them. The program at first glance may have looked a bit heavy, with only two lieder to lighten it before the diverting last group, but Miss Biedenharn's capacity for variety of interpretation soon dispelled such misgivings.

The program included four songs of Schubert, "Gruppe aus dem Tartarus," "Der Wanderer an den Mond," "Der Tod und das madchen," "Die Allmacht," all of them dramatic rather than lyric lieder; Beethoven's ever-impressive "In questa tomba oscura," and Gluck's "Divinities du Styx" from "Alceste." Throughout this half of the program Miss Biedenharn's interpretive accompaniments were foremost. Her voice is strictly German contralto; full, rich. The utmost control was exerted in Schubert's difficult songs, "Death and the Maiden" and "The Almighty," both sung with fine dramatic intent, with fervor, yet with directness and restraint. In these songs one was impressed with the particularly appealing quality of Miss Biedenharn's powerful high notes.

The third group comprised three lieder by the poet-composer, Peter Cornelius, and two by Arnold Mandelssohn, son of Felix's nephew. The beautiful lieder of Cornelius are always welcome on a program, and the two songs of Mendelssohn, "Die liebende Mutter" and "Aus dem Nachtlied Zarathustras," though of less substantial musicl significance than those of his elder contemporary, are worth the hearing. Perhaps most representative of Miss Biedenharn's capabilities was her singing of "Ein Ton," a song whose beauty can easily be killed even when a rarely warm voice sings it. To a simple weaving accompaniment the poem of Cornelius is sung entirely on one note, B, and the charm of the song depends on intonation, phrasing, purity of tone. The singer left no musical possibility unrealized, for her understanding and feeling penetrated the heart of its poetic meaning.

A touch of lightness was added in the concluding group of trivialities, which included John Alden Carpenter's "When I Bring You Colored Toys" and Carl Engel's "The Sea-Shell." In the final 17th century "Joyous Easter Hymn" her powerful voice brought a sense of vitality and strength and displayed all the merits of her musicianly interpretation. Mr. Coenraad V. Bos supported Miss Biedenharn with the usual clear insight and musical discernment which he shows on the concert stage.

Garden Club Makes Plans For Festival

Members of the Monroe Garden club who are now working for the success of their main project of the year, the annual spring flower show, will definitely decide upon the date at their meeting Friday afternoon at the country home of Mrs. T. C. Rowland.

Elaborate plans are underway for this beautiful event to be staged at the American Legion home.

Exhibit—Mrs. Elmer Richards, Mrs. A. M. Wills, Mrs. W. R. Hatchell, Mrs. Roy Hale, Miss Lucylle Godwin, Mrs. W. H. Banister, Mrs. B. B. McClendon, Mrs. F. T. Smith, Mrs. Bernard Biedenharn, Mrs. Malcolm Biedenharn.

Registration committee—Mrs. McQuiller, Mrs. Henry Haas, Mrs. A. R. Holloway. Each committee of the classes will register their entries.

Hospitality—Mrs. H. R. Speed, Mrs. Albert Horuff, Mrs. Fred Williamson, Mrs. J. A. Biedenharn, Mrs. J. H. Trousdale, Fenski Terzia, Mrs. Victor Barringer, Mrs. C. M. Flowers, Mrs. E. M. Hudson.

Schedule committee—Mrs. C. M. Flower, chairman; Mrs. C. E. Faulk and Mrs. Henry Bernstein submitted the classifications that appeared in the paper several weeks ago.

Miss Elbertine Moore, talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Moore of West Monroe, won first place in the music contest sponsored by the Federated Music club of Louisiana at the meeting in Shreveport recently. Miss Moore, the pupil of Miss Mamie Ola Heard, is a brilliant pianist despite her youth and short period of study. Miss Heard has every reason to feel proud of this pupil who reflected so much credit on the training received.

Mrs. George Lowery Talks On Subject Of Great Interest To Members Of Sketch Club

The period between the War of 1812 and the beginning of the Civil war was a time of profound social change in America. It was a time of legal defination and interpretation of the new plan of government, of new, independent development of the land, of practical working out of certain theories of the relations of man to man enunciated with convictions in the Declaration of Independence, but never before put in actual practice. The first manifest effect was a falling off in the dignity and graces of life among the political and intellectual leaders of the community. At the time of the revolution there was a continuous line of cities along the Atlantic coast from Charleston to Boston, in constant communication with the mother country, and where the visitors of position from England or France was recieved, in modest surroundings, yet with a certain state, dignity and courtesy that he has been accustomed to, and the people of importance whom he met were personally in touch with the circle which he had known at home. He accepted them as his equals, and to the great leaders of the Revolution he looked upon with respect and reverence. But the generation that succeeded Washington and Franklin, Jefferson and Hamilton, saw no statesmen that equalled them either in capacity or in culture.

Immigration into the country diminished greatly at the beginning of the nineteenth century, but the colonist increased in numbers and soon outgrew the narrow strip along the sea coast, they struck out into the interior, where they found a soil more fertile than the rocky New England coast, unlimited in quantity and took what land he could employ, and the hardships of frontier life soon destroyed any pride of birth.

This development of the west, it has been necessary to recall in order to explain the changing condition of art, for the same democratic influence applied to the remote parts of New England and later to the cities themselves. In spite of the increasing wealth and population of the country, most of the painters who succeeded Tarvis and Sully grew up in surroundings much harder than the early colonial society that West and Copley, Stuart and Aliston knew.

In the rise of a native school of art no one figured more prominent than Chester Harding. Harding was born in Conway, Mass., in 1792; but when he was fourteen his father moved with his family into Madison county, New York, then an unbroken wilderness. The boy was of splendid physique, over six feet three in height, and was renowned as an axe-man and in all of the labor of the pioneer. When he came of age he attempted various pursuits, including chair-making, peddling and keeping a tavern, he finally became so involved in debt that to avoid his creditors he left his wife and child and struck out through the woods for the Allegheny river down which he floated on a raft to Pittsburg. There he earned a little money as a house painter and went back for his family, returning with them to Pittsburg where he set up as a sign painter and worked away for a time until he saw some painting of a painter by the name of Nelson and he was filled with amazement. He engaged Nelson to paint his wife and himself, though the ungenerous artist would not show him how the painting was done or give him any information; yet his ambition was aroused and getting a board and with his sign painters material he attempted a portrait of his wife, the moment he saw a likeness he became frantic with delight, he could not think of anything else, and from that time on his sign painting work was neglected. He painted ten or twelve portraits in which a likeness to the original could be detected, then started for Paris, Kentucky where he boldly announced himself as a portrait painter, he painted nearly a hundred portraits at twenty-five dollars each.

In the rise of a native school of art no one was a more contributing factor than Francis Alexander. Like Harding he was a portrait painter. His early career in many respects resembled that of Harding. Born in Windham county, Conn., in 1800, he worked on his father's farm in the summer and went to school in the winter until he was eighteen. His first attempt at painting was fish that amazed himself and his friends, he then began the painting of birds and flowers, he decided to abandon farming and take up sign painting, he learned from a book peddler that New York was the chief home of the arts and he went there to study, his funds exhausted he returned to the farm, where he again began the painting of landscapes filled with cows, sheep, hogs and chickens. He received praise from his friends for his clever work, but none was interested in buying this class of work. Realizing that only in portrait painting he could obtain money so he painted a head on a lid from an old chest, he painted others that were pronounced excellent likenesses, his fame had now spread, paying patrons now appeared and at five dollars for a full length portrait he soon earned about sixty dollars, he again started for New York, with the intention of learning portrait painting.

Alvin Fisher was mainly a portrait painter, though he worked in many departments. Like Harding and Alexander he was brought up where he could see no works of art of any degree of merit, and worked as a clerk in a country store until he was eighteen, he spent a great deal of his leisure time decorating the margins of the account books with drawings. He decided to be an artist, and finding a place with an excellent ornamental painter from whom he acquired a style that took many years to shake off.

John Neagle, one of America's early native artists, should be credited to Philadelphia though he was born in Boston in 1799, his parents being there on a visit. Through his fortunate surroundings he saw more of art than Harding. Alexander and Fisher, and also began to paint earlier, he had some instructions from Sully in miniature portrait work, and like the rest of early artists took up the work of portrait painting. He had some excellent instruction from Bass Otis, beside and from Otis he received about all of the regular teaching he ever had.

These men whose lives have been outlined in this paper were representative of the times and the best of its artist. Their work set the standard by which all others were judged. While most of the early native artists were mainly portrait painters, there was one landscapist, Thomas Daughty and should be mentioned as one of the founders of the native school.

Henry Inmans portrait work was in the same class a sthat of Harding's. His portraits had more likeness than character in the heads, he had a wider scope than the others; he painted miniatures, pastoral scenes,

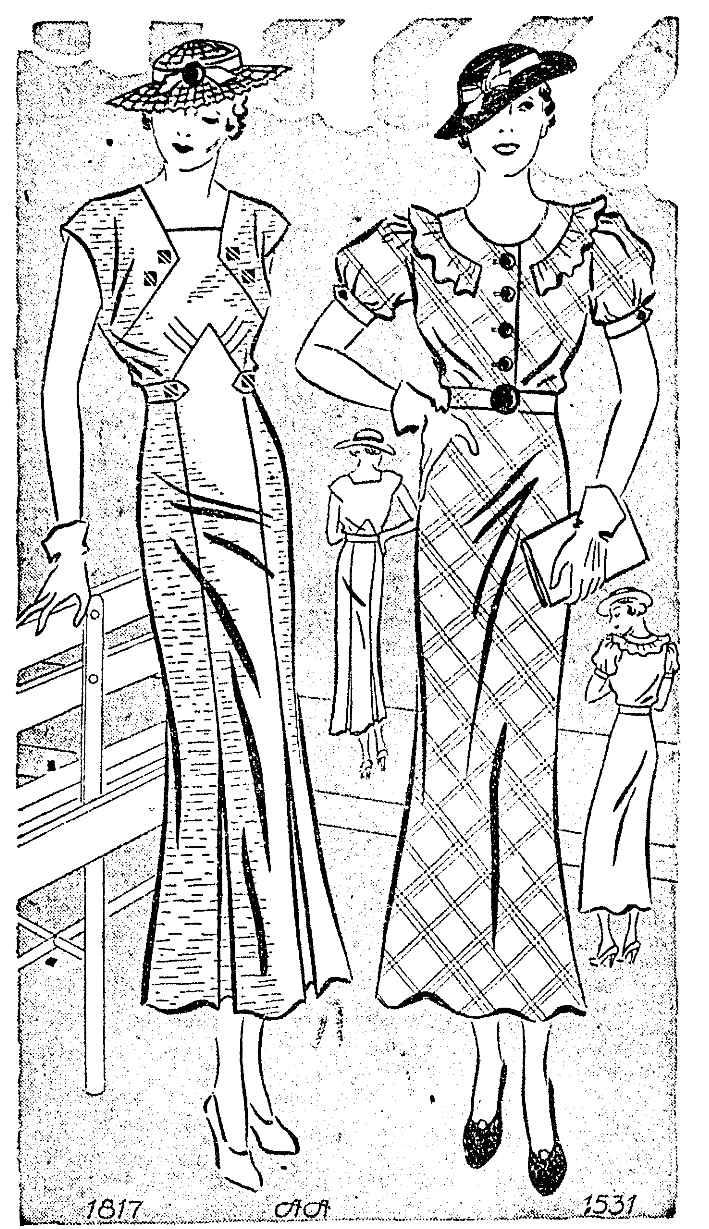
News-Star--World Pattern



There is going to be a lot of havoc wrought among the male contingent this summer. "Why?" you ask, "Now, why?" Because women look sweeter, fresher, younger and altogether more heart-breakingly lovely in cottons than in any other material—and cottons are "in," in a big way. If you want to do your share of damage, why not start out with either one, or both, of the pretty frocks pictured above—you can collect a lot of scalps with their expert assistance. For the gown at the left you might select a pretty ribbed novelty or one of those delectable new seersuckers, and for the one at the right you can't do better than that sterling standby, gingham, that ever since Maud Muller's day has slain the men on sight—or the still more deadly cross-barred organdie of whose boa constrictor charms any well informed grandmother will be glad to enlighten you. The gown at the left is chic and a wee bit tailored looking, the one at the right is adorably demure—and just as chic. You couldn't possibly decide between them—so it must be both.

Symphony Of The Open Road Is Now Heard

If you hearken to the siren symphony of the country road today let us make a few suggestions for that lunch basket without which a trip into the woods would never be complete.

The thing to consider when starting out to prepare a motor lunch is what the different people at the party would really like to see when they are very hungry and far from home.

The average woman knows that the average man's heart would fall if he saw nothing but pretty little cutouts of bread filled with caviar or anchovy paste when the lunch box was opened. Even a sandwich of sliced chicken breast with a protecting leaf of lettuce might look too ladylike to suit him. Have the chicken sandwiches, but also have some of ham and roast beef, some on white bread and some on dark. If you ask a man what sandwiches he likes best, he is pretty sure to name roast beef and ham.

Other good meat fillings are equal quantities of chopped chicken and ham, chopped veal and ham, boiled tongue with mustard between thin slices of bread.

Bermuda onions on buttered rye bread should have a place in any motor lunch, especially if the commissary is to include beer. And that is one thing a party has a right to expect this season. Slices of American or Swiss cheese on thinly buttered bread should also be bracketed with beer, even if the lunch box is to include more fancy cheese mixtures.

Mix a litlte paprika into the cheese, as this develops the flavor. Add a dash of salt, mix thoroughly, then add some finely chopped walnuts. Spread on thin slices of lightly buttered brown or rye bread.

Cream cheese and currant jelly is an appetizing combination. A tablespoon or more of jelly may be mixed into a square of cheese or each may be spread on matching slices, then put together.

Other things that go well with cream cheese are chopped celery, chopped olives, watercress, shredded pineapple, chopped dates and even chopped raw spinach. The celery should be crisp and tender.

Take a hint from what repeal has done to make fish fashionable and have some of your sandwiches filled with seafood. Use caviar, by all means, if you can afford it, also anchovy paste. And remember that not for nothing does the lowly herring occupy a crowning place on the fanciest canapes these days.

Freshly cooked or canned shrimps mixed with an equal amount of butter, pounded together and pressed through a sieve makes an amazingly good spread.

Although salt and pepper shakers are the most indispensable of all lunch accessories there are other things whose absence can create havoc a few hundred miles from home. One of these is the mustard jar. There is no telling how much mustard a man may want on his sandwiches until you see him taking the slices apart and spreading it on meat or even on cheese. Olives (drain off the juice before starting), celery hearts, radishes, tomatoes, raisins, dates and lemons can go a long way toward making a motor lunch an event to be remembered with joy.

One of the most enthusiastic meetings of the year was enjoyed by St. Matthews P.-T. A. Friday afternoon, with twenty-five members present.

Meeting opened with prayer by president, Mrs. John Guerriero.

Reports on state convention were made by Mrs. John Guerriero and Mrs. John Williamson, delegates, also Mrs. Lizzie Morris and Mrs. L. A. Breard.

Plans were completed for Junior-Senior banquet to be held at Frances hotel on May 24. Parents of juniors and seniors are urged to attend this very inspiring function. Mrs. Paul Keller and Mrs. J. W. Spohrer were appointed to make reservations for parents, and those wishing to attend should advise one of these ladies at an early date. Senior and junior parents are invited to help with decorations and should get in communication with Mrs. A. M. Guerriero, chairman of arrangements.

Cafeteria report made by Miss Catherine McStravick.

Sister Magdalen gave a short and interesting talk on the adolescent child covering lecture to our high school pupils by Father Cassidy of Spring Hill college. A banquet of roses will be presented to Mrs. Gram Breard as a message of sympathy in her present illness.

New officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. John Guerriero; vice president, Mrs. Paul Keller; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. John Williamson. A rising vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Stanley Hodges and Mrs. E. T. Kenny, retiring vice president and secretary.

Fifth and junior grades were awarded attendance banners and incidently a library book for each room.

Youth Week To Be Observed In Monroe With A Special Program Arranged Each Eay

National Youth week reminds us that this world advances on the feet of children. Youth must be served today as never before and with this thought in view, next week will be dedicated to the boys and girls of America with a special program arranged for each day. Most fathers use endless ingenuity in seeing that a child gets his quota of vitamins and sun light and a safe yard in which to play and then he will not concern himself over the companionship he could give his son if he so desired.

There is nothing in all the world that can be given a boy as a substitute for the companionship of his father and with this thought in view National Youth week has been inaugurated. In Monroe a program has been arranged for the entire week in which the parents take a very prominent part. Mayor Arnold Bernstein will tell you something about this program and the part you play in it, in a radio address this morning. This talk will pave the way for a full week of pleasure for boys and girls of Monroe. As a glorious climax to the week's program we might suggest a picnic to some beautiful spot in the country where a camp fire can be built and the children permitted to assist in cooking the food over the glowing coals. We venture to say it will be a day long remembered if father is present and forgets for the time being that he is grown-up . . . if he is a boy again just for the day, the children will be radiantly happy.

Echoes from the Louisiana Parent-Teacher association meeting in this city recently, still trickle through our days like sweet music. We are reminded at this particular time of a story one of the speakers told at the banquet. It seems that James had a constant companion—a dog named Paddy. One night Paddy died and James' mother told him in the morning as gently as possible of the dog's death. To her surprise and great relief, James made no demonstration of grief and left the house in his customary happy frame of mind. In a few minutes he returned, grief stricken over his dog's death. His mother said, "Why James I tried to tell you when you were eating breakfast that Paddy died." Imagine her chagrin when James said, "I thought you said Daddy died."

If National Youth Week observance does nothing more than make the small boy realize that his father's companionship is quite necessary in his life, it will have accomplished something quite worth while.

Central grammar school P.-T. A. met Wednesday afternoon with the president presiding. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved; Mrs. Meek gave a report on finances. Interesting messages from the recent P.-T. A. convention were brought by Mrs. Caveness and Mrs. Haas. Miss Frieda Mickel spoke in the interest of a Junior Shakespeare club.

The report of the nominating committee, Mrs. Johnston, chairman; named the following officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. L. S. Meek; vice president, Mrs. R. R. Gatlin; treasurer, Mrs. S. Lyles, secretary Mrs. W. E. McCoy. The retiring president was given a rising vote of appreciation for the splendid work accomplished during the past year.

Mothers present were counted and the award was given to the 2-B grade. Adjournment followed.

Members of the Calhoun Study club were delightfully entertained by the home economic students under the expert supervision of Miss Rupert Perry, home economic instructor.

The purpose of this meeting was the election of officers for the new year which will begin in October. Those elected were president, Mrs. J. B. Brown; vice president, Mrs. B. N. Pipes; secretary, Mrs. J. L. Heath Jr.; reporter, Mrs. Sidney Stewart; historian, Mrs. Boyce Humble.

After the business session was closed Mrs. G. S. Manning gave an instructive survey of the "Life and Works of Herman Milville," Mrs. J. E. Bryan read an interesting resume of the popular novel, "Moby Dick" by Herman Milville.

During the social hour Miss Perry assisted by several of the home economic students served a very delicious confectionary course to Mrs. Jake Humble, Mrs. C. Z. Roberts, Mrs. J. E. Bryan, Mrs. J. B. Brown, Mrs. G. S. Manning, Mrs. Boyce Humble, Mrs. B. N. Pipes, Mrs. Annie Henry, Miss Addie Fuller, Mrs. H. D. Hale, Mrs. P. K. Wright, Mrs. J. L. Brown, Mrs. Sidney Stewart, Mrs. J. L. Because women look sweeter, fresher, younger and altogether more heart-breakingly lovely in cottons than in any other material—and cottons are "in," in a big way. If you want to do your share of damage, why not start out with either one, or both, of the pretty frocks pictured above—you can collect a lot of scalps with their expert assistance. For the gown at the left you might select a pretty ribbed novelty or one of those delectable new seersuckers, and for the one at the right you can't do better than that sterling standby, gingham, that ever since Maud Muller's day has slain the men on sight—or the still more deadly cross-barred organdie of whose boa constrictor charms any well informed grandmother will be glad to enlighten you. The gown at the left is chic and a wee bit tailored looking, the one at the right is adorably demure—and just as chic. You couldn't possibly decide between them—so it must be both.

Symphony Of The Open Road Is Now Heard

If you hearken to the siren symphony of the country road today let us make a few suggestions for that lunch basket without which a trip into the woods would never be complete.

The thing to consider when starting out to prepare a motor lunch is what the different people at the party would really like to see when they are very hungry and far from home.

The average woman knows that the average man's heart would fall if he saw nothing but pretty little cutouts of bread filled with caviar or anchovy paste when the lunch box was opened. Even a sandwich of sliced chicken breast with a protecting leaf of lettuce might look too ladylike to suit him. Have the chicken sandwiches, but also have some of ham and roast beef, some on white bread and some on dark. If you ask a man what sandwiches he likes best, he is pretty sure to name roast beef and ham.

Other good meat fillings are equal quantities of chopped chicken and ham, chopped veal and ham, boiled tongue with mustard between thin slices of bread.

Bermuda onions on buttered rye bread should have a place in any motor lunch, especially if the commissary is to include beer. And that is one thing a party has a right to expect this season. Slices of American or Swiss cheese on thinly buttered bread should also be bracketed with beer, even if the lunch box is to include more fancy cheese mixtures.

Mix a litlte paprika into the cheese, as this develops the flavor. Add a dash of salt, mix thoroughly, then add some finely chopped walnuts. Spread on thin slices of lightly buttered brown or rye bread.

Cream cheese and currant jelly is an appetizing combination. A tablespoon or more of jelly may be mixed into a square of cheese or each may be spread on matching slices, then put together.

Other things that go well with cream cheese are chopped celery, chopped olives, watercress, shredded pineapple, chopped dates and even chopped raw spinach. The celery should be crisp and tender.

Take a hint from what repeal has done to make fish fashionable and have some of your sandwiches filled with seafood. Use caviar, by all means, if you can afford it, also anchovy paste. And remember that not for nothing does the lowly herring occupy a crowning place on the fanciest canapes these days.

Freshly cooked or canned shrimps mixed with an equal amount of butter, pounded together and pressed through a sieve makes an amazingly good spread.

Although salt and pepper shakers are the most indispensable of all lunch accessories there are other things whose absence can create havoc a few hundred miles from home. One of these is the mustard jar. There is no telling how much mustard a man may want on his sandwiches until you see him taking the slices apart and spreading it on meat or even on cheese. Olives (drain off the juice before starting), celery hearts, radishes, tomatoes, raisins, dates and lemons can go a long way toward making a motor lunch an event to be remembered with joy.

One of the most enthusiastic meetings of the year was enjoyed by St. Matthews P.-T. A. Friday afternoon, with twenty-five members present.

Meeting opened with prayer by president, Mrs. John Guerriero.

Reports on state convention were made by Mrs. John Guerriero and Mrs. John Williamson, delegates, also Mrs. Lizzie Morris and Mrs. L. A. Breard.

Plans were completed for Junior-Senior banquet to be held at Frances hotel on May 24. Parents of juniors and seniors are urged to attend this very inspiring function. Mrs. Paul Keller and Mrs. J. W. Spohrer were appointed to make reservations for parents, and those wishing to attend should advise one of these ladies at an early date. Senior and junior parents are invited to help with decorations and should get in communication with Mrs. A. M. Guerriero, chairman of arrangements.

Cafeteria report made by Miss Catherine McStravick.

Sister Magdalen gave a short and interesting talk on the adolescent child covering lecture to our high school pupils by Father Cassidy of Spring Hill college. A banquet of roses will be presented to Mrs. Gram Breard as a message of sympathy in her present illness.

New officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. John Guerriero; vice president, Mrs. Paul Keller; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. John Williamson. A rising vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Stanley Hodges and Mrs. E. T. Kenny, retiring vice president and secretary.

Fifth and junior grades were awarded attendance banners and incidently a library book for each room.

Youth Week To Be Observed In Monroe With A Special Program Arranged Each Eay

National Youth week reminds us that this world advances on the feet of children. Youth must be served today as never before and with this thought in view, next week will be dedicated to the boys and girls of America with a special program arranged for each day. Most fathers use endless ingenuity in seeing that a child gets his quota of vitamins and sun light and a safe yard in which to play and then he will not concern himself over the companionship he could give his son if he so desired.

There is nothing in all the world that can be given a boy as a substitute for the companionship of his father and with this thought in view National Youth week has been inaugurated. In Monroe a program has been arranged for the entire week in which the parents take a very prominent part. Mayor Arnold Bernstein will tell you something about this program and the part you play in it, in a radio address this morning. This talk will pave the way for a full week of pleasure for boys and girls of Monroe. As a glorious climax to the week's program we might suggest a picnic to some beautiful spot in the country where a camp fire can be built and the children permitted to assist in cooking the food over the glowing coals. We venture to say it will be a day long remembered if father is present and forgets for the time being that he is grown-up . . . if he is a boy again just for the day, the children will be radiantly happy.

Echoes from the Louisiana Parent-Teacher association meeting in this city recently, still trickle through our days like sweet music. We are reminded at this particular time of a story one of the speakers told at the banquet. It seems that James had a constant companion—a dog named Paddy. One night Paddy died and James' mother told him in the morning as gently as possible of the dog's death. To her surprise and great relief, James made no demonstration of grief and left the house in his customary happy frame of mind. In a few minutes he returned, grief stricken over his dog's death. His mother said, "Why James I tried to tell you when you were eating breakfast that Paddy died." Imagine her chagrin when James said, "I thought you said Daddy died."

If National Youth Week observance does nothing more than make the small boy realize that his father's companionship is quite necessary in his life, it will have accomplished something quite worth while.

Central grammar school P.-T. A. met Wednesday afternoon with the president presiding. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved; Mrs. Meek gave a report on finances. Interesting messages from the recent P.-T. A. convention were brought by Mrs. Caveness and Mrs. Haas. Miss Frieda Mickel spoke in the interest of a Junior Shakespeare club.

The report of the nominating committee, Mrs. Johnston, chairman; named the following officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. L. S. Meek; vice president, Mrs. R. R. Gatlin; treasurer, Mrs. S. Lyles, secretary, Mrs. W. E. McCoy. The retiring president was given a rising vote of appreciation for the splendid work accomplished during the past year.

Mothers present were counted and the award was given to the 2-B grade. Adjournment followed.

Members of the Calhoun Study club were delightfully entertained by the home economic students under the expert supervision of Miss Rupert Perry, home economic instructor.

The purpose of this meeting was the election of officers for the new year which will begin in October. Those elected were president, Mrs. J. B. Brown; vice president, Mrs. B. N. Pipes; secretary, Mrs. J. L. Heath, Jr.; reporter, Mrs. Sidney Stewart; historian, Mrs. Boyce Humble.

After the business session was closed Mrs. G. S. Manning gave an instructive survey of the "Life and Works of Herman Milville," Mrs J. E. Bryan, read an interesting resume of the popular novel, "Moby Dick" by Herman Milville.

During the social hour Miss Perry, assisted by several of the home economic students served a very delicious confectionary course to Mrs. Jake Humble, Mrs. C. Z. Roberts, Mrs. J. E. Bryan, Mrs. J. B. Brown, Mrs. G. S. Manning, Mrs. Boyce Humble, Mrs. B. N. Pipes, Mrs. Annie Henry, Miss Addie Fuller, Mrs. H. D. Hale, Mrs. P. K Wright, Mrs. J. L. Brown, Mrs. Sidney Stewart, Mrs. J. L. Mrs. Townes Receives Set Of Compositions And Songs For Monroe Public Library

Patrons of the Monroe public library are indebted to Mrs. Edith Townes, librarian, for a comprehensive set of songs and compositions of Stephen Collins Foster, whose familiar melodies, such as "My Old Kentucky Home," "Old Black Joe," and "Louisiana Belle" have endeared him to thousands.

The set is a gift from Mr. Josiah K. Lilly, Indianapolis philanthrophist, who has spent years collecting Foster's first editions. There are 200 songs and compositions to which are added guitar and other arrangements of his work and that of others. These song sheets are all duplicates of the originals and are filed in alphabetical order and arranged in three dust-proof cases which fit into a steel cabinet.

In a bulletin sent with the collection are some interesting explanations and notes. The bulletin says, "The staff employed by Mr. Lilly found it very hard to secure a complete collection of Foster's scores. No such collection existed outside of the copyrights in the library of congress, which was far from complete.

"The idea was conceived that complete collections could be made by reproducing expertly all known first editions. An ambitious task, but one which Mr. Lilly determined to carry out at any cost. And so he started to search for first editions. Bulletins were issued setting forth our needs. Advertisements were inserted in newspapers and magazines and prices varying from $50 to $150 were offered for the original scores.

"Finally the task of collection was completed, and 1,000 sets of songs requiring tons of specially made rag paper, 1,000 plates, more than 1,000,000 impressions, 3,000 slip cases and 1,000 steel cabinets were ready for distribution to libraries located throughout the nation. Hence the sets may be considered completed unless work or works by Foster should be discovered in the future. Should this happen it is the intention of Foster Hall to reproduce and send them to the libraries possessing these numbered and registered sets."

Besides this Mr. Lilly is responsible for the erection of a very charming cottage in the northern suburbs of Indianapolis which he named "Foster Hall." In this cottage is a collection of everything pertaining to Foster's life—original letters, manuscripts, sheet music, first and early editions, songbooks, and many pamphlets. In here also are portraits, pictures, musical instruments, and the very pianos on which he played.

The song covers are very elaborate with pictures and decorations typical of the themes of the songs of Foster's time. His best songs give lasting expression to one phase of American life—the negro—and remain a valuable contribution to the folk music of our country.

Guests were welcomed in the spacious reception suite of the Methodist Educational building where colorful garden furniture created a charming setting. Gayly colored balloons floated overhead and in the background luxuriant ferns and palms were banked extravagantly.

The banquet hall was transformed into a beautiful formal garden where the music of falling water in the silvery pool was heard in the distance. The garden was hedged in with beautiful woodland flowers and ferns. Low garden baskets overflowing with white roses and sweet peas were placed at intervals along the dinner tables alternating with handsome silver candelabrum supporting tall tapers.

Guests were escorted into the garden by beautiful pages attired in green and white costumes.

Miss Katherine Tooke presided as toastmistress in a charming manner. The program was punctuated with clever toasts. Dance music was furnished by Chet Steadman and his Knights of Rhythm.

Favors in the form of gold pocket knives attractively wrapped in green celophane were presented to the gentlemen.

Members of the Missouri Pacific Women's club met Friday afternoon at their clubhouse with Mrs. S. A. Moss, president, presiding.

A resolution was adopted and the secretary, Mrs. P. J. Newman was instructed to extend an invitation to members of the Alexandria Women's club to be their guests at the next regular meeting. Reports were submitted by all outstanding committees.

The following report was made by Mrs. W. H. Armstrong, chairman, of the solicitation committee for March and April:

"This committee made several personal solicitations for passengers for several conventions over the Missouri Pacific lines, viz. Baptist convention at Monroe, Grand chapter, Eastern Star. Alexandria, First Missionary convention, at New Orleans, and Parent-Teacher association, at Monroe. Sixteen ladies came from New Orleans, via. this railroad for the P.-T. A. convention with the highest compliments for the service rendered them on the trip."

The speakers of the afternoon were Mrs. Fagan Cox, president of the Y. W. C. A. and Mr. Fred Williamson, managing editor of the News-Star—World.

Mrs. Newman contributed two lovely song numbers, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Griffin. Miss Catherine Jones and Dorothy Lively, dance pupils of Mrs. Regina Moffet Gill, gave interpretative dance numbers. CHAPTER XIII

The sea was calm and Field had reason for his pride in the "Silver Dart." Soon Pablito saw what the man and girl beside him could not see—an indent of water cupped between jagged rocks and leading upward to a deserted stretch of beach. Beyond the yellow sand was a deep green tangle of tropic jungle.

The water was growing shallow and the going was perilous, Pablito knew. Lottie and Beau quarreled mildly, unaware of the danger. Pablito turned the wheel low. Lottie was saying, "What the hell are we goin' to do with this here Leviathan?"

"Turn it over and hope to God it'll drift to sea," Beau answered.

"It's a damn shame," the girl muttered. "It's a swell boat!"

"It wouldn't be so swell to be caught in it," Beau told her.

The boat scraped a rock and poised for a second, far tilted to one side. Lottie's eyes grew frightened but she made no sound; Beau swore; Pablito turned off the engine, stepped out on the rock, pushed the boat off and leaped back into it. Once more he turned the power on. They could not go much farther, he knew, but he wanted to be well out of the water in which sharks might be swimming before he began to pilot the crew ashore.

Again the boat struck a rock, this time squarely under the prow and so sharply that it vibrated from the shock. Again Beau swore loudly; again Lottie made no sound but her hands gripped one another until her knuckles were white.

Pablito saw a natural channel ahead as he stepped out this time. If he could make it he could get within 100 feet of shore. Slowly and carefully he nosed the boat through an opening as Beau screeched high and shrill that he couldn't make it. Then Pablito turned off the engine to sit back.

"All change at Manhattan Junction," Lottie said.

"We'll get you to shore and send the boat out," Beau said, eyes on Lottie. Pablito rolled up his flared trousers, slitting them in order to pull them high on his thighs. Then he stepped into the water. "I'll carry you," he said to Lottie. She smiled as she held out her arms and he lifted her over the edge of the boat.

"Oh, baby!" she murmured ecstatically as her arms tightened around his neck. "That there Sir Walter Raleigh musta took lessons from you!"

It was a difficult feat, getting Lottie to land. She was heavy and the way was perilous. The rocks were slippery and the hands, washed by the tide, were shifting and deceiving. The sun beat down fiercely and Beau swore as he followed. Once he fell and once more Pablito slipped but he did not fall. At last he set Lottie down on the beach, wiping his dripping brow with a shirt sleeve.

"Thanks for the buggy ride," he heard and, looking down at her, managed to give her a wan smile.

"Hike for cover, kid," Beau ordered. Rather stiffly and after a warm glance at Pablito the girl made her way up the precipitous beach toward the tangle of green.

Again Pablito and Beau waded, pulled by the undertow and betrayed by the changing levels of the sea bed. At last they reached the rocking boat and found more difficulties. How to get it into the open was their problem. The wash of the waves threatened to bring it back to cover. Beau stood swearing which was his way of showing that he was balked. Pablito, eyes on the boat, considered.

"I'll take her out," he said at length, "put on a low power and head her toward Key West. I'll run out enough gasoline so that she'll go only 10 or 15 miles. Then if she washes back it isn't likely it will be to this shore."

"Hell!" said Beau admiringly.

"We can string up a signal," Pablito went on, "that will look as if we had been calling for help." He crawled into the boat as he spoke. Working quickly, he tied to a small improvised mast his broad scarlet sash.

"How are you going to get back?" Beau asked.

"Swim and wade, I guess."

"Ain't there sharks around here?"

"I suppose so but what are we going to do about it?"

"Say, you got your nerve!"

Pablito turned on a low speed then and nosed the boat through the rocks once more. When he was in the open at last he stopped to exhaust the gasoline and sense his direction. Then he started the craft, stepped quickly into the prow and leaped into the churning water.

When he could think of anything except the struggle with the churning water and rocks he felt Beau's hand.

"All right!" Beau gasped. He had swum out to meet Pablito. "It is not much farther," he said a moment later. Then Pablito, with a turn, found the uneven sea bed. At last they were wading, driven and pulled and twisted by the water, but making headway.

Lottie, despite Beau's order, stood on the beach waiting for them.

"Honest to Gawd," she said as they joined her, weak and heavy with water, "Honest to Gawd that got my goat!"

The cover of trees and dense undergrowth protected them. On the beach Pablito saw fat lizards blinking their beady, glittering eyes in the sun and a spider four inches across with red markings. In the wood Pablito pulled the undergrowth away from a spot that was high and dry and after beating it hard with his watersoaked jacket told Lottie she might sit down.

Beau settled to soliloquize wistfully about his need for cigarets, food and a shave. The water had pasted his garments to him and Pablito saw that a lumpy bag hung on his chest, fastened with a cord about his neck.

"We can't get going until it's dark," said Beau. No one answered. He stretched out and soon was sound asleep. Lottie edged closer to Pablito. "You're a good sport," she said and her voice was almost soft.

The afternoon wore on and the heat of the sun began to diminish. One of those breezes which, strong or mild, seems to keep the undying foliage of Cuba constantly a-flutter crept into the wood. Lottie, who had slept, stirred, sat up, stretched and rubbed her eyes. Pablito, who had kept watch, smiled at her.

"What's next?" she asked after a yawn which blurred her words.

"Quien sabe?" Pablito answered.

Beau opened his eyes. "You ich fersthy Spanish?" he asked, a gleam in his eyes.

Pablito nodded.

"You're going to be useful to us," Beau announced, "and I'll see that you don't forget it or that we saved your life, old-timer!"

At dusk Pablito scouted about with Beau while Lottie waited. They found a hard-beaten road not far away and beyond Pablito saw a hibiscus hedge, its huge scarlet flowers like a mass of sporadic flames. Back of this was a clump of poinsettia, fully six feet tall, its blossoms a glowing crimson. There were cultivated banana trees too and Pablito knew they must be nearing someone's country estate.

Then down the road a creeping blotch appeared and as it grew larger Pablito saw it was an ox cart drawn by two sleek animals with rings in their noses. A two-wheeled, creaking screeching ox cart. He and Beau stepped to the side of the road and dropped there behind a tall growth that afforded protection. As he hid Pablito thought of the laoboa, Cuba's deadly little six-inch, dust-colored snake which can burrow straight downward in the hardest earth almost in a second.

The cart drew near. It was filled with girls dressed in tissue paper costumes, their paper skirts flaring, paper bodices cut low and caps that seemed like lightly hovering butterflies on their pretty heads. The man who drove the slowly plodding beasts was grinning pleasantly. He was dressed as a clown. The girls' chatter was high, shrill and happy.

When the screech of the cart wheels was dimmed Beau crept from his hiding place and Pablito followed.

"What the hell was that?" Beau asked.

"It's the carnival," Pablito told him. "I'd forgotten but tomorrow must be one of the Sundays in Lent when everyone masquerades."

The Study club met with Miss Carrie Dee Drew, Wednesday afternoon. The subject for the afternoon "Design for Living" a drama by Noel Coward, was interestingly given by Miss Carrie Dee Drew.

The year book committee with Mrs. James Walsworth, chairman and Mrs. James Drew and Millmore Meadows announced the program for next year will be history, geography and literature of Russia.

Those present, Mmes. Nelson Abell, J. S. Drew, D. S. Ellett, H. H. Land, Carl McHenry, Alymer Montgomery, Henry Montgomery, Elmer Richards, William Rodriguez, Lewis Slator, Neil McHenry, J. E. Walsworth and hostess with her charming mother and Miss Elizabeth Burton of Lewisville, Arkansas, guests.

Cummings of this city will reign as Queen of the May at the May day festival to be held on the campus of the old high school building of Winnfield, Tuesday afternoon at two-thirty o'clock.

John Faith, sophomore, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Faith, was chosen king to reign with Queen Katherine. Escorts for the maids of their courts are: Janet Bethea and Joe Grigsby, Janice Talton and Melvin Sowers, June Sowers and Gordon McDonald, Mary Ella Capps and Lee Woods, Doris Long and Joe Bevill, Mary Helen Smith and Kelly Peterson, Elinor Grigsby and Clifford Long, Dorothy Teegarden and Ray Jenkins, Sibyl Walker and Bobbie Byrnes, Helen Virginia Allbritton and Lynwood Mixon.

The May day festival is an annual affair sponsored by the local Parent-Teachers association. Each school will take part in the program, which will consist of playlets, drills, dances, recitations and songs. May day is observed over the entire nation as Child Health day. A proclamation, elsewhere in this issue by Mayor W. H. Baker proclaims the afternoon a holiday.

Two silver loving cups will be presented to the healthiest boy and girl in the grammar grades.

Miss Peters is a great favorite and has many friends in this city where she spends considerable time with her grandparents, who will motor over to Winnfield on Tuesday to witness the coronation of this lovely young girl.

Mrs. Townes Receives Set Of Compositions And Songs For Monroe Public Library

Patrons of the Monroe public library are indebted to Mrs. Edith Townes, librarian, for a comprehensive set of songs and compositions of Stephen Collins Foster, whose familiar melodies, such as "My Old Kentucky Home," "Old Black Joe," and "Louisiana Belle" have endeared him to thousands.

The set is a gift from Mr. Josiah K. Lilly, Indianapolis philanthrophist, who has spent years collecting Foster's first editions. There are 200 songs and compositions to which are added guitar and other arrangements of his work and that of others. These song sheets are all duplicates of the originals and are filed in alphabetical order and arranged in three dust-proof cases which fit into a steel cabinet.

In a bulletin sent with the collection are some interesting explanations and notes. The bulletin says, "The staff employed by Mr. Lilly found it very hard to secure a complete collection of Foster's scores. No such collection existed outside of the copyrights in the library of congress, which was far from complete.

"The idea was conceived that complete collections could be made by reproducing expertly all known first editions. An ambitious task, but one which Mr. Lilly determined to carry out at any cost. And so he started to search for first editions. Bulletins were issued setting forth our needs. Advertisements were inserted in newspapers and magazines and prices varying from $50 to $150 were offered for the original scores.

"Finally the task of collection was completed, and 1,000 sets of songs requiring tons of specially made rag paper, 1,000 plates, more than 1,000,000 impressions, 3,000 slip cases and 1,000 steel cabinets were ready for distribution to libraries located throughout the nation. Hence the sets may be considered completed unless work or works by Foster should be discovered in the future. Should this happen it is the intention of Foster Hall to reproduce and send them to the libraries possessing these numbered and registered sets."

Besides this Mr. Lilly is responsible for the erection of a very charming cottage in the northern suburbs of Indianapolis which he named "Foster Hall." In this cottage is a collection of everything pertaining to Foster's life—original letters, manuscripts, sheet music, first and early editions, songbooks, and many pamphlets. In here also are portraits, pictures, musical instruments, and the very pianos on which he played.

The song covers are very elaborate with pictures and decorations typical of the themes of the songs of Foster's time. His best songs give lasting expression to one phase of American life—the negro—and remain a valuable contribution to the folk music of our country.

Guests were welcomed in the spacious reception suite of the Methodist Educational building where colorful garden furniture created a charming setting. Gayly colored balloons floated overhead and in the background luxuriant ferns and palms were banked extravagantly.

The banquet hall was transformed into a beautiful formal garden where the music of falling water in the silvery pool was heard in the distance. The garden was hedged in with beautiful woodland flowers and ferns. Low garden baskets overflowing with white roses and sweet peas were placed at intervals along the dinner tables alternating with handsome silver candelabrum supporting tall tapers.

Guests were escorted into the garden by beautiful pages attired in green and white costumes.

Miss Katherine Tooke presided as toastmistress in a charming manner. The program was punctuated with clever toasts. Dance music was furnished by Chet Steadman and his Knights of Rhythm.

Favors in the form of gold pocket knives attractively wrapped in green celophane were presented to the gentlemen.

CHAPTER XIII

The sea was calm and Field had reason for his pride in the "Silver Dart." Soon Pablito saw what the man and girl beside him could not see—an indent of water cupped between jagged rocks and leading upward to a deserted stretch of beach. Beyond the yellow sand was a deep green tangle of tropic jungle.

The water was growing shallow and the going was perilous, Pablito knew. Lottie and Beau quarreled mildly, unaware of the danger. Pablito turned the wheel low. Lottie was saying, "What the hell are we goin' to do with this here Leviathan?"

"Turn it over and hope to God it'll drift to sea," Beau answered.

"It's a damn shame," the girl muttered. "It's a swell boat!"

"It wouldn't be so swell to be caught in it," Beau told her.

The boat scraped a rock and poised for a second, far tilted to one side. Lottie's eyes grew frightened but she made no sound; Beau swore; Pablito turned off the engine, stepped out on the rock, pushed the boat off and leaped back into it. Once more he turned the power on. They could not go much farther, he knew, but he wanted to be well out of the water in which sharks might be swimming before he began to pilot the crew ashore.

Again the boat struck a rock, this time squarely under the prow and so sharply that it vibrated from the shock. Again Beau swore loudly; again Lottie made no sound but her hands gripped one another until her knuckles were white.

Pablito saw a natural channel ahead as he stepped out this time. If he could make it he could get within 100 feet of shore. Slowly and carefully he nosed the boat through an opening as Beau screeched high and shrill that he couldn't make it. Then Pablito turned off the engine to sit back.

"All change at Manhattan Junction," Lottie said.

"We'll get you to shore and send the boat out," Beau said, eyes on Lottie. Pablito rolled up his flared trousers, slitting them in order to pull them high on his thighs. Then he stepped into the water. "I'll carry you," he said to Lottie. She smiled as she held out her arms and he lifted her over the edge of the boat.

"Oh, baby!" she murmured ecstatically as her arms tightened around his neck. "That there Sir Walter Raleigh musta took lessons from you!"

It was a difficult feat, getting Lottie to land. She was heavy and the way was perilous. The rocks were slippery and the hands, washed by the tide, were shifting and deceiving. The sun beat down fiercely and Beau swore as he followed. Once he fell and once more Pablito slipped but he did not fall. At last he set Lottie down on the beach, wiping his dripping brow with a shirt sleeve.

"Thanks for the buggy ride," he heard and, looking down at her, managed to give her a wan smile.

"Hike for cover, kid," Beau ordered. Rather stiffly and after a warm glance at Pablito the girl made her way up the precipitous beach toward the tangle of green.

Again Pablito and Beau waded, pulled by the undertow and betrayed by the changing levels of the sea bed. At last they reached the rocking boat and found more difficulties. How to get it into the open was their problem. The wash of the waves threatened to bring it back to cover. Beau stood swearing which was his way of showing that he was balked. Pablito, eyes on the boat, considered.

"I'll take her out," he said at length, "put on a low power and head her toward Key West. I'll run out enough gasoline so that she'll go only 10 or 15 miles. Then if she washes back it isn't likely it will be to this shore."

"Hell!" said Beau admiringly.

"We can string up a signal," Pablito went on, "that will look as if we had been calling for help." He crawled into the boat as he spoke. Working quickly, he tied to a small improvised mast his broad scarlet sash.

"How are you going to get back?" Beau asked.

"Swim and wade, I guess."

"Ain't there sharks around here?"

"I suppose so but what are we going to do about it?"

Pablito turned on a low speed then and nosed the boat through the rocks once more. When he was in the open at last he stopped to exhaust the gasoline and sense his direction. Then he started the craft, stepped quickly into the prow and leaped into the churning water.

When he could think of anything except the struggle with the churning water and rocks he felt Beau's hand.

"All right!" Beau gasped. He had swum out to meet Pablito. "It is not much farther," he said a moment later. Then Pablito, with a turn, found the uneven sea bed. At last they were wading, driven and pulled and twisted by the water, but making headway.

Lottie, despite Beau's order, stood on the beach waiting for them.

"Honest to Gawd," she said as they joined her, weak and heavy with water, "Honest to Gawd that got my goat!"

The cover of trees and dense undergrowth protected them. On the beach Pablito saw fat lizards blinking their beady, glittering eyes in the sun and a spider four inches across with red markings. In the wood Pablito pulled the undergrowth away from a spot that was high and dry and after beating it hard with his watersoaked jacket told Lottie she might sit down.

Beau settled to soliloquize wistfully about his need for cigarets, food and a shave. The water had pasted his garments to him and Pablito saw that a lumpy bag hung on his chest, fastened with a cord about his neck.

"We can't get going until it's dark," said Beau. No one answered. He stretched out and soon was sound asleep. Lottie edged closer to Pablito. "You're a good sport," she said and her voice was almost soft.

The afternoon wore on and the heat of the sun began to diminish. One of those breezes which, strong or mild, seems to keep the undying foliage of Cuba constantly a-flutter crept into the wood. Lottie, who had slept, stirred, sat up, stretched and rubbed her eyes. Pablito, who had kept watch, smiled at her.

"What's next?" she asked after a yawn which blurred her words.

"Quien sabe?" Pablito answered.

Beau opened his eyes. "You ich fersthy Spanish?" he asked, a gleam in his eyes.

Pablito nodded.

"You're going to be useful to us," Beau announced, "and I'll see that you don't forget it or that we saved your life, old-timer!"

At dusk Pablito scouted about with Beau while Lottie waited. They found a hard-beaten road not far away and beyond Pablito saw a hibiscus hedge, its huge scarlet flowers like a mass of sporadic flames. Back of this was a clump of poinsettia, fully six feet tall, its blossoms a glowing crimson. There were cultivated banana trees too and Pablito knew they must be nearing someone's country estate.

Then down the road a creeping blotch appeared and as it grew larger Pablito saw it was an ox cart drawn by two sleek animals with rings in their noses. A two-wheeled, creaking screeching ox cart. He and Beau stepped to the side of the road and dropped there behind a tall growth that afforded protection. As he hid Pablito thought of the laoboa, Cuba's deadly little six-inch, dust-colored snake which can burrow straight downward in the hardest earth almost in a second.

The cart drew near. It was filled with girls dressed in tissue paper costumes, their paper skirts flaring, paper bodices cut low and caps that seemed like lightly hovering butterflies on their pretty heads. The man who drove the slowly plodding beasts was grinning pleasantly. He was dressed as a clown. The girls' chatter was high, shrill and happy.

When the screech of the cart wheels was dimmed Beau crept from his hiding place and Pablito followed.

"What the hell was that?" Beau asked.

"It's the carnival," Pablito told him. "I'd forgotten but tomorrow must be one of the Sundays in Lent when everyone masquerades."

MILLIONTH NASH IS MANUFACTURED

Celebration Staged As Fine New Car Rolls Off Assembly Line

KENOSHA, Wis., April 28.—(Special)—A memorable event in the life of Charles W. Nash was signalized here today.

The occasion, hailed by thousands in the Nash industrial family as a significant milestone in the history of automobile making, celebrated the completion of the 1,000,000th motor car produced by the Nash Motors company, and launched a unique better-business rally in every community in the United States where Nash and LaFayette cars are sold.

It also started a nation-wide search for veteran Nash owners. For the millionth Nash car—a 1934 twin ignition big six sedan—is going to be awarded free to the owner of an old Nash car through a national contest to be conducted by Nash-LaFayette dealers everywhere.

This interesting campaign which, in addition to discovering the actual length of Nash service, has as its object the demonstrating of new Nash and LaFayette cars to one million people within thirty days, revolves around the symbol "1,000,000." To most Americans 1,000,000 stands for a sign of success, a financial goal, a life's ambition. To the Nash organization it is a mark of distinguished achievement and the starting point in the march toward a thousand thousand more satisfied owners. To an old Nash owner somewhere in the country, however, it will have a more personal meaning, for it will bring him a brand new 1934 twin ignition big six as a badge of honor for the car which has served him so faithfully through many long years.

It was a gala hour which started this big national program rolling here today. C. W. Nash, maker of the million, his executive associates, and hundreds of Nash workmen, greeted the gleaming new sedan which clicked up the millionth mark on the Nash production line.

"This is a memorable day for all Nash men," Mr. Nash declared in a message to all factory and field representatives, "and I welcome it as an opportunity to give credit for a splendid achievement to those to whom it belongs. To the men at the factory I assign the credit for the happy experience I enjoy whenever I meet a Nash owner who speaks of the satisfactory service his car has given him. To the distributors, dealers, sales and service men I give the credit for guarding our good name and good will through their courteous and intelligent treatment of Nash owners. To the people who have long been loyal to our product, I give my sincere thanks; because their appreciation of our efforts brings rewards and satisfaction that no amount of material success can afford.

E. H. McCarty, president of Nash Motors, reviewed his company's achievement in the light of service to American motorists.

"The real success in any corporate undertaking," he said, "lies in doing a creditable thing. When this one millionth Nash-made motor car finished its trip down the production line, following the 999,999 other Nash-made cars which have gone out in the world to establish the company's reputation, my own greatest gratification came from realizing that its completion represented more than twenty billion miles of satisfactory motor car service. I imagined gathering together all Nash owners and their families—a company of people larger than the total population of some of our states—and listening to their motoring experiences. Many Nash owners have told us of driving their car 200,000 miles and more. Any number have reached the 100,000 mile mark, and 50,000 miles of service is common. Taking a conservative average of 20,000 miles, we know that Nash owners have piled up around twenty billion miles on the road; 800,000 times around the earth; 50,000 times the distance to the moon."

PAYMENT PLAN AIDS MOTORISTS

Personal Finance Co., Offers Easy Method Of Obtaining Repairs

Auto repair men in the Twin Cities are now offering complete overhaul jobs, a new set of tires and even license tags on the monthly payment plan, with no down payment. In most cases, this financing is done with no extra cost to the consumer because the volume of large repair jobs thus secured, enables the dealer to discount his work sufficiently to cover the finance charges. Even the smaller auto shops are able to offer this financing because they are not required to assume any responsibility for the credits.

The Personal Finance company advances the funds necessary to cover labor and materials so that it is a cash transaction as far as the dealer is concerned. The contract is secured by a lien on the car and the customer may have up to 12 months to pay. A contract of $60 for instance, may be paid in 12 monthly installments of $6.20 each.

Since the company also makes comaker and furniture loans, it is possible to handle many jobs that would have to be rejected as auto loans.

This type of financing can also be applied to roofing, house painting, improvements, and in fact, to almost anything that can be bought for cash, as long as the amount does not exceed $300.

SILENT SENORITAS

MADRID.—(AP)—Nineteen members of the so-called talkative sex are doing their best to make libel of that onerous tradition in the first women's chess championship to be staged in Madrid. The tournament began early in March and is expected to last well into May. The senoritas, although taking their playing quite seriously maintain almost absolute silence during the sessions.

FIRE PREVENTION WORK IS PRAISED

Campaign To Teach Children Dangers Of Fire Has Been Launched

A newspaper editorial comments on "Firemanship," a book being used by 60,000 Boy Scouts in preparing for Merit Badge examinations. The book is devoted to fire prevention, and material for it was supplied by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

The editorial said that in recent years accident prevention work has been almost universally included in school programs, the idea being to instruct children in order that they may avoid accidents on the street, in the home and at play—wherever carelessness or ignorance might cause tragedy. It then suggested that a national campaign of this kind be instituted to instruct children as to how fires may be prevented.

Evidently the writer was not aware that such a program initiated by the National Board of Fire Underwriters in schools several years ago, in connection with Fire Prevention week, has been continued ever since. Firemen gave talks in schools and children engaged in essay and poster contests. In order to supply information in regard to fire dangers and how to correct them, the national board prepared and distributed the booklet entitled "Safeguarding the Home Against Fire," which was intended for children of lower grades. Later, it prepared and distributed a high school manual, entitled "Safeguarding the Nation Against Fire." At the same time, numerous pamphlets were distributed and then playlets were prepared and sent to schools, in order that the pupils might take part in dramatizing fire dangers. Suitable posters were distributed.

Many schools now include fire prevention in their regular course of study. As a result children grow up with a more serious consciousness of the danger of fire and this reduces the terrific toll of life and property taken by fire annually, according to Downes Brokerage, local agents, in the Ouachita Bank building.

Oldsmobile Plant Is Operating Full Time

The Oldsmobile plant at Lansing is now running day and night with two shifts in operation. With the addition of the extra shift, employment has now reached a new all time high, even exceeding the peak in 1929.

Oldsmobile production for the mouth of April will be more than three times as large as it was last year. Officials also report that even greater production is scheduled for May and June, which will establish new records at the Oldsmobile factory.

Reports from the factory state that there is an increasing demand for Oldsmobile's new low priced six and the straight eight from every section of the country. An indication of this is the fact that Oldsmobile has built as many eighths in the first quarter of this year as in the entire year of 1933.

Clarks

The annual junior-senior banquet was celebrated in the dining room of Hotel White on Friday evening. The senior class colors, rose and white, were carried out in streamers of rose and white crêpe paper suspended from overhead and caught with large bows at the table corners. Large crystal bowl filled with trailing rose verbenas were placed along the table alternated with groups of large white candles. Rose mint cups were used at each cover. The table favors, caps, hats, whistles, noise makers and serpentines were in rose and white.

After dining the grand march was played by Mrs. R. L. Arceneaux and autograph books, canes and pins were presented to the guests. The party then retired to the hotel parlors where games of bingo and dancing were enjoyed. Those present were: juniors—John Webb, Jr., Wray Cooksey, Travis Knight, Vivian Jones, Faye Cooksey, Hazel Cody, Lewis Cooksey, Joy Pugh, Odell May, Macom Kirk, Marie Reitzell and Ruth Humble. DEADLY AUTO GAS OFTEN DANGEROUS

Insurance Firm Urges Motorists To Examine Exhaust Pipes

When starting the spring and summer driving pay particular attention to the exhaust pipe on your car. Out of that pipe comes a deadly gas generated by the engine—carbon monoxide. Unless the mechanism is in perfect condition the gas may not be carried out into the open air where it dissipates, but may leak up into the car, according to the Seymour Insurance agency.

Quantities of carbon monoxide are present in three out of five motor vehicles now moving on highways. Though the fumes are not concentrated highly in the majority of vehicles, they are sufficiently strong in 7 per cent, to cause collapse and greatly to increase the probability of fatal accidents and asphyxial deaths.

Traffic experts have been analysing causes of highway accidents now classified as "drove off roadway," "poor judgment," or "inattention." They believe that in such cases drivers may have been dazed or overcome by carbon monoxide.

Defects in exhaust facilities contribute to this hazard, says Albert W. Whitney, associate general manager, National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters. Short or split exhaust pipes, leaking flexible exhaust tubes, defective manifold gaskets or leading mufflers and connections are highly dangerous. Defective floor boards, openings around pedals or in dash board, and poor engine efficiency, are contributing factors.

Motorists can control the hazard by observing the following: 1. Stop engine in parked closed car (especially in garage), or ventilate freely. 2. Inspect car regularly and replace at once defective manifold gaskets, particularly flexible exhaust tubes which wear out rapidly. 3. Ventilate moving vehicle from front. 4. Install seemless exhaust pipes, or have seam facing ground. Pipe should discharge at rear side opposite driver. 5. Avoid following too closely a car with smoking exhaust.

BUICK DELIVERIES REACH HIGH PEAK

Record For First 10 Days Of April Surpasses Last Two Years

FLINT, Mich., April 28.—(Special)—Retail deliveries of Buick automobiles during the first 10 days of April were greater than during any similar period in the last two years, W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager of the Buick Motor company announced today.

Moreover, sales figures reveal that Buick dealers in 157 cities throughout the United States sold more cars in the first quarter of this year than they did in all of 1933.

"Buick's steadily growing sales volume is most gratifying to the management not only from the standpoint of the company's current business, which is at the best level it has been in more than two years, but also as an indication that a definite upward trend is being experienced in all lines of business," Mr. Hufstader said. "Increased new car buying, particularly in the Buick price range, is strong evidence that business recovery is sweeping the nation."

During the first 10 days of April, 2,853 new Buicks were delivered to customers, the sales statistics show, the largest 10-day total since the third period in March, 1932. The figure compares with 1,397 new car deliveries in the first 10 days of April last year, a gain of more than 100 per cent.

Deliveries in the first April period this year also exceeded the best 10-day period of last year—the last third of June, 1933, when 2,274 cars were delivered. "Total Buick deliveries since the first of the year," Mr. Hufstader said, "are 14,840 as against 11,069 from January 1 to April 10 last year."

"The fact that Buick dealers in 157 cities throughout the country already have exceeded their total 1933 sales volume is indicative of the extent to which the country has come back," Mr. Hufstader said. "The same sales figures show that dealers in nearly 200 other towns have sold from 50 to 100 per cent as many cars in the first quarter of this year as they did in all of last year with the probability that many of these dealers soon will pass their total 1933 volume."

MILLIONTH NASH IS MANUFACTURED

Celebration Staged As Fine New Car Rolls Off Assembly Line

KENOSHA, Wis., April 28.—(Special)—A memorable event in the life of Charles W. Nash was signalized here today.

The occasion, hailed by thousands in the Nash industrial family as a significant milestone in the history of automobile making, celebrated the completion of the 1,000,000th motor car produced by the Nash Motors company, and launched a unique better-business rally in every community in the United States where Nash and LaFayette cars are sold.

It also started a nation-wide search for veteran Nash owners. For the millionth Nash car—a 1934 twin ignition big six sedan—is going to be awarded free to the owner of an old Nash car through a national contest to be conducted by Nash-LaFayette dealers everywhere.

This interesting campaign which, in addition to discovering the actual length of Nash service, has as its object the demonstrating of new Nash and LaFayette cars to one million people within thirty days, revolves around the symbol "1,000,000." To most Americans 1,000,000 stands for a sign of success, a financial goal, a life's ambition. To the Nash organization it is a mark of distinguished achievement and the starting point in the march toward a thousand thousand more satisfied owners. To an old Nash owner somewhere in the country, however, it will have a more personal meaning, for it will bring him a brand new 1934 twin ignition big six as a badge of honor for the car which has served him so faithfully through many long years.

It was a gala hour which started this big national program rolling here today. C. W. Nash, maker of the million, his executive associates, and hundreds of Nash workmen, greeted the gleaming new sedan which clicked up the millionth mark on the Nash production line.

"This is a memorable day for all Nash men," Mr. Nash declared in a message to all factory and field representatives, "and I welcome it as an opportunity to give credit for a splendid achievement to those to whom it belongs. To the men at the factory I assign the credit for the happy experience I enjoy whenever I meet a Nash owner who speaks of the satisfactory service his car has given him. To the distributors, dealers, sales and service men I give the credit for guarding our good name and good will through their courteous and intelligent treatment of Nash owners. To the people who have long been loyal to our product, I give my sincere thanks; because their appreciation of our efforts brings rewards and satisfaction that no amount of material success can afford.

E. H. McCarty, president of Nash Motors, reviewed his company's achievement in the light of service to American motorists.

"The real success in any corporate undertaking," he said, "lies in doing a creditable thing. When this one millionth Nash-made motor car finished its trip down the production line, following the 999,999 other Nash-made cars which have gone out in the world to establish the company's reputation, my own greatest gratification came from realizing that its completion represented more than twenty billion miles of satisfactory motor car service. I imagined gathering together all Nash owners and their families—a company of people larger than the total population of some of our states—and listening to their motoring experiences. Many Nash owners have told us of driving their car 200,000 miles and more. Any number have reached the 100,000 mile mark, and 50,000 miles of service is common. Taking a conservative average of 20,000 miles, we know that Nash owners have piled up around twenty billion miles on the road; 800,000 times around the earth; 50,000 times the distance to the moon."

PAYMENT PLAN AIDS MOTORISTS

Personal Finance Co., Offers Easy Method Of Obtaining Repairs

Auto repair men in the Twin Cities are now offering complete overhaul jobs, a new set of tires and even license tags on the monthly payment plan, with no down payment. In most cases, this financing is done with no extra cost to the consumer because the volume of large repair jobs thus secured, enables the dealer to discount his work sufficiently to cover the finance charges. Even the smaller auto shops are able to offer this financing because they are not required to assume any responsibility for the credits.

The Personal Finance company advances the funds necessary to cover labor and materials so that it is a cash transaction as far as the dealer is concerned. The contract is secured by a lien on the car and the customer may have up to 12 months to pay. A contract of $60 for instance, may be paid in 12 monthly installments of $6.20 each.

Since the company also makes comaker and furniture loans, it is possible to handle many jobs that would have to be rejected as auto loans.

This type of financing can also be applied to roofing, house painting, improvements, and in fact, to almost anything that can be bought for cash, as long as the amount does not exceed $300.

SILENT SENORITAS

MADRID.—(AP)—Nineteen members of the so-called talkative sex are doing their best to make libel of that onerous tradition in the first women's chess championship to be staged in Madrid. The tournament began early in March and is expected to last well into May. The senoritas, although taking their playing quite seriously maintain almost absolute silence during the sessions.

FIRE PREVENTION WORK IS PRAISED

Campaign To Teach Children Dangers Of Fire Has Been Launched

A newspaper editorial comments on "Firemanship," a book being used by 60,000 Boy Scouts in preparing for Merit Badge examinations. The book is devoted to fire prevention, and material for it was supplied by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

The editorial said that in recent years accident prevention work has been almost universally included in school programs, the idea being to instruct children in order that they may avoid accidents on the street, in the home and at play—wherever carelessness or ignorance might cause tragedy. It then suggested that a national campaign of this kind be instituted to instruct children as to how fires may be prevented.

Evidently the writer was not aware that such a program initiated by the National Board of Fire Underwriters in schools several years ago, in connection with Fire Prevention week, has been continued ever since. Firemen gave talks in schools and children engaged in essay and poster contests. In order to supply information in regard to fire dangers and how to correct them, the national board prepared and distributed the booklet entitled "Safeguarding the Home Against Fire," which was intended for children of lower grades. Later, it prepared and distributed a high school manual, entitled "Safeguarding the Nation Against Fire." At the same time, numerous pamphlets were distributed and then playlets were prepared and sent to schools, in order that the pupils might take part in dramatizing fire dangers. Suitable posters were distributed.

Many schools now include fire prevention in their regular course of study. As a result children grow up with a more serious consciousness of the danger of fire and this reduces the terrific toll of life and property taken by fire annually, according to Downes Brokerage, local agents, in the Ouachita Bank building.

Oldsmobile Plant Is Operating Full Time

The Oldsmobile plant at Lansing is now running day and night with two shifts in operation. With the addition of the extra shift, employment has now reached a new all time high, even exceeding the peak in 1929.

Oldsmobile production for the mouth of April will be more than three times as large as it was last year. Officials also report that even greater production is scheduled for May and June, which will establish new records at the Oldsmobile factory.

Reports from the factory state that there is an increasing demand for Oldsmobile's new low priced six and the straight eight from every section of the country. An indication of this is the fact that Oldsmobile has built as many eights in the first quarter of this year as in the entire year of 1933.

Clarks

The annual junior-senior banquet was celebrated in the dining room of Hotel White on Friday evening. The senior class colors, rose and white, were carried out in streamers of rose and white crepe paper suspended from overhead and caught with large bows at the table corners. Large crystal bowl filled with trailing rose verbenas were placed along the table alternated with groups of large white candles. Rose mint cups were used at each cover. The table favors, caps, hats, whistles, noise makers and serpentines were in rose and white.

After dining the grand march was played by Mrs. R. L. Arceneaux and autograph books, canes and pins were presented to the guests. The party then retired to the hotel parlors where games of bingo and dancing were enjoyed. Those present were: juniors—John Webb, Jr., Wray Cooksey, Travis Knight, Vivian Jones, Faye Cooksey, Hazel Cody, Lewis Cooksey, Joy Pugh, Odell May, Macom Kirk, Marie Reitzell and Ruth Humble. L. S. U. BREAKS THREE RECORDS IN DRAKE RELAYS

TWO-MILE RELAY, SHOT AND JAVELIN MARKS BETTERED

U. C. L. A. Quartet Breaks 11-Year Record In One-Mile Relay

By Charles W. Dunkley
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

DES MOINES, Ia., April 28.—(AP)—They waited 11 years for a quartette of quarter milers to come along and break the one-mile relay record at the Drake relay carnival.

Today it happened, when four fleet-footed youngsters from the University of California at Los Angeles, climaxed the silver anniversary of the Drake games by smashing the record hung up by the University of Iowa in 1923. The record was broken in the last race of the day to the excitement of 18,000 spectators, greatest crowd to witness the west's oldest athletic carnival since it was started 25 years ago.

The California quartette, composed of James Miller, Sinclair Lott, Ray Vejar, and James Luvalle, clipped a full second off the mark hug up by the Hawkeyes, running the distance in 3:15.9.

The finish also saw the remarkable come-back of Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette's negro sprinter, co-holder of a world's record for the 100-yard dash. Metcalfe, despite a bleeding muscle in his right leg, won the dash today for the third consecutive year, beating his field to the tape in 9.7, just two tenths of a second off the meet record.

With his right thigh swathed in bandages, Metcalfe edged out Hall of Kansas in the last ten yards after he had run abreast of the Jayhawker from the start. His time was considered exceptionally fast because he ran directly into a six mile wind. In his previous victories at Drake, Metcalfe won the century in the record time of 9.8 in 1933.

The Marquette negro after winning the century ran as anchor man on Marquette's relay team and sprinted to win the 440-yard relay by a margin of two yards ahead of Eckert of Illinois. Metcalfe not only made up a handicap of two yards in seizing the baton from Jessel, but came one with an amazing burst of speed to enable the Marquette team to win the race in 41.8, only a fifth of a second off the meet record.

The man mountain from the south, 275-pound Jack Torrance, failed in his efforts to smash his amazing mark of 55 feet 1 1-2 inches in the shot put, made in the preliminaries yesterday. This ponderous blond athlete from Louisiana State university, made six attempts to better his mark in the finals today and in all of them, with one exception, threw the 16-pound missile out into space better than 51 feet.

New records were established in the one-mile university relay, the javlin throw, two mile university relay, the two mile relay for class A high schools, the one mile relay for class A nigh schools and the university half mile relay was tied.

The crack Louisiana State team, holders of the National Collegiate championship, accounted for three of the five new records established in the two days of competition. Torrance won two events, the discus and the shot, setting a world's record in the latter event. Nathan Blair, also of Louisiana, set a new meet record in the javelin, when he heaved the spear 209.21 feet in his final attempt. John Kuck, competing for the Kansas State Teachers college at Emporia, Kans., established the former record of 207 feet 7 inches, eight years ago.

Hoyt Offers To Sell His Stock In New York Garden

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—Richard F. Hoyt, chairman of the board of directors of Madison Square Garden and one of its largest stockholders, today said before sailing on the liner Rex for a European vacation that he had offered his stock for sale but had not sold it.

"I have not put my name to any papers," Hoyt said when informed of Wall Street reports that he had sold his interest to a syndicate headed by Col. John S. Hammond, a former Garden vice-president. "There is nothing I can say because I do not know what Colonel Hammond is going to do. I have left the power to close the deal with my attorney, so that my departure will not affect the negotiations.

Hoyt said his entire Garden holdings were involved.

Sports Chatter

BY GEO. V. LOFTON

A FIGHTER

John J. McGraw apparently never became reconciled to the game of baseball as played by the so-called moderns.

In an article written shortly before his death, which represented his last public words on the subject of baseball as well as his first utterly frank and unreserved discussion of those things in his career which made him baseball's stormy petrel, McGraw told the world how distasteful the new game really was to him. The article was called "Big League Stuff" and appeared in Liberty magazine.

"It isn't the same game any more," McGraw wrote. "It isn't my game, the game in which you could play for a one run lead and hold it. Even the players are different—they are not the same intensive students of the game. Baseball brains have been smothered under a deluge of hits."

In this game, McGraw advised Connie Mack that it is no more his game now than his (McGraw's). He flatly suggested that Connie quit the game. He wrote:

"And these 'hand shaking' ball players who think more about the size of their pay check than they do of fighting tooth and nail to win ball games are not our kind of ball players, Connie—you know it as well as I do. Why I recall the time when I instructed my players not to speak to yours on the playing field unless it was to hurl an insult."

Surprising, and commanding of serious thought is this statement:

"Everything considered, I have no hesitation in declaring that the Baltimore Orioles of 1894, '95, and '96 is the outstanding ball club of baseball history. It would be the outstanding ball club even today, under modern conditions. Why, that club had a team batting average of .356. Give them the lively ball to hit and you'd never get them out. The nearest approach to that club was the Athletics of 1911.

"The players win games now by the crude and primitive method of striding up to the plate and slamming the ball out of the park—and there is no better method under existing conditions. The so-called 'master mind' on the bench has lost his grip on the ball game."

And thus John McGraw died with an indictment of modern baseball on his lips. Perhaps he was right, after all.

Pittsburgh Infielder Hits .556; Reynolds Leads American

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—After a week and a half of the usual early season variety of clouting, Harold (Pie) Traynor of Pittsburgh and Carl Reynolds of Boston's Red Sox today were established temporarily as the leading batters of the two major leagues.

Traynor, with a .556 average, led the National league field by over 100 points but Reynolds, topping the American league at .455, was closely pursued by a teammate, Bill Werber, the first semi-official compilations of the batting records after Friday's abbreviated program, revealed today.

In addition to the pace-setting veterans, Traynor and Reynolds, the list of leaders included such old standbys as Babe Ruth and Bill Dickey of the Yankees, Rick Ferrell of the Red Sox, Hack Wilson of Brooklyn, Freddy Lindstrom of Pittsburgh, Chuck Klein of the Cubs, and Mel Ott of the Giants. Only two first year men, Zeke Bonura of the White Sox and Len Koenecke of the Dodgers, held places among the "first ten." The most notable absentee was Jimmie Foxx, last year's American league champion.

Klein, champion batsman a year ago, led his league in four departments with ten runs, 12 runs batted in, 15 hits and four homers. Werber, with 16 hits, eight of them doubles, and Reynolds, with 12 runs batted in and two triples, were the only double headers in the American league's slugging departments.

Williams Meets Bozzell In Stadium Show Monday

Hackney And Taylor Tangle In Semi-Final Of Mat Program

The second wrestling show under the new booking arrangement will be held Monday night at Roosevelt stadium, with Paul Bozzell and Lefty Williams meeting in the main event and Stanley Hackney and Tiger Joe Taylor tangling in the semi-final. The show will get underway at 8:15 o'clock.

Both Williams and Hackney showed here last week beating Bert Keys in the main event and Williams losing to Bob Montgomery in the semi-final.

Williams conceded too much weight to Montgomery last week and expects to make a better showing against Bozzell. Lefty, who won 51 consecutive victories in the prize ring before entering the mat game, is a good rough and tumble grappler and he had the crowd with him against the Hot Springs husky.

Bozzell is said to be an exceptionally clever matman. Promoter Guy Owen saw him in action against Pat O'Brien and asked that he be sent here for a show. The National Wrestling association has rated Bozzell as one of the leading contenders for Champion LeRoy McGuirk's title.

Featuring the deadly "rocking leg split," Bozzell is considered by critics one of the cleverest veterans in the twist-um-up game. He is 35 years old, tips the beam at 178 pounds and has been wrestling for 18 years. He entered the ring as an amateur fighter at the beginning of his spectacular career and is able to take care of himself against the roughest of opponents. He is an Oklahoman.

Hackney looked exceptionally fast in beating Keys last week. In fact, it was a case of too much speed and too much experience for the New Jersey boy. Hackney lost a hard-fought bout to Champion McGuirk last week, the light heavyweight kingpin beating him after Hackney had won the first fall.

"Tiger" Joe Taylor of Kansas City is one of these dumpy muscle twisters which have made the game famous. He is one of the most compact wrestlers in the business. Having practically no neck is a great advantage in the neck-twisting racket, and his peculiar build makes him one of the attractions of the light heavyweight ranks.

Taylor at times has proven to be quite a flying tackle expert when he is grappling with a taller opponent, and with that devastating lunge, he has knocked out more than one bone grabber. He weighs 177 pounds.

Kansan Easily Beats Rival In Mile Race; Records Are Broken

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 28.—(AP)—After a drab beginning, the 40th Pennsylvania relay carnival was brought to a brilliant, record-smashing conclusion today before 45,000 spectators, one of the biggest crowds that has ever witnessed a track meet in the east.

As the sun and a brisk breeze completed the job of drying out a field that was a quagmire the day before, athletes from the south and middle-west combined with the eastern brigade to crack a total of five major records in a succession of thrilling performances.

Glenn Cunningham, the Kansas Cyclone, added another gem to his mile-running crown by taking the measure of his slim Pennsylvania rival, Gene Venzke, in the track record time of 4:11.8.

Unable to win a single relay feature since 1922, Cornell celebrated its return to the heights by bagging three titles. The big red sprinters romped off with the 880-yard championship today after capturing the 440 yesterday and the Cornell timber-toppers captured the 480-yard shuttle hurdle relay in the new carnival record time of 1:02.4.

Charles Hornbostel helped Indiana take both the one and two-mile championships this afternoon. Ivan Fuqua ran an anchor 440 in 48 seconds flat, fastest of the day, as the Hoosiers posted a 3:18.7 performance in the mile.

Two stalwart southerners, competing in special events, blasted carnival records as Ralston Legore of the University of North Carolina hurled the javelin 214 feet, 8 7-8 inches, and M. Zori of North Carolina State sent the discus spinning 151 feet, 1 inch. A third, Chunky Earl Widmyer of the University of Maryland, dished away from all rivals in the 100-meter final to whip Dick Hardy of Cornell, intercollegiate AAA champion, by three yards, in the good time of 10.7 seconds.

Legore had to surpass himself to beat his closest rival, Horace O'Dell of Manhattan who also eclipsed the former javelin record with a toss of 208 feet 8 inches.

George Spitz, Lanky New York university jumper, accounted for the remaining record when he negotiated 6 feet 7 1-4 inches in the high jump, beating his own previous carnival mark by nearly two inches. After beating Howard Spencer, Geneva college negro, and Murphy of Notre Dame, Spitz set sail for a world record attempt. He cleared 6 feet 8 1-4 inches in an exhibition jump before failing three times with the bar at 6 feet 10 inches.

LOOKOUTS WIN ARGUMENT

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 28.—(AP)—In a game played over the protest of Manager Charley Dressen of Nashville from the sixth inning, Chattanooga defeated Nashville 4 to 2 today.

The protest and ensuing arguments in which players participated, tied up the game for 21 minutes in the sixth. The trouble arose when Martin, Nashville third baseman, was at bat with three balls and two strikes against him and with Cuccinello, Vols second baseman, on first.

On the next pitch, Cuccinello dashed for second. The Lookouts catcher whipped the ball to second. Umpire Williams called Cuccinello out. But Umpire McLarry called the pitch a ball which automatically put Cuccinello on second and Martin on first.

Catcher Phillips and Manager Zinn Beck of the Lookouts protested the ball had tipped Martin's bat. The umpires conferred and ruled both Martin and Cuccinello out. Dressen went on the field to protest, and players on both sides joined the argument, but the ruling stood.

Another Little Man Takes Crack At Jimmy McLarnin

NEW YORK, April 28.—There ought to be a commission to protect young fighters against boxing commissions, managers and matchmakers.

Such a board would take Barney Ross by the hand and lead him away from that inequitable affair with Jimmy McLarnin here on May 28.

The bout is unfair to everybody except McLarnin. It is unfair to the sport because it pies up two divisions. It is unfair to Bep Van Klaveren, the Hollander, a challenger of McLarnin's size. It is unfair to Tony Canzoneri and Frankie Klick, who merited meetings with the lightweight leader.

But most of all it is unjust to Ross, who runs the risk of having a brilliant career ruined.

There is nothing in the Chicagoan's record to indicate that he belongs in there with McLarnin at even weights, let alone in a skirmish in which he is conceding ten or more pounds.

"Only one thing can happen," says Billy Roche, the veteran referee, shaking his head, sadly. "Poor little Ross will be knocked flatter than a flounder."

Since his bantam days, McLarnin usually has had advantages on the scales. The late Pancho Villa, Buddy Taylor, Joe Glick, Ray Miller, Sammy Mandell, Al Singer, Billy Petrolle and Sammy Fuller each gave him plenty of pull in poundage.

Shamus hasn't always fared so well in marching front and center on even terms. Mandell cuffed his ears on the one occasion on which they started from taw, and Lou Brouillard belted him to a fare-thee-well.

But none of McLarnin's opponents has been asked to spot him as much weight as Ross and smash precedent to a pulp. A lightweight champion has yet to whip the boss of the next heavier brigade.

McLarnin has only to make 145. He weighed only a fraction of a pound more in acquiring the welter wreath by twice dropping and stopping the husky southpaw, Young Corbett III, in 2 minutes and 37 seconds in Los Angeles on the twenty-ninth day of last May.

The Irish-born warrior came in at 146 three years ago for one of his sorties with Petrolle. Experts will tell you that he will pick up at least three pounds between weighing-in and ring time.

Ross' recent performances in California made it plain that he is far from being sharp when scaling more than 136.

McLarnin will have been off the firing line for one day less than a year when he unlimbers his heavy artillery against Ross. That is the only argument offered by the few professing to believe the Lollapaloosa of the Loop can prevail. But those pointing to the fact that ring rust frequently sets in with idleness might interview Petrolle, who speaks from experience.

"The most remarkable thing about McLarnin is that his timing is perfect after long lay-offs," old Uncle Will would assert. Despite eleven years of warfare, McLarnin is only 27, and his comparatively few battles have been carefully spaced.

If he was slipping in the Corbett contest, a lot of the boys would like to be on the same toboggan.

The joust between Jack Britton and Benny Leonard—the one in which Benny took a poke at Jack while the 147-pound foreman was on one knee—may well be thrown out.

Roche goes 'way back—to March 10, 1899—in recalling an engagement similar to the one that is to bring out McLarnin and Ross. It was on that night in San Francisco that brave George Lavigne assayed to lift Mysterious Billy Smith's crown.

A one-sided duel ended in the fourteenth round, when the wide-shouldered walloper of Maine turned to the Saginaw Kid's brother and second, and shouted, "Do you want me to kill him?"

Roche doesn't mention a much more recent case. Billy's eyes haven't functioned so well in late years. But those who saw little Singer laying in the resin pounding the sides of his neck after being struck back of the ear by McLarnin never will forget the sight.

And Smith and McLarnin did 142 pounds for the tragedies that left Lavigne and Singer definitely through.

L. S. U. BREAKS THREE RECORDS IN DRAKE RELAYS

TWO-MILE RELAY, SHOT AND JAVELIN MARKS BETTERED

U. C. L. A. Quartet Breaks 11-Year Record In One-Mile Relay

By Charles W. Dunkley
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

DES MOINES, Ia., April 28.—(AP)—They waited 11 years for a quartette of quarter milers to come along and break the one-mile relay record at the Drake relay carnival.

Today it happened, when four fleet-footed youngsters from the University of California at Los Angeles, climaxed the silver anniversary of the Drake games by smashing the record hung up by the University of Iowa in 1923. The record was broken in the last race of the day to the excitement of 18,000 spectators, greatest crowd to witness the west's oldest athletic carnival since it was started 25 years ago.

The California quartette, composed of James Miller, Sinclair Lott, Ray Vejar, and James Luvalle, clipped a full second off the mark hug up by the Hawkeyes, running the distance in 3:15.9.

The finish also saw the remarkable come-back of Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette's negro sprinter, co-holder of a world's record for the 100-yard dash. Metcalfe, despite a bleeding muscle in his right leg, won the dash today for the third consecutive year, beating his field to the tape in 9.7, just two tenths of a second off the meet record.

With his right thigh swathed in bandages, Metcalfe edged out Hall of Kansas in the last ten yards after he had run abreast of the Jayhawker from the start. His time was considered exceptionally fast because he ran directly into a six mile wind. In his previous victories at Drake, Metcalfe won the century in the record time of 9.8 in 1933.

The Marquette negro after winning the century ran as anchor man on Marquette's relay team and sprinted to win the 440-yard relay by a margin of two yards ahead of Eckert of Illinois. Metcalfe not only made up a handicap of two yards in seizing the baton from Jessel, but came one with an amazing burst of speed to enable the Marquette team to win the race in 41.8, only a fifth of a second off the meet record.

The man mountain from the south, 275-pound Jack Torrance, failed in his efforts to smash his amazing mark of 55 feet 1 1-2 inches in the shot put, made in the preliminaries yesterday. This ponderous blond athlete from Louisiana State university, made six attempts to better his mark in the finals today and in all of them, with one exception, threw the 16-pound missile out into space better than 51 feet.

New records were established in the one-mile university relay, the javlin throw, two mile university relay, the two mile relay for class A high schools, the one mile relay for class A high schools and the university half mile relay was tied.

The crack Louisiana State team, holders of the National Collegiate championship, accounted for three of the five new records established in the two days of competition. Torrance won two events, the discus and the shot, setting a world's record in the latter event. Nathan Blair, also of Louisiana, set a new meet record in the javelin, when he heaved the spear 209.21 feet in his final attempt. John Kuck, competing for the Kansas State Teachers college at Emporia, Kans., established the former record of 207 feet 7 inches, eight years ago.

"There is nothing I can say because I do not know what Colonel Hammond is going to do. A FIGHTER

John J. McGraw apparently never became reconciled to the game of baseball as played by the so-called moderns.

In an article written shortly before his death, which represented his last public words on the subject of baseball as well as his first utterly frank and unreserved discussion of those things in his career which made him baseball's stormy petrel, McGraw told the world how distasteful the new game really was to him. The article was called "Big League Stuff" and appeared in Liberty magazine.

"It isn't the same game any more," McGraw wrote. "It isn't my game, the game in which you could play for a one run lead and hold it. Even the players are different—they are not the same intensive students of the game. Baseball brains have been smothered under a deluge of hits."

In this game, McGraw advised Connie Mack that it is no more his game now than his (McGraw's). He flatly suggested that Connie quit the game. He wrote:

"And these 'hand shaking' ball players who think more about the size of their pay check than they do of fighting tooth and nail to win ball games are not our kind of ball players, Connie—you know it as well as I do. Why I recall the time when I instructed my players not to speak to yours on the playing field unless it was to hurl an insult."

Surprising, and commanding of serious thought is this statement:

"Everything considered, I have no hesitation in declaring that the Baltimore Orioles of 1894, '95, and '96 is the outstanding ball club of baseball history. It would be the outstanding ball club even today, under modern conditions. Why, that club had a team batting average of .356. Give them the lively ball to hit and you'd never get them out. The nearest approach to that club was the Athletics of 1911.

"The players win games now by the crude and primitive method of striding up to the plate and slamming the ball out of the park—and there is no better method under existing conditions. The so-called 'master mind' on the bench has lost his grip on the ball game."

And thus John McGraw died with an indictment of modern baseball on his lips. Perhaps he was right, after all.

BATTING LEAD IS HELD BY TRAYNOR

Pittsburgh Infielder Hits .556; Reynolds Leads American

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—After a week and a half of the usual early season variety of clouting, Harold (Pie) Traynor of Pittsburgh and Carl Reynolds of Boston's Red Sox today were established temporarily as the leading batters of the two major leagues.

Traynor, with a .556 average, led the National league field by over 100 points but Reynolds, topping the American league at .455, was closely pursued by a teammate, Bill Werber, the first semi-official compilations of the batting records after Friday's abbreviated program, revealed today.

In addition to the pace-setting veterans, Traynor and Reynolds, the list of leaders included such old standbys as Babe Ruth and Bill Dickey of the Yankees, Rick Ferrell of the Red Sox, Hack Wilson of Brooklyn, Freddy Lindstrom of Pittsburgh, Chuck Klein of the Cubs, and Mel Ott of the Giants. Only two first year men, Zeke Bonura of the White Sox and Len Koenecke of the Dodgers, held places among the "first ten." The most notable absentee was Jimmie Foxx, last year's American league champion.

Klein, champion batsman a year ago, led his league in four departments with ten runs, 12 runs batted in, 15 hits and four homers. Werber, with 16 hits, eight of them doubles, and Reynolds, with 12 runs batted in and two triples, were the only double headers in the American league's slugging departments.

The leading ten batters in each major league follow:

HOT SPRINGS, Va., April 28.—(AP)—The men's singles titlist of the Virginia state tennis tournament remained undetermined tonight, but Wilmer Allison of Austin, Texas, and John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, who were due to meet as the finalists, paired in the doubles finals to whip the nation's first two ranking amateurs, Frank Shields of New York and Lester Stoefen of Los Angeles, 5-7, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Cancellation of the singles events became necessary when Shields and Stoefen showed up for the doubles match more than an hour late. Whether the singles would be played off tomorrow remained undecided tonight.

Williams Meets Bozzell In Stadium Show Monday

Hackney And Taylor Tangle In Semi-Final Of Mat Program

The second wrestling show under the new booking arrangement will be held Monday night at Roosevelt stadium, with Paul Bozzell and Lefty Williams meeting in the main event and Stanley Hackney and Tiger Joe Taylor tangling in the semi-final. The show will get underway at 8:15 o'clock.

Both Williams and Hackney showed here last week beating Bert Keys in the main event and Williams losing to Bob Montgomery in the semi-final.

Williams conceded too much weight to Montgomery last week and expects to make a better showing against Bozzell. Lefty, who won 51 consecutive victories in the prize ring before entering the mat game, is a good rough and tumble grappler and he had the crowd with him against the Hot Springs husky.

Bozzell is said to be an exceptionally clever matman. Promoter Guy Owen saw him in action against Pat O'Brien and asked that he be sent here for a show. The National Wrestling association has rated Bozzell as one of the leading contenders for Champion LeRoy McGuirk's title.

Featuring the deadly "rocking leg split," Bozzell is considered by critics one of the cleverest veterans in the twist-um-up game. He is 35 years old, tips the beam at 178 pounds and has been wrestling for 18 years. He entered the ring as an amateur fighter at the beginning of his spectacular career and is able to take care of himself against the roughest of opponents. He is an Oklahoman.

Hackney looked exceptionally fast in beating Keys last week. In fact, it was a case of too much speed and too much experience for the New Jersey boy. Hackney lost a hard-fought bout to Champion McGuirk last week, the light heavyweight kingpin beating him after Hackney had won the first fall.

"Tiger" Joe Taylor of Kansas City is one of these dumpy muscle twisters which have made the game famous. He is one of the most compact wrestlers in the business. Having practically no neck is a great advantage in the neck-twisting racket, and his peculiar build makes him one of the attractions of the light heavyweight ranks.

Taylor at times has proven to be quite a flying tackle expert when he is grappling with a taller opponent, and with that devastating lunge, he has knocked out more than one bone grabber. He weighs 177 pounds.

Kansan Easily Beats Rival In Mile Race; Records Are Broken

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 28.—(AP)—After a drab beginning, the 40th Pennsylvania relay carnival was brought to a brilliant, record-smashing conclusion today before 45,000 spectators, one of the biggest crowds that has ever witnessed a track meet in the east.

As the sun and a brisk breeze completed the job of drying out a field that was a quagmire the day before, athletes from the south and middle-west combined with the eastern brigade to crack a total of five major records in a succession of thrilling performances.

Glenn Cunningham, the Kansas Cyclone, added another gem to his mile-running crown by taking the measure of his slim Pennsylvania rival, Gene Venzke, in the track record time of 4:11.8.

Unable to win a single relay feature since 1922, Cornell celebrated its return to the heights by bagging three titles. The big red sprinters romped off with the 880-yard championship today after capturing the 440 yesterday and the Cornell timber-toppers captured the 480-yard shuttle hurdle relay in the new carnival record time of 1:02.4.

Charles Hornbostel helped Indiana take both the one and two-mile championships this afternoon. Ivan Fuqua ran an anchor 440 in 48 seconds flat, fastest of the day, as the Hoosiers posted a 3:18.7 performance in the mile.

Two stalwart southerners, competing in special events, blasted carnival records as Ralston Legore of the University of North Carolina hurled the javelin 214 feet, 8 7-8 inches, and M. Zori of North Carolina State sent the discus spinning 151 feet, 1 inch. A third, Chunky Earl Widmyer of the University of Maryland, dished away from all rivals in the 100-meter final to whip Dick Hardy of Cornell, intercollegiate AAA champion, by three yards, in the good time of 10.7 seconds.

Legore had to surpass himself to beat his closest rival, Horace O'Dell of Manhattan who also eclipsed the former javelin record with a toss of 208 feet 8 inches.

George Spitz, Lanky New York university jumper, accounted for the remaining record when he negotiated 6 feet 7 1-4 inches in the high jump, beating his own previous carnival mark by nearly two inches. After beating Howard Spencer, Geneva college negro, and Murphy of Notre Dame, Spitz set sail for a world record attempt. He cleared 6 feet 8 1-4 inches in an exhibition jump before failing three times with the bar at 6 feet 10 inches.

LOOKOUTS WIN ARGUMENT

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 28.—(AP)—In a game played over the protest of Manager Charley Dressen of Nashville from the sixth inning, Chattanooga defeated Nashville 4 to 2 today.

The protest and ensuing arguments in which players participated, tied up the game for 21 minutes in the sixth. The trouble arose when Martin, Nashville third baseman, was at bat with three balls and two strikes against him and with Cuccinello, Vols second baseman, on first.

On the next pitch, Cuccinello dashed for second. The Lookouts catcher whipped the ball to second. Umpire Williams called Cuccinello out. But Umpire McLarry called the pitch a ball which automatically put Cuccinello on second and Martin on first.

Catcher Phillips and Manager Zinn Beck of the Lookouts protested the ball had tipped Martin's bat. The umpires conferred and ruled both Martin and Cuccinello out. Dressen went on the field to protest, and players on both sides joined the argument, but the ruling stood.

Another Little Man Takes Crack At Jimmy McLarnin

NEW YORK, April 28.—There ought to be a commission to protect young fighters against boxing commissions, managers and matchmakers.

Such a board would take Barney Ross by the hand and lead him away from that inequitable affair with Jimmy McLarnin here on May 28.

The bout is unfair to everybody except McLarnin. It is unfair to the sport because it pies up two divisions. It is unfair to Bep Van Klaveren, the Hollander, a challenger of McLarnin's size. It is unfair to Tony Canzoneri and Frankie Klick, who merited meetings with the lightweight leader.

But most of all it is unjust to Ross, who runs the risk of having a brilliant career ruined.

There is nothing in the Chicagoan's record to indicate that he belongs in there with McLarnin at even weights, let alone in a skirmish in which he is conceding ten or more pounds.

"Only one thing can happen," says Billy Roche, the veteran referee, shaking his head, sadly. "Poor little Ross will be knocked flatter than a flounder."

Since his bantam days, McLarnin usually has had advantages on the scales. The late Pancho Villa, Buddy Taylor, Joe Glick, Ray Miller, Sammy Mandell, Al Singer, Billy Petrolle and Sammy Fuller each gave him plenty of pull in poundage.

Shamus hasn't always fared so well in marching front and center on even terms. Mandell cuffed his ears on the one occasion on which they started from taw, and Lou Brouillard belted him to a fare-thee-well.

But none of McLarnin's opponents has been asked to spot him as much weight as Ross and smash precedent to a pulp. A lightweight champion has yet to whip the boss of the next heavier brigade.

McLarnin has only to make 145. He weighed only a fraction of a pound more in acquiring the welter wreath by twice dropping and stopping the husky southpaw, Young Corbett III, in 2 minutes and 37 seconds in Los Angeles on the twenty-ninth day of last May.

The Irish-born warrior came in at 146 three years ago for one of his sorties with Petrolle. Experts will tell you that he will pick up at least three pounds between weighing-in and ring time.

Ross' recent performances in California made it plain that he is far from being sharp when scaling more than 136.

McLarnin will have been off the firing line for one day less than a year when he unlimbers his heavy artillery against Ross. That is the only argument offered by the few professing to believe the Lollapalooza of the Loop can prevail. But those pointing to the fact that ring rust frequently sets in with idleness might interview Petrolle, who speaks from experience.

"The most remarkable thing about McLarnin is that his timing is perfect after long lay-offs," old Uncle Will would assert. Despite eleven years of warfare, McLarnin is only 27, and his comparatively few battles have been carefully spaced.

If he was slipping in the Corbett contest, a lot of the boys would like to be on the same toboggan.

The joust between Jack Britton and Benny Leonard—the one in which Benny took a poke at Jack while the 147-pound foreman was on one knee—may well be thrown out.

Roche goes 'way back—to March 10, 1899—in recalling an engagement similar to the one that is to bring out McLarnin and Ross. It was on that night in San Francisco that brave George Lavigne assayed to lift Mysterious Billy Smith's crown.

A one-sided duel ended in the fourteenth round, when the wide-shouldered walloper of Maine turned to the Saginaw Kid's brother and second, and shouted, "Do you want me to kill him?"

Roche doesn't mention a much more recent case. Billy's eyes haven't functioned so well in late years. But those who saw little Singer laying in the resin pounding the sides of his neck after being struck back of the ear by McLarnin never will forget the sight.

And Smith and McLarnin did 142 pounds for the tragedies that left Lavigne and Singer definitely through.

Four-Run Rally Breaks Up Duel Between Giants Ace And Brandt

BOSTON, April 28.—(AP)—Melvin Ott, the sturdy right fielder of the New York Giants, provided the blow that gave the world champions a 4 to 1 victory today in their first Boston appearance of the season and gave Lefty Carl Hubbell his third triumph on the hill.

Ott belted a home run with two on bases in the fifth inning to provide the grand climax of a four-run rally that broke up a southpaw pitching duel between Hubbell and Ed (Dutch) Brandt.

A crowd of about 10,000 braved near freezing weather to see the game.

Trailing 5-2 in the fourth as the result of Hack Wilson's first inning double with the bases full and homers by Danny Taylor and Sam Leslie in the third, the Phils put on a six-run outburst against three Dodger pitchers to take the lead.

FOXX HITS HOMER WITH BASES FULL BUT MACKS LOSE

Senators Nose Out Athletics 7 To 6 In Free Hitting Game

WASHINGTON, April 28. — (AP) — Jimmy Foxx picked a propitious moment today for his third homer of the season, smacking the ball over the right field fence when the bases were jammed with Athletics, but Washington's reviving Senators came back with a rally that won, 7 to 6.

Washington went out to win the ball game in the first inning and for a time it looked like no contest. With two on, Manush failed twice to lay down a sacrifice bunt and then hit a homer. Travis, the Senators' new hope at third, contributed a single and the score was 4 to 0 before the inning ended.

MOORE DEVELOPS STAR HURDLERS

Hardin And Fisher Upholds Coach's Reputation As Mentor

BATON ROUGE, April 28.—(Special.)—The difficult task of upholding Bernie Moore's reputation as the premier hurdle coach in the country falls on the capable shoulders of two rangy Louisiana State athletes, Glenn (Slats) Hardin and George Fisher. The job will be especially difficult for the latter, a "Moore-made" athlete, who never competed in the hurdles until enrolling at L. S. U. Yet Coach Moore has unlimited confidence in Fisher.

Coach Moore's record as a developer of hurdlers is remarkable in that he has developed topnotch timber toppers out of youngsters whose freshman performances were enough to discourage any mentor. A thorough knowledge of hurdling form, plus willing pupils and patience are the secrets of his success.

Last year in Hardin and Al Moreau, he turned out the national intercollegiate 220-yard low hurdle champion, the national A. A. U. 400-meter kingpin and the runner-up in the high hurdles in the national intercollegiate games.

Moreau, who ran the second fastest time of any collegian last year, 14.2, was a 17 flat hurdler when Coach Moore first took charge. Likewise, Fisher was a 17-second or worse high hurdler when he first came under Moore's wing. Last year Fisher was credited with a 14.4 effort, the third best time of any college hurdler.

Hardin ran the lows last year faster than any other college athlete, 22.8, while Moreau turned in the fifth best time, 23.5, scored against Tulane when Hardin was out with injuries.

This season Moore expects Fisher, who is now a senior, to do better than last season and perhaps equal Moreau's time of 14.2, which incidentally equals the recognized world's record.

Hardin, a junior, is co-holder of the world's record in the 400-meters and twice last year shattered the recognized world mark in the lows, turning in 22.8 and 22.9 efforts.

DIXIE SPORTS

By Dillon Graham
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Louisiana State university is likely to win the Southeastern conference track championship by the widest margin in the history of any Dixie meet . . . the chaps who delve in statistics wouldn't be surprised to see the Tigers win no less than eleven out of a possible 15 first places. The events are: Quarter-mile, half-mile, mile, two-mile, low hurdles, high hurdles, mile relay, broad jump, discus, javelin and shot put.

Injuries jinxed the Alabama basketball team, but it went on to win the Southeastern crown. . . . Now, with victory almost in sight, an attack of appendicitis has stricken Legrant Scott, the Tide's best hurler. . . . The jinx still is on hand but Alabama may again escape it . . . for figurers figure the Crimsons need to win only two of their remaining games—all with Mississippi State—to clinch the title.

Charles Yates, one of Dixie's best amateur golfers, plans to enter the trans-Mississippi, Western, National amateur, National open, National intercollegiate and possibly the Southern and Georgia tournaments this season . . . and he'll be a threat in any and all.

Atlanta fans have been handing the Bronx cheer to Manager Spencer Abbott. His retort: "Let them growl. I can take it. I'd rather have a thousand razzing than two hundred cheering."

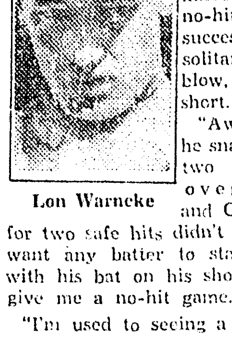
Happy Campbell, Alabama third sacker, hit for .452 in a dozen games. . . . Louisiana made nine errors in one contest. . . . Don Hutson, Alabama outfielder, stole 15 bases in 12 games, and Tex Chandler, the Tide catcher, has not allowed a single base to be stolen against Alabama. . . . Auburn, Louisiana and Kentucky track teams are unbeaten in dual meets this season.

Warneke Doesn't Want Any No-Hit Gift Games

Cub Hurler Believes Batter Should Be In There Trying, Too

By Paul Mickelsen
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, April 28.—Lonnie Warneke doesn't want something for nothing—and that goes for no-hit games in baseball.



Lon Warneke

As a crowd of sympathizers lined up for about the tenth time since the tall mountaineer from Arkansas missed his second no-hit game in succession by a solitary, worthless blow, he cut them short.

"Aw, cut it out," he snapped. "Those two games are over. Comorosky and Collins hit me for two safe hits didn't they? I don't want any batter to stand up there with his bat on his shoulder just to give me a no-hit game."

"I'm used to seeing a lot of funny things in baseball," the big Cub righthander explained later as he took a man's sized bite from his plug of tobacco, "but the booing these fans gave Comorosky at the opening game when he got a hit off me was the funniest of all. What do they expect? A baseball player, who is getting paid for doing his best, to stand up there and take three strikes just because some guy has a chance for a no-hit game? Nuts! That's how I feel about it. I don't want a no-hit game that bad. No sir! I try not to give the batter anything. Why should they give me anything?"

"How did you feel when you had only two more outs to go for a no-hit game and then had Comorosky dribble out a hit?" Warneke was asked by a listener.

"Didn't make any difference to me," he replied as he walked away. "We won the game, that's all I wanted to do anyway."

A faster-breaking curve and the big comfort of having a better team behind him, defensively and offensively, are the reasons for Warneke's spectacular start this season, Manager Charlie Grimm believes.

"Lonnie's always had a marvelous change of pace, a fine fast ball and an ice water brain in the pinches," Grimm explained. "But this season, his fast ball is breaking like lightning. He gets a little better grip on that new ball and can make it dance. Then, too, it is a great advantage for any pitcher to know that he has a tight defensive club behind him and a club that can go out and get runs for him. With Chuck Klein in there and the best reserves we've ever had to bring up the rear, Lonnie has an opportunity to try out some of the pitches he always wanted to experiment with."

"Warneke is only starting," chimed in Charlie Root, dean of the Cub pitching staff. "While I think a pitcher has to have a lot of luck to escape with a no-hit game, you can get your typewriter all oiled up and ready for a story every time he starts this season. He's one of the greatest pitchers I've ever seen."

Clarks Lumberjacks To Play Swartz Nine Today

CLARKS, April 28.—(Special.)—The Clarks Lumberjacks will play the Swartz Carbon Blackers on the Clarks diamond Sunday afternoon at 3:00 p.m. in what is expected to be one of the best games of the season.

The Lumberjacks are in a tie for first place with Fairbanks and will be out trying to win and increase their standing in the flag race. The local team boasts the league leading hitter in Craig, Clarks brilliant third baseman, who will be out there trying to continue his terrific hitting against the visiting hurlers. The Lumberjacks were defeated in the play-off with Swartz last season and want to get revenge for those defeats.

The Swartz team boasts two of the league's leading hurlers in Cordell and Wilder and probably one or both will see action in this game. The Carbon Blackers are expected to present a heavy hitting aggregation for this game.

Richbourg To Hurl For Vidalia Tigers Today

VIDALIA, April 28.—(Special)—Vidalia's Tigers with a new hurler, "Foots" Richbourg, leading hurler of the Big Six league from Oak Grove last season, will inaugurate their 1934 baseball season in Natchez Sunday afternoon with their old rivals, the Natchez Indians.

Richbourg did not lose a game in the Big Six league last season and the southpaw hopes to best Ted Carr, a right-hander, who will start for the Redskins of Natchez.

Manager Fanny Martin has been working the Tigers overtime and reports all of the players with the exception of three veterans in good shape. Former Manager Fred Falkenheiner, veteran infielder, who has been ill during the past year, will be unable to play as will two other veterans, Bill Boatner, an outfielder, and William Murray, catcher, all of whom have been in bad health and have not been able to get in shape for the first contest.

OLE MISS TRACK TEAM BEATS TIDE

Four-Run Rally Breaks Up Duel Between Giants Ace And Brandt

BOSTON, April 28.—(AP)—Melvin Ott, the sturdy right fielder of the New York Giants, provided the blow that gave the world champions a 4 to 1 victory today in their first Boston appearance of the season and gave Lefty Carl Hubbell his third triumph on the hill.

Ott belted a home run with two on bases in the fifth inning to provide the grand climax of a four-run rally that broke up a southpaw pitching duel between Hubbell and Ed (Dutch) Brandt.

A crowd of about 10,000 braved near freezing weather to see the game.

PHILS RALLY TO WIN

PHILADELPHIA, April 28.—(AP)—The Phillies came up with their second victory of the National league season today, beating the Brooklyn Dodgers 10 to 8 in a free-hitting, loose fielding match which saw nine pitchers take their turns on the hill.

Trailing 5-2 in the fourth as the result of Hack Wilson's first inning double with the bases full and homers by Danny Taylor and Sam Leslie in the third, the Phils put on a six-run outburst against three Dodger pitchers to take the lead.

FOXX HITS HOMER WITH BASES FULL BUT MACKS LOSE

Senators Nose Out Athletics 7 To 6 In Free Hitting Game

WASHINGTON, April 28. — (AP) — Jimmy Foxx picked a propitious moment today for his third homer of the season, smacking the ball over the right field fence when the bases were jammed with Athletics, but Washington's reviving Senators came back with a rally that won, 7 to 6.

Washington went out to win the ball game in the first inning and for a time it looked like no contest. With two on, Manush failed twice to lay down a sacrifice bunt and then hit a homer. Travis, the Senators' new hope at third, contributed a single and the score was 4 to 0 before the inning ended.

MOORE DEVELOPS STAR HURDLERS

Hardin And Fisher Upholds Coach's Reputation As Mentor

BATON ROUGE, April 28.—(Special.)—The difficult task of upholding Bernie Moore's reputation as the premier hurdle coach in the country falls on the capable shoulders of two rangy Louisiana State athletes, Glenn (Slats) Hardin and George Fisher. The job will be especially difficult for the latter, a "Moore-made" athlete, who never competed in the hurdles until enrolling at L. S. U. Yet Coach Moore has unlimited confidence in Fisher.

Coach Moore's record as a developer of hurdlers is remarkable in that he has developed topnotch timber toppers out of youngsters whose freshman performances were enough to discourage any mentor. A thorough knowledge of hurdling form, plus willing pupils and patience are the secrets of his success.

Last year in Hardin and Al Moreau, he turned out the national intercollegiate 220-yard low hurdle champion, the national A. A. U. 400-meter kingpin and the runner-up in the high hurdles in the national intercollegiate games.

Moreau, who ran the second fastest time of any collegian last year, 14.2, was a 17 flat hurdler when Coach Moore first took charge. Likewise, Fisher was a 17-second or worse high hurdler when he first came under Moore's wing. Last year Fisher was credited with a 14.4 effort, the third best time of any college hurdler.

Hardin ran the lows last year faster than any other college athlete, 22.8, while Moreau turned in the fifth best time, 23.5, scored against Tulane when Hardin was out with injuries.

This season Moore expects Fisher, who is now a senior, to do better than last season and perhaps equal Moreau's time of 14.2, which incidentally equals the recognized world's record.

Hardin, a junior, is co-holder of the world's record in the 400-meters and twice last year shattered the recognized world mark in the lows, turning in 22.8 and 22.9 efforts.

DIXIE SPORTS

By Dillon Graham
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Louisiana State university is likely to win the Southeastern conference track championship by the widest margin in the history of any Dixie meet . . . the chaps who delve in statistics wouldn't be surprised to see the Tigers win no less than eleven out of a possible 15 first places. The events are: Quarter-mile, half-mile, mile, two-mile, low hurdles, high hurdles, mile relay, broad jump, discus, javelin and shot put.

Injuries jinxed the Alabama basketball team, but it went on to win the Southeastern crown. . . . Now, with victory almost in sight, an attack of appendicitis has stricken Legrant Scott, the Tide's best hurler. . . . The jinx still is on hand but Alabama may again escape it . . . for figurers figure the Crimsons need to win only two of their remaining games—all with Mississippi State—to clinch the title.

Charles Yates, one of Dixie's best amateur golfers, plans to enter the trans-Mississippi, Western, National amateur, National open, National intercollegiate and possibly the Southern and Georgia tournaments this season . . . and he'll be a threat in any and all.

Atlanta fans have been handing the Bronx cheer to Manager Spencer Abbott. His retort: "Let them growl. I can take it. I'd rather have a thousand razzing than two hundred cheering."

Happy Campbell, Alabama third sacker, hit for .452 in a dozen games. . . . Louisiana made nine errors in one contest. . . . Don Hutson, Alabama outfielder, stole 15 bases in 12 games, and Tex Chandler, the Tide catcher, has not allowed a single base to be stolen against Alabama. . . . Auburn, Louisiana and Kentucky track teams are unbeaten in dual meets this season.

Warneke Doesn't Want Any No-Hit Gift Games

By Paul Mickelsen

Lon Warneke

CHICAGO, April 28.—Lonnie Warneke doesn't want something for nothing—and that goes for no-hit games in baseball.

As a crowd of sympathizers lined up for about the tenth time since the tall mountaineer from Arkansas missed his second no-hit game in succession by a solitary, worthless blow, he cut them short.

"Aw, cut it out," he snapped. "Those two games are over Comorosky and Collins hit me for two safe hits didn't they? I don't want any batter to stand up there with his bat on his shoulder just to give me a no-hit game."

"I'm used to seeing a lot of funny things in baseball," the big Cub righthander explained later as he took a man's sized bite from his plug of tobacco, "but the booing these fans gave Comorosky at the opening game when he got a hit off me was the funniest of all. What do they expect? A baseball player, who is getting paid for doing his best, to stand up there and take three strikes just because some guy has a chance for a no-hit game? Nuts! That's how I feel about it. I don't want a no-hit game that bad. No sir! I try not to give the batter anything. Why should they give me anything?"

"How did you feel when you had only two more outs to go for a no-hit game and then had Comorosky dribble out a hit?" Warneke was asked by a listener.

"Didn't make any difference to me," he replied as he walked away. "We won the game, that's all I wanted to do anyway."

A faster-breaking curve and the big comfort of having a better team behind him, defensively and offensively, are the reasons for Warneke's spectacular start this season, Manager Charlie Grimm believes.

"Lonnie's always had a marvelous change of pace, a fine fast ball and an ice water brain in the pinches," Grimm explained. "But this season, his fast ball is breaking like lightning. He gets a little better grip on that new ball and can make it dance Then, too, it is a great advantage for any pitcher to know that he has a tight defensive club behind him and a club that can go out and get runs for him. With Chuck Klein in there and the best reserves we've ever had to bring up the rear, Lonnie has an opportunity to try out some of the pitches he always wanted to experiment with."

"Warneke is only starting," chimed in Charlie Root, dean of the Cub pitching staff. "While I think a pitcher has to have a lot of luck to escape with a no-hit game, you can get your typewriter all oiled up and ready for a story every time he starts this season. He's one of the greatest pitchers I've ever seen."

Clarks Lumberjacks To Play Swartz Nine Today

CLARKS, April 28.—(Special.)—The Clarks Lumberjacks will play the Swartz Carbon Blackers on the Clarks diamond Sunday afternoon at 3:00 p.m. in what is expected to be one of the best games of the season.

The Lumberjacks are in a tie for first place with Fairbanks and will be out trying to win and increase their standing in the flag race. The local team boasts the league leading hitter in Craig, Clarks brilliant third baseman, who will be out there trying to continue his terrific hitting against the visiting hurlers. The Lumberjacks were defeated in the play-off with Swartz last season and want to get revenge for those defeats.

The Swartz team boasts two of the league's leading hurlers in Cordell and Wilder and probably one or both will see action in this game. The Carbon Blackers are expected to present a heavy hitting aggregation for this game.

Richbourg To Hurl For Vidalia Tigers Today

VIDALIA, April 28.—(Special)—Vidalia's Tigers with a new hurler, "Foots" Richbourg, leading hurler of the Big Six league from Oak Grove last season, will inaugurate their 1934 baseball season in Natchez Sunday afternoon with their old rivals, the Natchez Indians.

Richbourg did not lose a game in the Big Six league last season and the southpaw hopes to best Ted Carr, a right-hander, who will start for the Redskins of Natchez.

Manager Fanny Martin has been working the Tigers overtime and reports all of the players with the exception of three veterans in good shape. Former Manager Fred Falkenheiner, veteran infielder, who has been ill during the past year, will be unable to play as will two other veterans, Bill Boatner, an outfielder, and William Murray, catcher, all of whom have been in bad health and have not been able to get in shape for the first contest.

BRITAIN'S HITLER?

England's Fascist movement was launched with great impressiveness when more than 10,000 men and women crowded London's Albert Hall to hear Sir Oswald Mosely (above), leader of the British Black Shirts, expound the purposes of the movement which he started but 18 months ago. The meeting was the British Fascists' first test of power.

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, April 28.—(AP)—Cotton was fairly active today. Prices advanced at the start and later reacting, closing little changed.

Prices started higher on good Liverpool cables and there were fair buying orders in the market, first trades showing gains of 5 to 8 points. As the weather map showed unfavorable condition, the market continued to improve until July traded at 11.19, October at 11.34, and December at 11.46, or 9 to 12 points net higher.

In the late trading, however, prices eased on selling at New York. July dropped to 11.07, October to 11.22 and December to 11.33, or 12 to 13 points off from the highs. There was a recovery of one to three points at the end and the close was steady, two points net up to one down on the day.

Exports for the day totaled 2,808 bales.

New York

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—After showing net advances of about 9 to 10 points on trade buying and covering, cotton reacted under a renewal of liquidation in the late trading today. July contracts which had sold up to 11.21 on the early demand or about 35 points above the low level of Thursday, eased off to 11.11 at the close with the general market closing barely steady, net 1 point higher to 2 points lower.

Cotton futures closed barely steady; 1 higher to 2 lower.

New York Stocks

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—The stock market dozed peacefully during the greater part of today's brief session and prices generally were a little heavy at the close. It was one of the dullest sessions of the year. Rallies in wheat and other commodities failed as stimulants. Transfers appromixated 600,000 shares.

Wheat came back more than a cent a bushel upon further reports of damaging crop weather. Other cereals also worked higher, but with less vigor. Silver futures continued to improve and the bar metal was pushed up 3-8 of a cent an ounce to 43 3-8 cents. Cotton was about even. Sterling got up a cent or so in terms of the dollar, but the gold exchanges were narrow. Bonds were quiet and somewhat mixed.

The indifference of traders in equitie was exemplified by the fact that American Telephone did not open for nearly one hour and a half. Many other issues also failed to appear on the ticker tape until late. The majority of the leaders did not show any exceptional weakness, but various recently spurting specialties were subjected to profit taking pressure.

Metal issues were fairly resistant and most of the alcohols registered some improvement. The motors sagged with Chrysler, Hudson, General, Nash and Auburn off fractionally to more than a point. U. S. and Bethlehem Steels sagged, as did Santa Fe, N. Y. Central and Union Pacific. Celanese, Industrial Rayon, Liquid Carbonic and American Banknote lost about 1 to 2. Dupont, Liggett & Myers B and Goodyear yielded a point or more each. American Telephone eased, but Consolidated Gas and other power and light stocks were fairly steady.

Several operators were said to have withdrawn from their stock positions pending debate next week in congress on the stock exchange control bill. Brokerage houses were inclined to be a little bearish under the circumstances and the public was still "on the outside looking in."

News of especial interest to equities was scarce and market observers were inclined to believe that little could be expected in the way of active trading until congressional matters are brought to a head.

Although the president's position on the silver situation was said to be unchanged, some faint hope was given the "silverites" by the indications that the administration might ultimately consent to perhaps 30 per cent of the currency circulation being backed by the white metal. The chief executive was said to have reiterated his opposition to mandatory legislation and to have expressed his willingness to go along with agreements proposed by the London economic conference.

Camden Fete In Honor Of Lock-Dam Opening Slated

Decade Of Year-Round Navigation On Ouachita To Be Observed

CAMDEN, Ark., April 28.—(Special)—The tenth anniversary of the official war department opening of the lock and dam system on the Ouachita river will be held here Friday, May 4, and civic clubs of Camden will commemorate the memorable event with appropriate programs.

For more than 100 years steamboats have plied between the river port of Camden and the port of New Orleans, carrying passengers and freight over the 700 miles of waterway included in the five rivers on the picturesque route between the Crescent City and Camden, but it was not until the lock and dam system was completed in 1924 and the Ouachita opened for continuous all-the-year-round navigation on May 4, 1924, that this important Arkansas-Louisiana tributary of the Mississippi really came into its own. Since then the river has teemed with traffic at all seasons of the year and the tonnage of commodities carried by boats and barges, to say nothing of their immense value, has been amazing.

Total tonnage carried by boats and barges on the Ouachita during the past ten years was 2,861,908 gross tons valued at $76,024,316.

These figures are authentic and official, having been obtained by the correspondent of the Monroe Morning World from Major Lunsford E. Oliver of the war department's engineers' office in Vicksburg. Included tonnage and valuation of commodities carried on old time rafts as well as that carried on modern boats and barges, in which connection there is a significant bit of information. Tonnage by rafts on the Ouachita river in 1924, for instance, totalled 27,142 tons and the valuation of commodities transported by rafts that year was $271,420. But in 1933, ten years later, rafts carried only 600 tons valued at only $3,900. This simply means that boats and barges of modern character and capacity have supplemented old time rafts on the Ouachita, Black and Red rivers, as well as on the Mississippi.

The annual figures furnished by Major Lunsford, follow:

Year	Tonnage	Valuation
1924	131.069	$ 2.124,101
1925	212.667	2,396,727
1926	370,274	9.102,195
1927	326,724	6,492,915
1928	400.800	7.827,419
1929	429.542	9.650.228
1930	415.520	9,382,921
1931	212,764	9.371,620
1932	195.317	10,950,796
Total	2,861,908	$76.024.316

During the 25 or 30 years that Adolph Felsenthal, retired merchant of Camden, and former United States Senator Joseph B. Ransdall of Louisiana were endeavoring to obtain an appropriation from congress to construct the lock and dam system on the Ouachita, deluges of cold water were thrown on the proposition by scores of persons who declared that such an expenditure would be useless, extravagant and of no benefit or profit to any one. But the ten-year figures of tonnage and valuation of freight carried since the improvement on the Ouachita was made utterly disprove the pessimistic statements made during the period that the enterprise was being advocated, and the result justifies that expenditure.

Total cost of the six locks and dams on the Ouachita river was $4,608,316.75, according to government figures. Four of the six locks are in Louisiana and two in Arkansas, the cost of each varying, as shown in the following table:

Place	Cost
Harrisonburg, La.	$470,394.69
Riverton, La.	681,072.84
Monroe, La.	641,630.23
Sterlington, La.	911,096.17
Felsenthal, Ark.	914,844.67
Calion, Ark.	915,445.96
Miscellaneous costs	83,832.19
Total	$4,608,316.75

From time to time congress appropriates money for maintenance and repairs on the six locks and dams and also for dredging and clearing the channel of the Ouachita from Camden southward, having recently appropriated $75,000 for that purpose, and the dredge boat Todd with a crew of 52 men is now at Camden widening the boat turning basin at the Camden dock and deepening the channel so that the largest boats can easily turn around.

The steamer America, commanded by the late Capt. L. V. Cooley, was the first packet to come through the locks and dams when the system was put in operation ten years ago, and the steamer docked in the port of Camden early on the morning of May 4, 1924.

It will be a long time before the people of Camden forget that day. More than 10,000 visitors were in the city for the brilliant events that signalized the occasion, including a large group of New Orleans city officials and officers of the New Orleans Association of Commerce, the latter being honored that night with an elaborate banquet attended by distinguished Arkansans, Louisianians and United States government officials, while the thousands of other visitors were treated to a brilliant street parade, a barbecue and outdoor entertainment of varied character.

Since that day much water has gone over the dam, so to speak, and many changes have occurred in the waterway service between Camden and New Orleans. The steamer America, first to pass through the six locks and dams, while tied up at a dock near New Orleans, slowly fell to pieces of old age and finally sank one night to the bottom of the Mississippi river.

The America was succeeded by the steamer Ouachita, whose owner and master, Capt. L. V. Cooley, died in Baptist hospital at New Orleans, December 19, 1931. His death marked the passing of the dean of Mississippi valley steamboat masters. Then the steamer Ouachita was sold and is now in service on the Mississippi with Vicksburg as her home port.

Service between Camden and New Orleans is now provided by the white fleet of the John I. Hay company, Inc., of New Orleans, which operates three boats and ten modern steel barges.

The three boats are the Chaffe, the Altair and the Betsy Ann, the latter having once been a palatial passenger packet on the Ohio and Mississippi, and still has accommodations in the way of luxuriously furnished staterooms for 65 passengers, but carries none because her owners find it more profitable to carry cotton down stream and sugar up stream, in addition to other varied commodities, than to carry passengers. The Betsy Ann is a powerful boat of 240 horsepower, and recently brought from New Orleans on one trip the immense cargo of 32,000 sacks of sugar.

These are only a few of the changes that have come on the Ouachita during the decade that the river's modern lock and dam system has been operating to the incalculable benefit of merchants, farmers, cotton growers and shippers of all manner of merchandise. It is not exaggerating in the least to say that the Ouachita river has saved millions of dollars to industry and agriculture in Arkansas, as well as in Louisiana, during the past ten years. As for the inevitable mutations of time:

While men may come and go, vanish from the stage of life; while boats and barges also may disappear from the scene of action, Ol' Man River, serene and eternal, goes on forever.

BRITAIN'S HITLER?

England's Fascist movement was launched with great impressiveness when more than 10,000 men and women crowded London's Albert Hall to hear Sir Oswald Mosely (above), leader of the British Black Shirts, expound the purposes of the movement which he started but 18 months ago. The meeting was the British Fascists' first test of power.

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, April 28.—(AP)—Cotton was fairly active today. Prices advanced at the start and later reacting, closing little changed.

Prices started higher on good Liverpool cables and there were fair buying orders in the market, first trades showing gains of 5 to 8 points. As the weather map showed unfavorable condition, the market continued to improve until July traded at 11.19, October at 11.34, and December at 11.46, or 9 to 12 points net higher.

In the late trading, however, prices eased on selling at New York. July dropped to 11.07, October to 11.22 and December to 11.33, or 12 to 13 points off from the highs. There was a recovery of one to three points at the end and the close was steady, two points net up to one down on the day.

Exports for the day totaled 2,808 bales.

Cotton futures closed steady net two points up to one down.

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—The stock market dozed peacefully during the greater part of today's brief session and prices generally were a little heavy at the close. It was one of the dullest sessions of the year. Rallies in wheat and other commodities failed as stimulants. Transfers approximated 600,000 shares.

Wheat came back more than a cent a bushel upon further reports of damaging crop weather. Other cereals also worked higher, but with less vigor. Silver futures continued to improve and the bar metal was pushed up 3-8 of a cent an ounce to 43 3-8 cents. Cotton was about even. Sterling got up a cent or so in terms of the dollar, but the gold exchanges were narrow. Bonds were quiet and somewhat mixed.

The indifference of traders in equitie was exemplified by the fact that American Telephone did not open for nearly one hour and a half. Many other issues also failed to appear on the ticker tape until late. The majority of the leaders did not show any exceptional weakness, but various recently spurting specialties were subjected to profit taking pressure.

Metal issues were fairly resistant and most of the alcohols registered some improvement. The motors sagged with Chrysler, Hudson, General, Nash and Auburn off fractionally to more than a point. U. S. and Bethlehem Steels sagged, as did Santa Fe, N. Y. Central and Union Pacific. Celanese, Industrial Rayon, Liquid Carbonic and American Banknote lost about 1 to 2. Dupont, Liggett & Myers B and Goodyear yielded a point or more each. American Telephone eased, but Consolidated Gas and other power and light stocks were fairly steady.

Several operators were said to have withdrawn from their stock positions pending debate next week in congress on the stock exchange control bill. Brokerage houses were inclined to be a little bearish under the circumstances and the public was still "on the outside looking in."

News of especial interest to equities was scarce and market observers were inclined to believe that little could be expected in the way of active trading until congressional matters are brought to a head.

Although the president's position on the silver situation was said to be unchanged, some faint hope was given the "silverites" by the indications that the administration might ultimately consent to perhaps 30 per cent of the currency circulation being backed by the white metal. The chief executive was said to have reiterated his opposition to mandatory legislation and to have expressed his willingness to go along with agreements proposed by the London economic conference.

Camden Fete In Honor Of Lock-Dam Opening Slated

Decade Of Year-Round Navigation On Ouachita To Be Observed

CAMDEN, Ark., April 28.—(Special)—The tenth anniversary of the official war department opening of the lock and dam system on the Ouachita river will be held here Friday, May 4, and civic clubs of Camden will commemorate the memorable event with appropriate programs.

For more than 100 years steamboats have plied between the river port of Camden and the port of New Orleans, carrying passengers and freight over the 700 miles of waterway included in the five rivers on the picturesque route between the Crescent City and Camden, but it was not until the lock and dam system was completed in 1924 and the Ouachita opened for continuous all-the-year-round navigation on May 4, 1924, that this important Arkansas-Louisiana tributary of the Mississippi really came into its own. Since then the river has teemed with traffic at all seasons of the year and the tonnage of commodities carried by boats and barges, to say nothing of their immense value, has been amazing.

Total tonnage carried by boats and barges on the Ouachita during the past ten years was 2,861,908 gross tons valued at $76,024,316.

These figures are authentic and official, having been obtained by the correspondent of the Monroe Morning World from Major Lunsford E. Oliver of the war department's engineers' office in Vicksburg. Included tonnage and valuation of commodities carried on old time rafts as well as that carried on modern boats and barges, in which connection there is a significant bit of information. Tonnage by rafts on the Ouachita river in 1924, for instance, totalled 27,142 tons and the valuation of commodities transported by rafts that year was $271,420. But in 1933, ten years later, rafts carried only 600 tons valued at only $3,900. This simply means that boats and barges of modern character and capacity have supplemented old time rafts on the Ouachita, Black and Red rivers, as well as on the Mississippi.

The annual figures furnished by Major Lunsford, follow:

Year	Tonnage	Valuation
1924	131,069	$ 2,124,101
1925	212,667	2,396,727
1926	370,274	9,102,195
1927	326,724	6,492,915
1928	400,800	7,827,419
1929	429,542	9,650,228
1930	415,520	9,382,921
1931	212,764	9,371,620
1932	195,317	10,950,796
1933	167,231	8,725,394
Total	2,861,908	$76,024,316

During the 25 or 30 years that Adolph Felsenthal, retired merchant of Camden, and former United States Senator Joseph B. Ransdall of Louisiana were endeavoring to obtain an appropriation from congress to construct the lock and dam system on the Ouachita, deluges of cold water were thrown on the proposition by scores of persons who declared that such an expenditure would be useless, extravagant and of no benefit or profit to any one. But the ten-year figures of tonnage and valuation of freight carried since the improvement on the Ouachita was made utterly disprove the pessimistic statements made during the period that the enterprise was being advocated, and the result justifies that expenditure.

Total cost of the six locks and dams on the Ouachita river was $4,608,316.75, according to government figures. Four of the six locks are in Louisiana and two in Arkansas, the cost of each varying, as shown in the following table:

Place	Cost
Harrisonburg, La.	$470,394.69
Riverton, La.	681,072.84
Monroe, La.	641,630.23
Sterlington, La.	911,096.17
Felsenthal, Ark.	914,844.67
Calion, Ark.	915,445.96
Miscellaneous costs	83,832.19
Total	$4,608,316.75

From time to time congress appropriates money for maintenance and repairs on the six locks and dams and also for dredging and clearing the channel of the Ouachita from Camden southward, having recently appropriated $75,000 for that purpose, and the dredge boat Todd with a crew of 52 men is now at Camden widening the boat turning basin at the Camden dock and deepening the channel so that the largest boats can easily turn around.

The steamer America, commanded by the late Capt. L. V. Cooley, was the first packet to come through the locks and dams when the system was put in operation ten years ago, and the steamer docked in the port of Camden early on the morning of May 4, 1924.

It will be a long time before the people of Camden forget that day. More than 10,000 visitors were in the city for the brilliant events that signalized the occasion, including a large group of New Orleans city officials and officers of the New Orleans Association of Commerce, the latter being honored that night with an elaborate banquet attended by distinguished Arkansans, Louisianians and United States government officials, while the thousands of other visitors were treated to a brilliant street parade, a barbecue and outdoor entertainment of varied character.

Since that day much water has gone over the dam, so to speak, and many changes have occurred in the waterway service between Camden and New Orleans. The steamer America, first to pass through the six locks and dams, while tied up at a dock near New Orleans, slowly fell to pieces of old age and finally sank one night to the bottom of the Mississippi river.

The America was succeeded by the steamer Ouachita, whose owner and master, Capt. L. V. Cooley, died in Baptist hospital at New Orleans, December 19, 1931. His death marked the passing of the dean of Mississippi valley steamboat masters. Then the steamer Ouachita was sold and is now in service on the Mississippi with Vicksburg as her home port.

Service between Camden and New Orleans is now provided by the white fleet of the John I. Hay company, Inc., of New Orleans, which operates three boats and ten modern steel barges.

The three boats are the Chaffe, the Altair and the Betsy Ann, the latter having once been a palatial passenger packet on the Ohio and Mississippi, and still has accommodations in the way of luxuriously furnished staterooms for 65 passengers, but carries none because her owners find it more profitable to carry cotton down stream and sugar up stream, in addition to other varied commodities, than to carry passengers. The Betsy Ann is a powerful boat of 240 horsepower, and recently brought from New Orleans on one trip the immense cargo of 32,000 sacks of sugar.

These are only a few of the changes that have come on the Ouachita during the decade that the river's modern lock and dam system has been operating to the incalculable benefit of merchants, farmers, cotton growers and shippers of all manner of merchandise. It is not exaggerating in the least to say that the Ouachita river has saved millions of dollars to industry and agriculture in Arkansas, as well as in Louisiana, during the past ten years. As for the inevitable mutations of time:

While men may come and go, vanish from the stage of life; while boats and barges also may disappear from the scene of action, Ol' Man River, serene and eternal, goes on forever.

The federal fish hatchery under construction at San Angelo, Tex., expected to be the largest of 88 such plants in the country, will cover 190 acres with water.

Speaking of Trust Functions

One of the best testimonials we know is that reflected by the past few years right here at home.

We have seen quite a number of personal estates and small fortunes in life insurance shrink and dwindle away to the vanishing point—

While those entrusted to our Trust Department all continue to carry on "as time goes on."

How about Yours?
Have you made your will?
Is your executor competent and undying?
Is your life insurance insured
by a Trust Agreement?
We hope so.

WORKER WANTED IN WEST INDIES

Company Wants Experienced Blacksmith; NRS Office Reports

An excellent opportunity for an experienced blacksmith, who has no objection to working in a foreign land, to obtain a job is offered in a communication received here Saturday by J. W. Worthington, district manager of the national re-employment service. The request for such a man was received by the New Orleans re-employment office and was sent out to the district offices.

The job is for a blacksmith to work for a large oil concern in the West Indies. It pays $1.04 an hour, in addition to a furnished room. The hours are 48 a week, which would make the pay approximately $50 a week, in addition to a lodging place.

"Applicant must have had experience forging on a 3,000-pound steam hammer. He must be able to do all kinds of hand work, work to drawings or samples and calculate stock requirements. He must be familiar with heat tempering of steel, including oil and water tempering and air hardening. He must be able to handle either large or small work using alloy and high speed steels. He must also be experienced in oil refinery equipment, ship repair work and oil well tools."

Anyone meeting these requirements who would be interested in accepting the job is requested to apply directly to the Monroe NRS office or to apply to the NRS office in his parish, from which the application will be forwarded to the Monroe office and through it to the concern wishing to employ the man.

Details in regard to reaching the place of employment can be obtained after the application has been placed in the hands of the company.

Morehouse Sportsmen's Club Is Object Of Meet At Bastrop This Week

BASTROP, April 28—(Special)—All sportsmen of Morehouse parish and others who are interested in the preservation of the game and fish of the parish are invited and urged to attend a meeting to be held in the courthouse next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock for the purpose of organizing a sportsmen's club in the parish, the object of which shall be to protect the game and fish of the parish.

This movement is being sponsored by F. B. Pratt, former Morehouse parish representative, who has called the meeting and urges all sportsmen to attend.

"Game and fish laws in Morehouse parish are flagrantly violated," Mr. Pratt said, "and unless the sportsmen of this parish get together and do something about it, there will soon be no game and fish in the parish."

It is the plan of those pushing the movement for the organization of the club to urge the employment of a game warden for the parish who shall see to it that the laws with regard to hunting and fishing are not violated.

The meeting starts at 10 o'clock and will be held in the courthouse. Mr. Pratt urges a full attendance of sportsmen and others interested in the protection of game and fish.

COMMUNITY CLUB TO OBSERVE BIRTHDAY

RAYVILLE, La., April 28.—(Special)—The Mann Community club, an organization initiated through the efforts of William G. Grasse of Monroe and others interested in community development, will celebrate the anniversary of its founding with an art exhibit to be held Sunday afternoon. An interesting exhibition of paintings, tapestries and India prints will be on display under the direction of Mrs. George Wesley Smith of Rayville.

There will also be a display of cook books, made by members of the Mann community. Mrs. Jewel McQuiller, home demonstration agent of Ouachita parish, will judge the cook books.

Fred Williamson, managing editor of the Monroe Morning World and News-Star, will make a talk on "Art in the Home."

The Mann club house is located about nine miles north of Rayville on the banks of the Boeuf river. Visitors are expected from all sections of northeast Louisiana for the anniversary celebration.

Doll Display Features Children's Story Hour

Children's story hour at the Monroe public library Saturday morning, from 9:30 to 10:30 o'clock, was featured by a character doll display. Each child who could do so had been asked at the previous meeting to bring a doll dressed to represent some nationality, and a large number responded.

Those who brought dolls were as follows: Margaret Smith, English doll; Emale Gattis, English doll; Gail Dillard, Dutch doll; Carolyn Oliver, Japanese and Indian dolls; Myrian Oliver, Japanese and Indian dolls; Jean Garver, Dutch doll; Joy Garver, Indian doll. The Indian dolls brought by the Garver girls were carved out by their father and dressed by the girls.

Announcement of winners in the bookhouse contest was made. Marjorie Tyler, winner in the senior group, was awarded as a prize a book by Gay Soucrette, which was a child's story of Louisiana. Louise Tisdale, winner in the junior group, received a book entitled, "A Long Street," by Rachel Field.

per yard and laid two pieces of pipe across the road, and one culvert. For our work we received $32,000 and I handed Mr. Hoffman $3,200, which he had not expected when he signed the contract."

"It was a fine thing for us," Maggio added, "we made $13,000 profit on the job, which took us just two months. I do not know what Mr. Hoffman received for the shells. But we got $32,000 for work covering one half mile."

The name of the contractor who should have gotten this job and didn't will probably never be divulged. But, the chances are that there was some pretty tall swearing in the commission office when the bids revealed that the low man wasn't the picked man.

The New Orleans-Baton Rouge air line, which follows the route of the Louisiana & Arkansas R. R. below Baton Rouge to a considerable extent, appears to have been specially selected for favoring road and bridge builders.

It is claimed that errors in bridge-building along that highway between Prairieville and Grammercy, the first in Ascension and the latter in St. James, cost the highway commission (and, of course, the taxpayers), something like $1,000,000.

Highway engineers are reported to have built numerous bridges 24 feet wide between these two points. Federal engineers are said to have disapproved of these road spans and they had to be torn out and rebuilt. They were made 46 feet wide. The cost of this miscalculation is declared to have been little short of $1,000,000.

All of this, of course, was not lost, but it is said that a good deal of it was. According to report, had the bridges been built at proper width in the first place, the cost of construction would have been considerably reduced.

The next article of this series will deal with the presentation to favored contractors of state-bought gravel, which enabled them to construct roads much more cheaply and consequently to bid much lower than competitive bidders. The gravel was not paid for by these contractors. It was simply handed to them as a gift from the highway commission. And facts will be presented to show that these individuals evidently knew of these "presents" in advance and predicated their bids on that knowledge.

Highway graft during the construction of the Long road program was so prodigious that without a thorough knowledge of the facts it can scarcely be conceived of. An investigation may land some men behind the bars.

WORKER WANTED IN WEST INDIES

Company Wants Experienced Blacksmith; NRS Office Reports

An excellent opportunity for an experienced blacksmith, who has no objection to working in a foreign land, to obtain a job is offered in a communication received here Saturday by J. W. Worthington, district manager of the national re-employment service. The request for such a man was received by the New Orleans re-employment office and was sent out to the district offices.

The job is for a blacksmith to work for a large oil concern in the West Indies. It pays $1.04 an hour, in addition to a furnished room. The hours are 48 a week, which would make the pay approximately $50 a week, in addition to a lodging place.

Experience requirements were given as follows:

"Applicant must have had experience forging on a 3,000-pound steam hammer. He must be able to do all kinds of hand work, work to drawings or samples and calculate stock requirements. He must be familiar with heat tempering of steel, including oil and water tempering and air hardening. He must be able to handle either large or small work using alloy and high speed steels. He must also be experienced in oil refinery equipment, ship repair work and oil well tools."

Anyone meeting these requirements who would be interested in accepting the job is requested to apply directly to the Monroe NRS office or to apply to the NRS office in his parish, from which the application will be forwarded to the Monroe office and through it to the concern wishing to employ the man.

Details in regard to reaching the place of employment can be obtained after the application has been placed in the hands of the company.

Morehouse Sportsmen's Club Is Object Of Meet At Bastrop This Week

BASTROP, April 28—(Special)—All sportsmen of Morehouse parish and others who are interested in the preservation of the game and fish of the parish are invited and urged to attend a meeting to be held in the courthouse next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock for the purpose of organizing a sportsmen's club in the parish, the object of which shall be to protect the game and fish of the parish.

This movement is being sponsored by F. B. Pratt, former Morehouse parish representative, who has called the meeting and urges all sportsmen to attend.

"Game and fish laws in Morehouse parish are flagrantly violated," Mr. Pratt said, "and unless the sportsmen of this parish get together and do something about it, there will soon be no game and fish in the parish."

It is the plan of those pushing the movement for the organization of the club to urge the employment of a game warden for the parish who shall see to it that the laws with regard to hunting and fishing are not violated.

The meeting starts at 10 o'clock and will be held in the courthouse. Mr. Pratt urges a full attendance of sportsmen and others interested in the protection of game and fish.

COMMUNITY CLUB TO OBSERVE BIRTHDAY

RAYVILLE, La., April 28.—(Special)—The Mann Community club, an organization initiated through the efforts of William G. Grasse of Monroe and others interested in community development, will celebrate the anniversary of its founding with an art exhibit to be held Sunday afternoon. An interesting exhibition of paintings, tapestries and India prints will be on display under the direction of Mrs. George Wesley Smith of Rayville.

There will also be a display of cook books, made by members of the Mann community. Mrs. Jewel McQuiller, home demonstration agent of Ouachita parish, will judge the cook books.

Fred Williamson, managing editor of the Monroe Morning World and News-Star, will make a talk on "Art in the Home."

The Mann club house is located about nine miles north of Rayville on the banks of the Boeuf river. Visitors are expected from all sections of northeast Louisiana for the anniversary celebration.

Doll Display Features Children's Story Hour

Children's story hour at the Monroe public library Saturday morning, from 9:30 to 10:30 o'clock, was featured by a character doll display. Each child who could do so had been asked at the previous meeting to bring a doll dressed to represent some nationality, and a large number responded.

Those who brought dolls were as follows: Margaret Smith, English doll; Emale Gattis, English doll; Gail Dillard, Dutch doll; Carolyn Oliver, Japanese and Indian dolls; Myrian Oliver, Japanese and Indian dolls; Jean Garver, Dutch doll; Joy Garver, Indian doll. The Indian dolls brought by the Garver girls were carved out by their father and dressed by the girls.

Announcement of winners in the bookhouse contest was made. Marjorie Tyler, winner in the senior group, was awarded as a prize a book by Gay Soucrette, which was a child's story of Louisiana. Louise Tisdale, winner in the junior group, received a book entitled, "A Long Street," by Rachel Field.

per yard and laid two pieces of pipe across the road, and one culvert. For our work we received $32,000 and I handed Mr. Hoffman $3,200, which he had not expected when he signed the contract."

"It was a fine thing for us," Maggio added, "we made $13,000 profit on the job, which took us just two months. I do not know what Mr. Hoffman received for the shells. But we got $32,000 for work covering one half mile."

The name of the contractor who should have gotten this job and didn't will probably never be divulged. But, the chances are that there was some pretty tall swearing in the commission office when the bids revealed that the low man wasn't the picked man.

The New Orleans-Baton Rouge air line, which follows the route of the Louisiana & Arkansas R. R. below Baton Rouge to a considerable extent, appears to have been specially selected for favoring road and bridge builders.

It is claimed that errors in bridge-building along that highway between Prairieville and Grammercy, the first in Ascension and the latter in St. James, cost the highway commission (and, of course, the taxpayers), something like $1,000,000.

Highway engineers are reported to have built numerous bridges 24 feet wide between these two points. Federal engineers are said to have disapproved of these road spans and they had to be torn out and rebuilt. They were made 46 feet wide. The cost of this miscalculation is declared to have been little short of $1,000,000.

All of this, of course, was not lost, but it is said that a good deal of it was. According to report, had the bridges been built at proper width in the first place, the cost of construction would have been considerably reduced.

The next article of this series will deal with the presentation to favored contractors of state-bought gravel, which enabled them to construct roads much more cheaply and consequently to bid much lower than competitive bidders. The gravel was not paid for by these contractors. It was simply handed to them as a gift from the highway commission. And facts will be presented to show that these individuals evidently knew of these "presents" in advance and predicated their bids on that knowledge.

Highway graft during the construction of the Long road program was so prodigious that without a thorough knowledge of the facts it can scarcely be conceived of. An investigation may land some men behind the bars.

RED CROSS FIRST AID CLASS SLATED

Dr. Grant F. Hartzell To Conduct Training Institute Here

Led by Dr. Grant F. Hartzell, first aid field representative of the American Red Cross, a Red Cross first aid training institute will open in the courtroom of the Monroe city hall Monday night and regular classes will be held through May 11. Most of the time at Monday night's meeting is expected to be devoted to preliminary instructions.

The purpose of the institute is said to be train lay instructors who may, in turn, carry on instruction in the organization or industry which they represent. Classes will be open to foremen of ERA projects, foremen of industries, firemen and policemen. Others who are interested are also invited to enroll, it was stated.

Thirty hours of instruction are included in the course. The first period of 15 hours will be devoted to the standard course, the entire time being given to first aid subject matter. During the second period of 15 hours a special course will be given, with emphasis being placed on the proper handling of a class in first aid and in actual practice in teaching and examining.

TO LEAD CLASS

GRANT F. HARTZELL

Citing instances to show the importance of first aid work, Red Cross officials issued the following statement:

"A heavy truck swings around a blind corner, crashes into an automobile and hurls it over an embankment. The truck crew rushes to the rescue. A man is pinned under the wreckage. They lift him to his feet, hail a passing car, put him on the seat and send him in an upright position to the nearest hospital. In this unskilled and ignorant handling, the man's spine is punctured by a broken bone, so that he will be a paralytic if he lives—all of which might have been avoided by a knowledge of what to do in the emergency.

"A child is bitten by a rattlesnake. The frantic father catches a chicken, splits it open and applies it to the bite to 'draw the poison out.' But the poison remains undisturbed because the chicken treatment is a pure superstition. A first aider would have known how to expel the poison.

"A swimmer is pulled unconscious from the water. His companions, instead of applying artificial respiration, roll him over a barrel, which only gets the water out of his stomach, where it does not harm, while they do nothing to start his breathing. When the doctor arrives, he finds he has come too late. First aid would have fanned into flame the spark of life that remained."

200 AT GROTTO CEREMONY HERE

17 New Members Inducted Into Monroe, Shreveport Organizations

Approximately 200 prophets and guests attended the joint spring ceremonial here yesterday of Teflis Grotto of Monroe, Mithra Grotto of Shreveport and Cashan Grotto of Beaumont, Texas, H. C. Ray, Jr., monarch of Teflis Grotto said last night.

Seventeen new members were initiated into the order, 13 of them into Teflis Grotto and four into the Shreveport organization. The drill team of Mithra Grotto assisted in the induction of the new members while Teflis Grotto's cast presented the ceremonial drama.

Among the visitors was R. D. Hendricks of Shreveport, vice president of the Southwestern Grotto association.

The day's program was begun at 4 p. m. with a parade on downtown streets, with Prophet R. J. Goza as marshal. At 5:30 p. m. a full-form ceremonial was staged in the auditorium of Ouachita parish high school, followed at 6:30 by the feast of revels, with Prophet Baker as master of revels.

The climax of the day's events was the monarchs' ball at 10 p. m. on the roof of Hotel Virginia. This was featured by a floor show of dance numbers by Mrs. Regina Moffett Gill and her dance students.

Members of the Square and Compass club of Alexandria were present at the events and extended an invitation to Grotto members and other Masons to attend a meeting of that club to be held later in Alexandria.

The event was one of the most successful of its kind ever held in this section, Mr. Ray said.

Convert League Meets At St. Matthew's School

At the regular monthly meeting of the Convert league, sponsored by the Catholic Daughters, held in St. Matthew's school auditorium Thursday evening, in a lecture entitled, "God, Eternal Magnet of the Minds of Men," it was declared that "just as the eye was made by God to see light, and the ear to hear sound, so the mind of man was made for the truth; and as with the heart so with the mind, it can find no rest until it rests in God."

It was stated that the "one who halts his mental activity on the threshold of eternal truth, who, when he comes to God, stops thinking, effectively shuts God out of his heart, and places in imminent jeopardy the salvation of his soul."

"The lives of men with immortal souls," Rev. J. C. Vandegaer declared, "must be erected on eternal truth. We can't build on a five year plan; not with eternity before us."

The life of Arnold Lunn, Oxford graduate and author, was reviewed by Walter Savage.

Warmer Weather Promised For This Section Today

Relief from the chilly winds which descended on this section Friday night on the heels of heavy rains and precipitated the mercury to unseasonable readings is promised today in the official forecast of the government weather bureau at New Orleans.

The forecast for today is fair and warmer. Monday cloudy and warmer weather is promised.

The maximum temperature here for the 24-hour period ending Saturday afternoon was 68 degrees while the minimum was 48 degrees, according to Miss Katie Key, local government weather observer.

REV. CROWE WILL TALK HERE TODAY

Noted Bible Scholar And Orator To Deliver Three Addresses

Rev. William Crowe, D. D., pastor of Westminster Presbyterian church, St. Louis, Mo., will deliver three addresses in the city today, in connection with the series of evangelistic services he has been conducting throughout the last week at the First Presbyterian church.

The first meeting will be held at 9:45 this morning at the Paramount theater, under auspices of the Frank P. Stubbs Memorial Bible class. Dr. Crow will speak on the subject, "Christ's Standards of Greatness." The meeting will be especially for men, all the members of the men's Bible classes of the two cities being invited for the occasion. All business men throughout the city are likewise invited to attend, according to announcement by D. Curtis Seamon, the class president.

At the regular 11 o'clock service in the First Presbyterian church Dr. Crowe will speak on "Facing the Light." At the evening service in the same church the distinguished speaker will take for his subject, "Persuasions of God."

The services today will bring to a close the series of evangelistic meetings, which have attracted wide attention in this and neighboring communities. Large audiences have greeted Dr. Crowe, who is noted throughout the nation as one of the most profound Bible scholars and brilliant orators in the ministry.

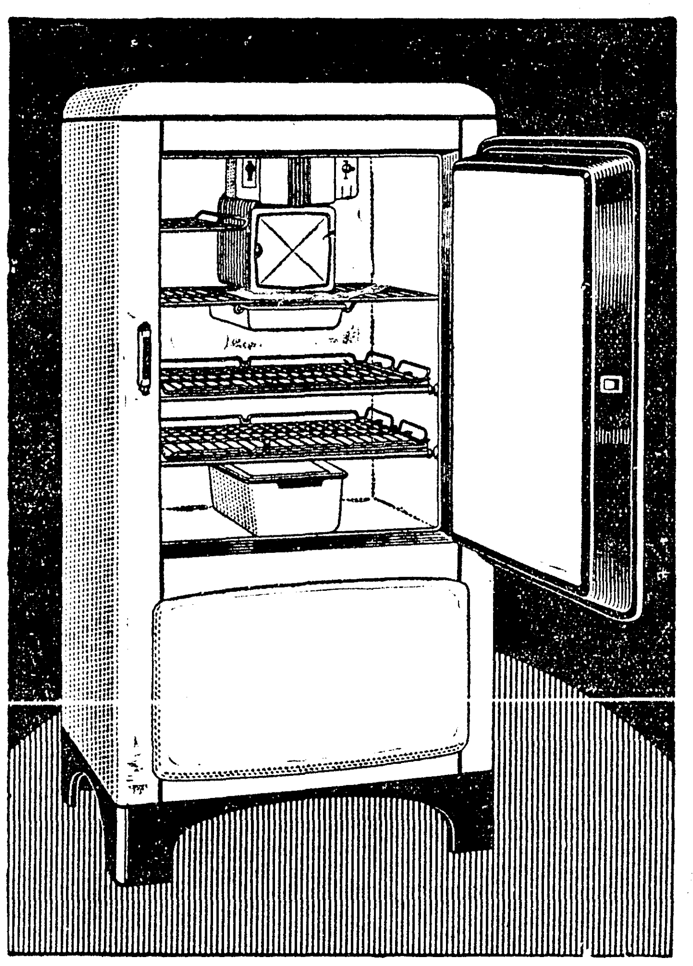
IF YOUR LIGHT BILL AMOUNTS TO $4.05 OR MORE NET PER MONTH

YOU CAN OPERATE A STEWART-WARNER FREE



AN AMAZING TRUE STATEMENT

Made Possible By Stewart-Warner's Slow Cycle Mechanism Plus Monroe's Combination Electric Rate

HERE'S THE PROOF:

There is no Joker in this startling assertion. Our Stewart-Warner Standard Model No. 454-A uses 30 Kilowatts of electricity per month on a year round average under normal conditions. 'Exhausted factory test under all conditions, and actual owners' test in this locality have proven this figure to be generously high.

Your light bill of $4.05 net ($4.50 gross less 10%) means that you are using 45 Kilowatts of electricity per month at 10c per kilowatt. To this 45 Kilowatts of electricity you are now using, add 30 kilowatts for the Stewart-Warner Refrigerator, making a total of 75 Kilowatts used.

This 75 Kilowatts, payable at Monroe's new combination Electric Refrigerator and light rate of 6c per Kilowatt, will amount to $4.05 net ($4.50 gross less 10%), the same amount you formerly paid without a Stewart-Warner.

In other words, your present rate of 10c per Kilowatt will be reduced by City of Monroe to 6c per Kilowatt as soon as you purchase a Stewart-Warner. If your light bill is lower than $4.05 per month, it will cost you a few cents per month to operate a Stewart-Warner. If your bill is higher than this figure, a Stewart-Warner will actually reduce it!

Convert League Meets At St. Matthew's School

At the regular monthly meeting of the Convert league, sponsored by the Catholic Daughters, held in St. Matthew's school auditorium Thursday evening, in a lecture entitled, "God, Eternal Magnet of the Minds of Men," it was declared that "just as the eye was made by God to see light, and the ear to hear sound, so the mind of man was made for the truth; and as with the heart so with the mind, it can find no rest until it rests in God."

It was stated that the "one who halts his mental activity on the threshold of eternal truth, who, when he comes to God, stops thinking, effectively shuts God out of his heart, and places in imminent jeopardy the salvation of his soul."

"The lives of men with immortal souls," Rev. J. C. Vandegaer declared, "must be erected on eternal truth. We can't build on a five year plan; not with eternity before us."

The life of Arnold Lunn, Oxford graduate and author, was reviewed by Walter Savage.

Musical numbers were furnished by Miss Ella Rose Crawford and Cyril Pecastaing, Helene Heller accompanying.

Continuous work in any one shift for women and children in Italy is limited by law to six hours, and the working day may not exceed 11 hours.

Warmer Weather Promised For This Section Today

Relief from the chilly winds which descended on this section Friday night on the heels of heavy rains and precipitated the mercury to unseasonable readings is promised today in the official forecast of the government weather bureau at New Orleans.

The forecast for today is fair and warmer. Monday cloudy and warmer weather is promised.

The maximum temperature here for the 24-hour period ending Saturday afternoon was 68 degrees while the minimum was 48 degrees, according to Miss Katie Key, local government weather observer.

REV. CROWE WILL TALK HERE TODAY

Noted Bible Scholar And Orator To Deliver Three Addresses

Rev. William Crowe, D. D., pastor of Westminster Presbyterian church, St. Louis, Mo., will deliver three addresses in the city today, in connection with the series of evangelistic services he has been conducting throughout the last week at the First Presbyterian church.

The first meeting will be held at 9:45 this morning at the Paramount theater, under auspices of the Frank P. Stubbs Memorial Bible class. Dr. Crow will speak on the subject, "Christ's Standards of Greatness." The meeting will be especially for men, all the members of the men's Bible classes of the two cities being invited for the occasion. All business men throughout the city are likewise invited to attend, according to announcement by D. Curtis Seamon, the class president.

At the regular 11 o'clock service in the First Presbyterian church Dr. Crowe will speak on "Facing the Light." At the evening service in the same church the distinguished speaker will take for his subject, "Persuasions of God."

The services today will bring to a close the series of evangelistic meetings, which have attracted wide attention in this and neighboring communities. Large audiences have greeted Dr. Crowe, who is noted throughout the nation as one of the most profound Bible scholars and brilliant orators in the ministry.

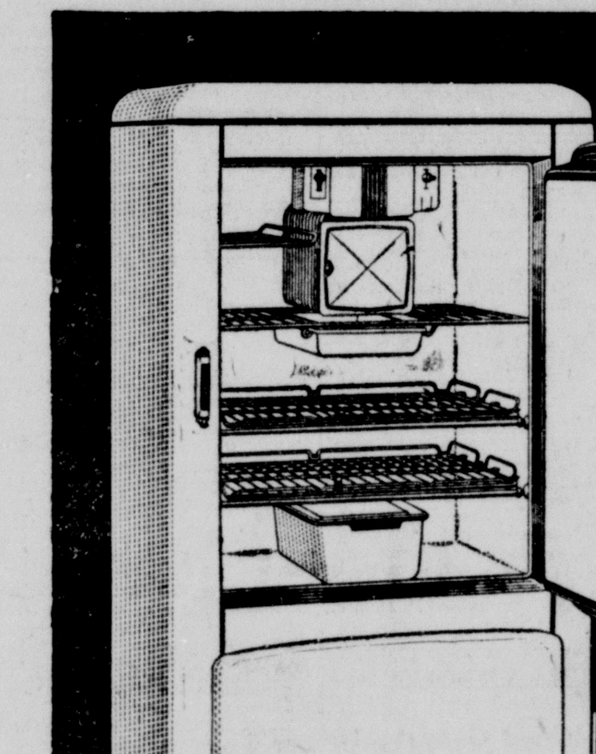
IF YOUR LIGHT BILL AMOUNTS TO $4.05 OR MORE NET PER MONTH

YOU CAN OPERATE A STEWART-WARNER FREE



AN AMAZING TRUE STATEMENT

Made Possible By Stewart-Warner's Slow Cycle Mechanism Plus Monroe's Combination Electric Rate

HERE'S THE PROOF:

There is no Joker in this startling assertion. Our Stewart-Warner Standard Model No. 454-A uses 30 Kilowatts of electricity per month on a year round average under normal conditions. 'Exhausted factory test under all conditions, and actual owners' test in this locality have proven this figure to be generously high.

Your light bill of $4.05 net ($4.50 gross less 10%) means that you are using 45 Kilowatts of electricity per month at 10c per kilowatt. To this 45 Kilowatts of electricity you are now using, add 30 kilowatts for the Stewart-Warner Refrigerator, making a total of 75 Kilowatts used.

This 75 Kilowatts, payable at Monroe's new combination Electric Refrigerator and light rate of 6c per Kilowatt, will amount to $4.05 net ($4.50 gross less 10%), the same amount you formerly paid without a Stewart-Warner.

In other words, your present rate of 10c per Kilowatt will be reduced by City of Monroe to 6c per Kilowatt as soon as you purchase a Stewart-Warner. If your light bill is lower than $4.05 per month, it will cost you a few cents per month to operate a Stewart-Warner. If your bill is higher than this figure, a Stewart-Warner will actually reduce it!

THE LAST STRIKE

By Peter B. Kyne

IN THE desert reaches of California and Nevada there exists among men what might be termed a natural urge for whimsical and descriptive nomenclature. Hence, when James G. Tarbox, in his youth, made a rich strike in the low red hills that fringe the western side of Big Smoky Valley and named the camp that sprang up there Smoky City, immediately somebody labeled him Smoky Jim Tarbox. As the years passed, and Smoky City with them, Mr. Tarbox became known simply as Smoky Jim.

Smoky Jim was a prospector, but on the day when the pilot flying the mail between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City spied him working up Jawbone Valley behind his burros, Smoky Jim was a desert rat.

For two years prior to the day the air-mail pilot saw him and his jacks crawling up Jawbone Valley, Smoky Jim had laid the flattering unction to his soul that he was a retired desert rat. A boom mining camp called Wonder had sprung up in the Nevada desert. Smoky Jim had been one of the first arrivals, had staked several claims, had sold them to a mining promoter for $25,000.

Thereupon he reformed. Instead of drinking the gambling it away, he invested $20,000 of this windfall in a sound public utility stock. Then he went down into Mesquite Valley, in the northern end of Inyo County, California.

One night, via the radio, he learned that Great Britain was paying slightly over $30 an ounce for gold.

"Competition's the life o' trade," he told the radio announcer. "Uncle Sam'll have to meet the bid purty soon or them dog-gone perfidious Albions 'll have all our gold output."

HAVING spent most of his life in the desert, Smoky Jim had formed the habit of discussing his affairs and opinions aloud to himself or to his burros. So, while feeding his burros that evening, he talked it over with Isaiah, Jeremiah, Nehemiah, Ruth, and Ruth's latest colt.

"Burros," he addressed them, "the life we're livin' is too quiet. If I didn't find an' sell thirty-dollar gold before I died my soul'd be in torment for all eternity. Remember Coolgardie? That desert camp at the head o' Jawbone Valley that went bust when you an' me was young, Maggie? We thought Coolgardie was goin' to be the greatest desert placer camp on earth because what gold there was lay on top an' we dry-washed it. An' you remember what happened? Four foot below the gravel we struck conglomerate that was hard'n a banker's heart. Well, every durned fool on earth knows there ain't no gold in conglomerate, so Coolgardie faded into the sunset, as the poet says.

"Five years after that camp'd been forgotten I come through there an' spent the night among the trade rats, rattle-snakes, an' old memories o' the Palace Hotel. In the mornin' I walked out among the old diggin's, an' found where some feller'd dug a hole in that conglomerate down about six feet before he'd quit. Reckon he was lookin' for gold-bearin' gravel under the conglomerate, but that stuff licked him. Well, jacks, what do you suppose I discovered? Dang my buttons if the sides o' that hole in that there conglomerate hadn't leached out with the sun and the air, an' crumbled in my hand like ashes. It wasn't conglomerate, but a sort o' cement-gravel. So I panned all the dirt I could scrape off the sides o' that little shaft an' it run about two hundred dollars a ton.

"Remember the creek that runs down from the meltin' snows up in the Panamints? Remember the little rock dam Coolgardie built across a little canyon to catch this water supply for the camp? When the snow was gone an' the creek dried up, the cloud-bursts kept the dam filled up. So the water problem's settled. All we got ter do is sink a lot o' holes in that hard stuff with gasoline-driven modern drills, stick a shot in every hole, an' blow her up; put in a five-stamp mill run by a Diesel ingin, an' start declarin' dividends."

He motored into Reno in his ancient car, purchased food supplies, new equipment, dynamite fuse and caps, and returned to his "ranch." The next day he shod his burros; the next morning he packed them, cut a mesquite gad to discipline his lazy burros, and headed south, trudging leisurely behind his little caravan. . . .

SIX weeks later the pilot of the airmail, driven miles off his course to avoid a storm in the Panamints, came flying down Jawbone Valley at about 1,500 feet and saw Smoky Jim and his little cavalcade. "Bet that pilgrim hasn't seen a newspaper or a human being in two months," the pilot decided. So he slackened his speed, dropped down to within a hundred feet of Smoky Jim, and dropped a twisted newspaper.

Smoky Jim trudged forward to pick up the newspaper.

"Jacks," he announced shrilly, "that there flyin' machine feller's a scholar an' a gentleman, an' no mistake about that." He thrust the newspaper under the tarp on Ruth's pack. "We'll be in Coolgardie by three o'clock," he continued. "We'll put up in the Palace Hotel, we'll cook supper early an' have two hours o' daylight to read this here Salt Lake City paper."

He hazed the burros to a faster gait. "We're gittin' there, jacks," he yelled presently, as from the crest of the little rise he gazed down on what one finds frequently in the desert close to the edge of the high encircling mountains—to wit, the bed of a dry lake.

The prospect of uninterrupted solitude was pleasing to the old desert rat. The lake-bed lay half a mile below the site of vanished Coolgardie and was about a mile in diameter. Halfway across it Smoky Jim paused to analyze a mystery. The glazed surface of the "slickens" had been cut by a furrow about two inches deep and two inches wide, and this tiny furrow stretched away across the lake-bed to the side nearest Coolgardie.

Smoky Jim quickly uncovered the reason for this furrow. On each side of it he found the faint track of a wheel with a round, smooth tread.

"Somebody lit here in a flyin' machine," he decided, "an' this here furrow was made by the tail skid.

"Reckon he took off ag'in in the same direction he was headed," the desert rat decided.

Suddenly he paused. From up the canyon an airplane motor roared into action. Smoky Jim sat down in the mesquite, and presently, down the hard gravel wash below him, a large, single-motored, cabin airplane waddled leisurely out onto the glazed surface of the dry lake, then took off, and disappeared into the haze to the south.

"Three passengers in her," Smoky Jim addressed an imaginary audience. "Some outfit's got onto that rich cement gravel; bet them was engineers up looking the ground over. Better step lively, Mr. Tarbox, or them fellers'll have all the ground staked."

HE CAME down the canyon and walked up into all that forty years had left of abandoned Coolgardie — a flat-roofed stone house built in the shape of a parallelogram.

He went around to the door and walked boldly in. "Stock of gasoline an' oil, some dishes, pots, pans, an' skillets, an' a lot of assorted grub," was his comment after he had made due appraisal. He went into the other rooms. In each of the three he investigated he found a new folding cot, with blankets and pillows; on the door leading to an inside room he found a new steel hasp with a new padlock hanging to it, unsprung. So he looked in and discovered another folding cot, a wooden box with a pitcher and basin on it, some soap and towels on the cot, and two women's nightgowns hanging on a nail.

"They're not minin' men," Smoky Jim decided, "because if they was they'd have powder an' fuse, picks, drills, crowbars, an' shovels. An' there'd ought to be a portable assay outfit. This room fixed up for a woman has a new hasp an' padlock, so it looks sort o' like some gal was due to git locked in here."

He returned to his packed burros and drove them up into Coolgardie, keeping well to the far side of the canyon where their tracks would not be visible. In a little side canyon he unpacked them, drove them over to the well, pried off the sheet-iron lid with his short crowbar and gave them all the water they could drink. At the same time he filled one of his water kegs and carried it up to the old shaft. A supply of provisions followed that, and when the moon came up he chopped a quantity of dead mesquite limbs into short lengths and piled them alongside the provisions. He then drove his burros back into the side canyon and turned them loose. He was tired now, so he turned in without striving to read the Salt Lake newspaper by the flickering light of his camp fire.

He was up at dawn, and immediately after breakfast carried a shovel down to the dry lake-bed and, about a quarter of a mile north of the mouth of Coolgardie canyon, he dug a slanting hole about six feet into the soft silt. As he had expected, he struck subsurface flood water; slowly it seeped into the hole, and about noon he drove his burros down there and introduced them to it. Then he brushed them, and turned them lose. He knew they would always come back to the water.

He returned to his camp, cooked his midday meal, and stretched out to read the Salt Lake City paper. In thirty-six-point type across the front page flared the headline: MAGNATE'S DAUGHTER KIDNAPPED.

Slowly, word by word, Smoky Jim read the story aloud. Miss Jean Barkley, daughter of Thomas J. Barkley, president of the Continental Petroleum Company was the name of the kidnapped lady. The exact details were lacking but a party unknown—a man—had telephoned Mr. Barkley to the effect that his daughter had been kidnapped, that he could have her back for a quarter of a million dollars, and to await receipt of a letter which would give him full instructions for delivering the money.

"The dirty coyotes," Smoky Jim growled, and passed on to other news.

PRESENTLY he sighted the ship out over the dry lake; then it dipped below his line of vision and the hum of the motors was quieter, only to swell to a roar again, as the ship, having landed, came taxiing toward Coolgardie, and came to a halt. The cabin door opened, and somebody threw out a small three-step ladder and descended. The next figure to appear in the cabin door was a young woman, who held her arms out in front of her gropingly. The man who had alighted seized her in his arms and lifted her to the ground. Two men followed her, and then the pilot, having killed his engine, descended also, and the party proceeded to the Palace Hotel.

Each step of that brief journey Smoky Jim followed them with his binoculars.

"Certainly not minin' men," he decided, "an' what in Tophet that there gal is doin' with a white band across her eyes beats my time. . . . No, it don't nuther. They got her blindfolded so's she won't see where she is. . . . Great Jumpin' Catawampuses an' Side Hill Gougers! It's the kidnap party. That Jean Barkley was stolen from her paw in Los Angeles. They had it all planned some time ago to kidnap her an' they had to have a place to hide her until they got the money. An' they picked on the Palace Hotel in Coolgardie. Well, Mr. Tarbox, this certainly ain't your game, but it does appear to me you're elected to horn in."

Two men emerged from the Palace Hotel, and one of them had a bucket in each hand. Smoky Jim permitted them to help themselves to water.

"They think they can git all the water they want, so they'll be careless with them two buckets of it," he decided. "I'd ought to bust 'em both here an' now, but that'd only provoke a ruckus with the others. An', besides, Miss Jean Barkley's just nacherally got to have a drink o' water."

THE sun set, and Smoky Jim waited behind the old dump. Then the moon came up. Smoky Jim expected to see the pilot emerge from the Palace Hotel and take off again, but when midnight came he knew the ship would remain there until morning, so, like some little old predatory animal, he sidled down to it, climbed up the nose of it, and searched around until he found the dual ignition system on the motor. Not for naught had he owned an automobile and operated gas engine hoists! He removed the cap of each distributor, struck a match, and filched the platinum breaker points, which he put in his overalls pocket. Then he prowled back to his camp, and slept.

Shortly after daylight he was awakened by a metallic sound, so he peered over his rock parapet and saw two men at the well. One of them stood with two buckets in his hands and the other was prying up the sheet-iron covering.

Smoky Jim sniggered, reached for his rifle, sighted carefully, and put a bullet through one bucket. Instantly both men, with exclamations of fright and amazement, leaped for cover behind the far side of the concrete coping.

The sharp, crashing reports of the shots brought the other two men out of the Palace Hotel. One carried a shotgun and the other a subcaliber machine gun.

"What happened?" one of the men shouted to his two pals.

"A guy shot at us."

"See the guy?" came their call to the men at the well.

"Nah!"

"Where is he?"

"Here I am," shrilled Smoky Jim. "Drop your guns an' step out in the open. Word of honor I won't tunnel you. You fellers behind the well lay low or I'll bust you."

One man stepped out from the corner of the house. "What do you want, you ———"

"Won't do you no good to cuss me," Smoky Jim piped back. "I got the water covered—an' that's a royal flush in this country. You can't git me from in front, an' if you try from the rear all I got to do is back into this here abandoned shaft. I'm holed up for a siege. An' last night I stole the platinum points from the distributor heads on the magnet of your flyin' machine. You ain't never goin' to git out o' this country alive unless I say so."

"Well, what's your proposition?"

"You take the bandages off'm that gal's eyes an' send her out to the well. Then I'll let them two fellers go back to the house. I figger you four are the skunks that kidnapped that Barkley gal, an' I want her. Lemme have her, or my deppity on the other side o' the canyon'll begin poppin' at them two polecats behind the well copin'. Then we'll hold the water until you two listen to reason."

ONE of the men behind the well coping rose suddenly and commenced firing an automatic pistol at Smoky Jim's head and shoulders, visible above his barricade. Calmly ignoring the fusillade of pistol bullets, Smoky Jim aimed carefully and put a bullet through the fellow's head. He sagged down behind the well coping.

From the corner of the house came a burst of machine-gun fire, the bullets ricocheting against the parapet. Smoky Jim merely settled back in his lair.

"You can't shoot for sour apples, mister," he taunted. "Now, git sensible an' send the girl out so's I can talk with her, otherwise the fellers still behind the well will stay there until they goes crazy from thirst or I kill them when they tries to make their get-away after dark."

"All right, we lose. I'll send the girl out."

She came out presently and stood blinking in the strong sunlight. Smoky Jim saw that she was not blindfolded, so he waved his battered old hat above his parapet and yelled, "This way, young lady, this way. Hey, you feller with the stutterin' gun! Send up some paper an' a pencil by the gal."

She arrived presently, and a delicate, jaunty figure she was.

"Climb over an' set down," Smoky Jim urged. "I don't trust them fellers not to shoot at me if I stand up to help you over."

She slid over the parapet, sat down, and stared at the old desert rat.

"What are you?" she demanded coolly.

Smoky Jim tittered childishly, and announced that he was a prospector.

"I ain't as young as I used to be," he added parenthetically. "You're Miss Barkley, ain't you?"

"Yes, I am Jean Barkley."

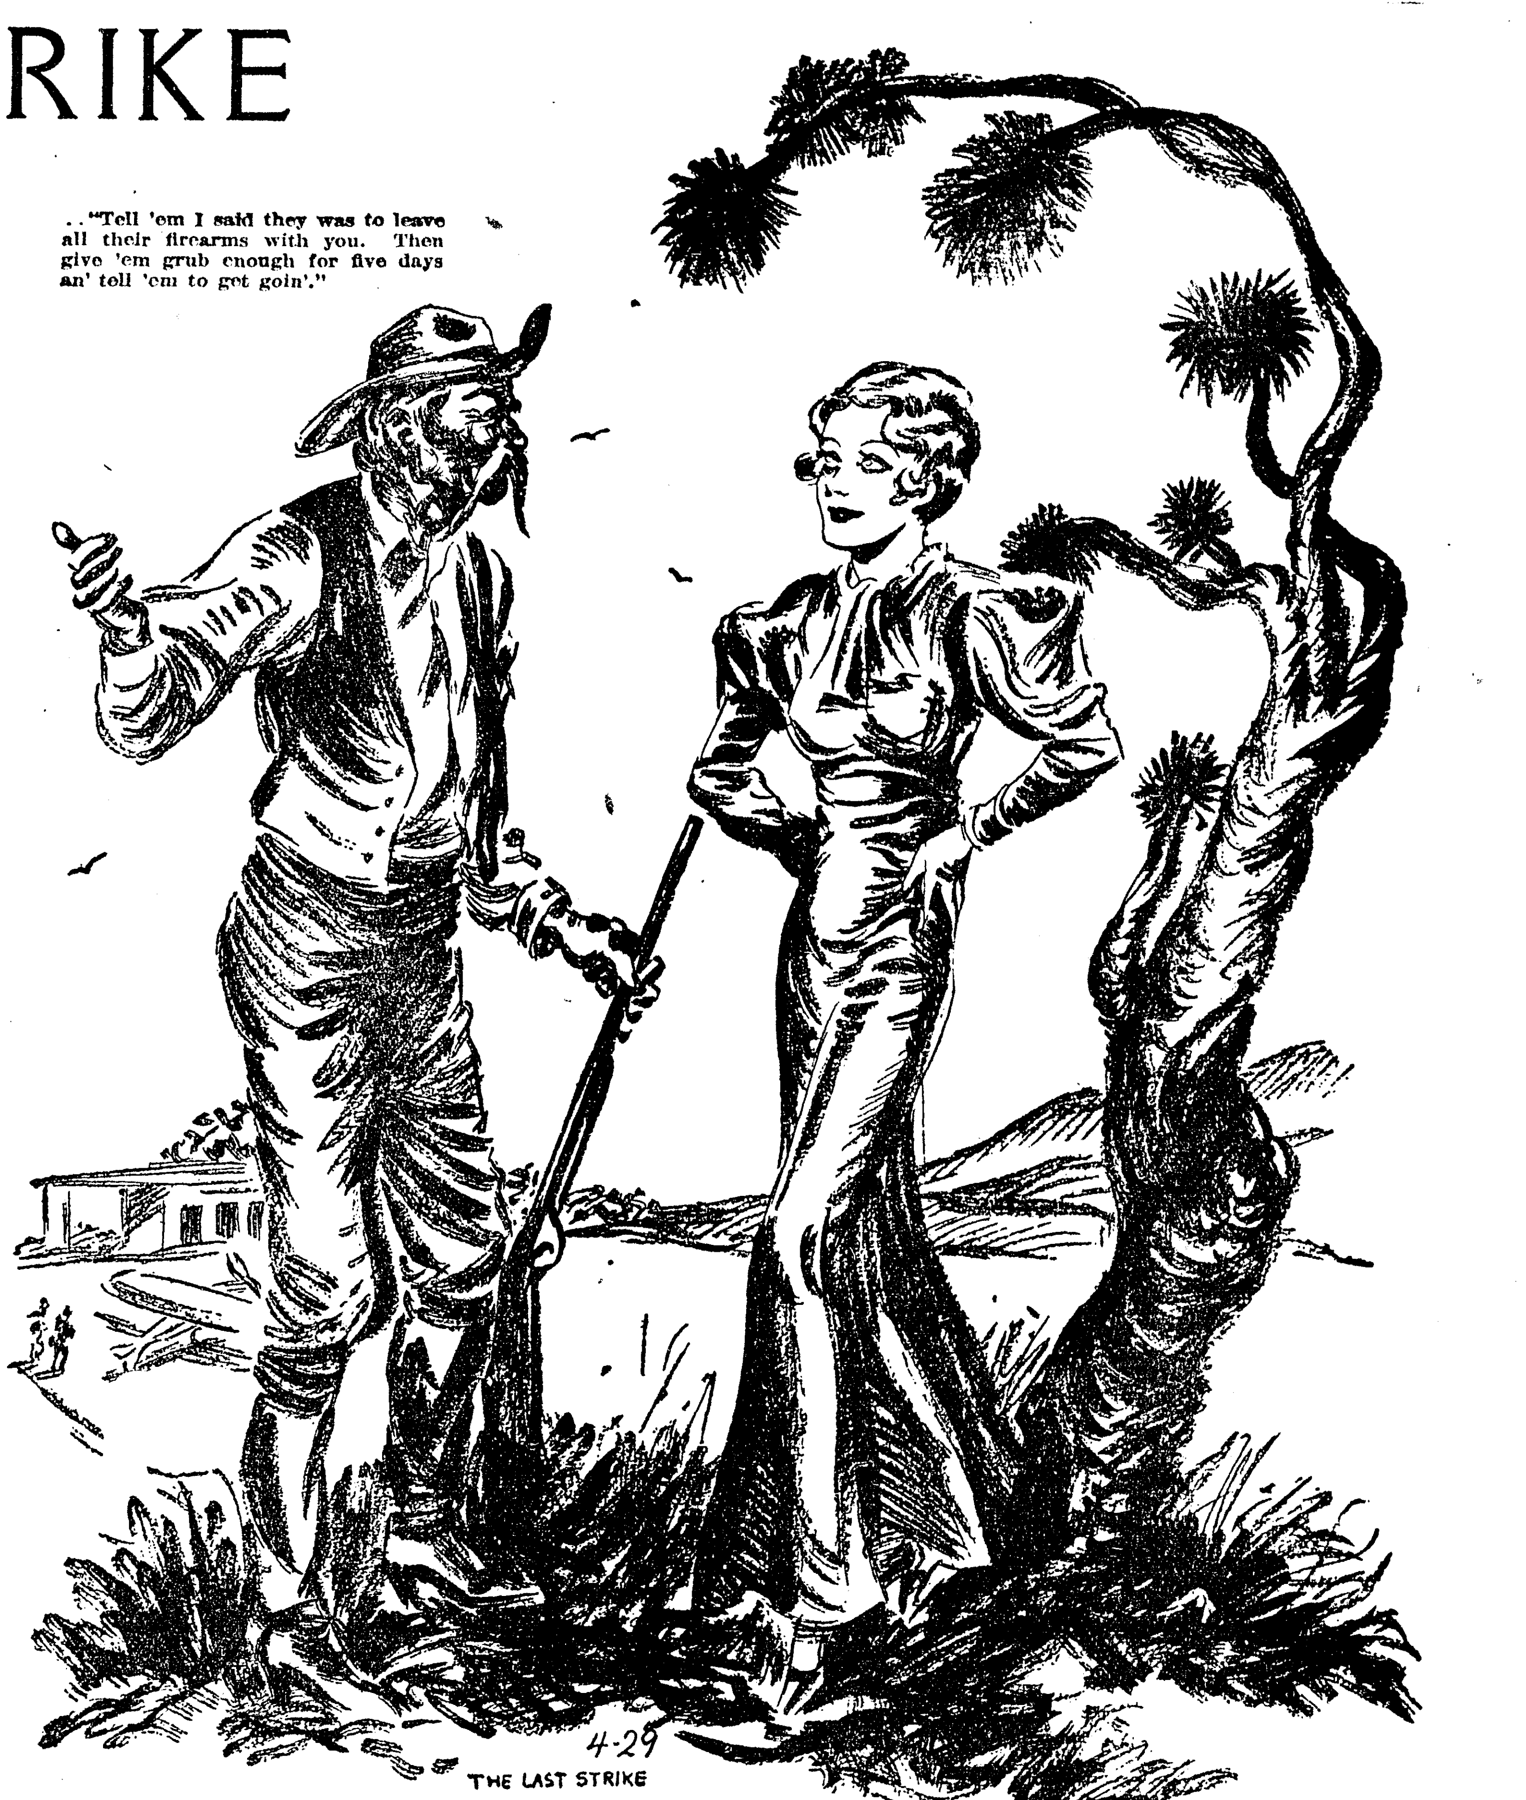
"Thought so. Air-mail pilot threw me down a paper an' I read about you."

He found a flat rock and, using it for a desk, drew a rude map, upon which, after consulting a small pocket compass, he indicated north, east, south, and west. Then he drew a sketch of three low red hills in a canyon, among which there was a water hole known as Misery Springs.

"I ain't much at writin', Miss Barkley," he said then, "so you write down the directions I tell you. Then you take this here an' my spare canteen down to them wolverines an' tell 'em I said they was to leave all their firearms with you. Make 'em take their coats off, so you can see if they got any pistols in shoulder holsters. Then send one of 'em over to the well for water, give 'em grub enough for about five meals, an' tell 'em to git goin'. If they don't believe I got that there flying machine hobbled, tell 'em to take a look."

"You priceless old darling," said Jean Barkley. "I could kiss you."

"Better not," he replied. "You might up an' die o' somethin' right afterward an' I aim to keep you healthy. You got fifty mile to ride on my jen-burro, Ruth, before we hit Bandon station on the railroad line an' wire your father."



. . "Tell 'em I said they was to leave all their firearms with you. Then give 'em grub enough for five days an' tell 'em to get goin'."

JEAN BARKLEY returned to the Palace Hotel, and in about half an hour Smoky Jim saw the three survivors of the gang go to the airplane, inspect it, and then pass on down the canyon.

The girl called up to him, "I think I got everything."

Smoky Jim emerged and joined her at the Palace Hotel. On the ancient heat-warped bar were two machine guns with a dozen filled magazines, six automatic pistols, and two sawed-off shotguns.

"Come on," said the girl, "let's go down and put those platinum points back in the motor. Then I'll help you fill the ship with gas and oil, and we'll take off for Los Angeles."

"But I can't drive one o' the things."

"I can. I have a ship of my own and I hold a commercial license."

"I'm afraid," he confessed.

"You have never known the meaning of the word 'fear.' Moreover, Smoky Jim, the first airplane ride is always an experience. You come with me and meet my parents, and make your bow, and receive their thanks and a big fat check from Dad —"

"Don't you insult me, young woman." Smoky Jim's faded orbs flashed angrily.

"Oh, very well. But let's get to work on that ship and talk afterward."

AFTER an hour of hard work they managed to fill the ship with gasoline and oil, and then Smoky Jim stood on the little landing ladder and cranked the motor.

"Stand clear," the girl warned, and as the propeller started to turn she cut in the ignition, and with a roar the motor started. "O.K.," she chirped, and killed the motor. "Now you'll have to bury that wretch you killed and we'll be off."

"The coyotes'll take care of him," the desert rat replied carelessly, "but I certainly don't wish no coyote the hard luck o' findin' them other three after they hit Misery Springs. They'll have that canteen o' water you gave 'em all drunk up before they git halfway there. Never knew a tenderfoot that could conserve water in the desert. So they'll be right thirsty when they hit Misery Springs. Misery Springs is arsenic water. Even the coyotes know that and keep away from it. Them three won't never leave Misery Springs, Miss Barkley."

"How horrible, Smoky Jim."

"They would have proved mighty embarrassing, gal. An' they was guilty, wasn't they? What's the sense spending the state's money to prosecute varmints like that? The best way out is the easiest way."

"Well, Smoky Jim, they tried to kill you and I suppose it's your right to be judge and jury. Crank up again and we'll take off."

"I won't come," he repeated.

"Then I'll have to stay here with you, because I don't know the way home. You know California and should be able to direct me."

Smoky Jim heaved a profound sigh, climbed in beside Jean Barkley, and submitted to having the seat belt buckled around him.

The girl, having carefully taxied the ship down the gravel wash to the dry lake-bed, paused, gradually gave the motor the gun, and scurried off across the waste. They lifted into the air, and Smoky Jim scrouged down in his seat. The girl nudged him and pointed downward. Below them the shining rails of the railroad line stretched into the south.

"Foller them," Smoky Jim yelled.

"Bandon," yelled Smoky Jim.

Smoky Jim was furious. "You didn't need me to show you the way. You knew there was maps," he howled.

"I do not tell everything I know," she shouted back. "You're my hero, aren't you?"

"Oh, dang the wimmin!" he shrilled. He was horribly scandalized. "Now I will git in the papers, an' as long as I live an' a human bein' knows me they'll never stop talkin' about it."

HE THOUGHT of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Nehemiah, Ruth and her colt, doomed to run wild in Coolgardie the remainder of their lives, of his abandoned outfit spread out on that canyon floor. But — he was not going back to Coolgardie. He could never go back. Somebody else could have that thirty-dollar gold. What need had he of gold? If he needed fifty thousand Jean Barkley's father would give it to him in sheer gratitude for rescuing his daughter. . . . Well, they'd be back before the kidnap agent had had time to collect the ransom. The dirty side-winders. . . . He visioned three corpses outstretched on the edge of Misery Springs — and suddenly he forgot his horror of publicity and interviews and cameras, and snickered. He leaned toward Jean Barkley and yelled:

"I bet a cooky them kidnappers took me for a sucker, eh?"

"And quite properly so," Jean Barkley shouted back. "You've made your last strike; you struck pay dirt and you're such a sucker you refuse to work the mine."

And she laughed when he glared at her.

He went into the other rooms. In each of the three he investigated he found a new folding cot, with blankets and pillows; on the door leading to an inside room he found a new steel hasp with a new padlock hanging to it, unsprung. So he looked in and discovered another folding cot, a wooden box with a pitcher and basin on it, some soap and towels on the cot, and two women's nightgowns hanging on a nail.

"They're not minin' men," Smoky Jim decided, "because if they was they'd have powder an' fuse, picks, drills, crowbars, an' shovels. An' there'd ought to be a portable assay outfit. This room fixed up for a woman has a new hasp an' padlock, so it looks sort o' like some gal was due to git locked in here."

He returned to his packed burros and drove them up into Coolgardie, keeping well to the far side of the canyon where their tracks would not be visible. In a little side canyon he unpacked them, drove them over to the well, pried off the sheet-iron lid with his short crowbar and gave them all the water they could drink. At the same time he filled one of his water kegs and carried it up to the old shaft. A supply of provisions followed that, and when the moon came up he chopped a quantity of dead mesquite limbs into short lengths and piled them alongside the provisions. He then drove his burros back into the side canyon and turned them loose. He was tired now, so he turned in without striving to read the Salt Lake newspaper by the flickering light of his camp fire.

He was up at dawn, and immediately after breakfast carried a shovel down to the dry lake-bed and, about a quarter of a mile north of the mouth of Coolgardie canyon, he dug a slanting hole about six feet into the soft silt. As he had expected, he struck subsurface flood water; slowly it seeped into the hole, and about noon he drove his burros down there and introduced them to it. Then he brushed them, and turned them lose. He knew they would always come back to the water.

He returned to his camp, cooked his midday meal, and stretched out to read the Salt Lake City paper. In thirty-six-point type across the front page flared the headline: MAGNATE'S DAUGHTER KIDNAPPED.

Slowly, word by word, Smoky Jim read the story aloud. Miss Jean Barkley, daughter of Thomas J. Barkley, president of the Continental Petroleum Company was the name of the kidnapped lady. The exact details were lacking but a party unknown—a man—had telephoned Mr. Barkley to the effect that his daughter had been kidnapped, that he could have her back for a quarter of a million dollars, and to await receipt of a letter which would give him full instructions for delivering the money.

"The dirty coyotes," Smoky Jim growled, and passed on to other news.

PRESENTLY he sighted the ship out over the dry lake; then it dipped below his line of vision and the hum of the motors was quieter, only to swell to a roar again, as the ship, having landed, came taxiing toward Coolgardie, and came to a halt. The cabin door opened, and somebody threw out a small three-step ladder and descended. The next figure to appear in the cabin door was a young woman, who held her arms out in front of her gropingly. The man who had alighted seized her in his arms and lifted her to the ground. Two men followed her, and then the pilot, having killed his engine, descended also, and the party proceeded to the Palace Hotel.

Each step of that brief journey Smoky Jim followed them with his binoculars.

"Certainly not minin' men," he decided, "an' what in Tophet that there gal is doin' with a white band across her eyes beats my time. . . . No, it don't nuther. They got her blindfolded so's she won't see where she is. . . . Great Jumpin' Catawampuses an' Side Hill Gougers! It's the kidnap party. That Jean Barkley was stolen from her paw in Los Angeles. They had it all planned some time ago to kidnap her an' they had to have a place to hide her until they got the money. An' they picked on the Palace Hotel in Coolgardie. Well, Mr. Tarbox, this certainly ain't your game, but it does appear to me you're elected to horn in."

Two men emerged from the Palace Hotel, and one of them had a bucket in each hand. Smoky Jim permitted them to help themselves to water.

"They think they can git all the water they want, so they'll be careless with them two buckets of it," he decided. "I'd ought to bust 'em both here an' now, but that'd only provoke a ruckus with the others. An', besides, Miss Jean Barkley's just nacherally got to have a drink o' water."

THE sun set, and Smoky Jim waited behind the old dump. Then the moon came up. Smoky Jim expected to see the pilot emerge from the Palace Hotel and take off again, but when midnight came he knew the ship would remain there until morning, so, like some little old predatory animal, he sidled down to it, climbed up the nose of it, and searched around until he found the dual ignition system on the motor. Not for naught had he owned an automobile and operated gas engine hoists! He removed the cap of each distributor, struck a match, and fliched the platinum breaker points, which he put in his overalls pocket. Then he prowled back to his camp, and slept.

Shortly after daylight he was awakened by a metallic sound, so he peered over his rock parapet and saw two men at the well. One of them stood with two buckets in his hands and the other was prying up the sheet-iron covering.

Smoky Jim sniggered, reached for his rifle, sighted carefully, and put a bullet through one bucket. Instantly both men, with exclamations of fright and amazement, leaped for cover behind the far side of the concrete coping.

The sharp, crashing reports of the shots brought the other two men out of the Palace Hotel. One carried a shotgun and the other a subcaliber machine gun.

"What happened?" one of the men shouted to his two pals.

"A guy shot at us."

Instantly the two at the Palace Hotel leaped back to the shelter of the corner of that forgotten hostelry.

"See the guy?" came their call to the men at the well.

"Nah!"

"Where is he?"

"Here I am," shrilled Smoky Jim. "Drop your guns an' step out in the open. Word of honor I won't tunnel you. You fellers behind the well lay low or I'll bust you."

One man stepped out from the corner of the house. "What do you want, you ————"

"Won't do you no good to cuss me," Smoky Jim piped back. "I got the water covered—an' that's a royal flush in this country. You can't git me from in front, an' if you try from the rear all I got to do is back into this here abandoned shaft. I'm holed up for a siege. An' last night I stole the platinum points from the distributor heads on the magnet of your flyin' machine. You ain't never goin' to git out o' this country alive unless I say so."

"Well, what's your proposition?"

"You take the bandages off'm that gal's eyes an' send her out to the well. Then I'll let them two fellers go back to the house. I figger you four are the skunks that kidnapped that Barkley gal, an' I want her. Lemme have her, or my deppity on the other side o' the canyon'll begin poppin' at them two polecats behind the well copin'. Then we'll hold the water until you two listen to reason."

ONE of the men behind the well coping rose suddenly and commenced firing an automatic pistol at Smoky Jim's head and shoulders, visible above his barricade. Calmly ignoring the fusillade of pistol bullets, Smoky Jim aimed carefully and put a bullet through the fellow's head. He sagged down behind the well coping.

From the corner of the house came a burst of machine-gun fire, the bullets ricocheting against the parapet. Smoky Jim merely settled back in his lair.

"You can't shoot for sour apples, mister," he taunted. "Now, git sensible an' send the girl out so's I can talk with her, otherwise the fellers still behind the well will stay there until they goes crazy from thirst or I kill them when they tries to make their get-away after dark."

"All right, we lose. I'll send the girl out."

She came out presently and stood blinking in the strong sunlight. Smoky Jim saw that she was not blindfolded, so he waved his battered old hat above his parapet and yelled, "This way, young lady, this way. Hey, you feller with the stutterin' gun! Send up some paper an' a pencil by the gal."

She arrived presently, and a delicate, jaunty figure she was.

"Climb over an' set down," Smoky Jim urged. "I don't trust them fellers not to shoot at me if I stand up to help you over."

She slid over the parapet, sat down, and stared at the old desert rat.

"What are you?" she demanded coolly.

Smoky Jim tittered childishly, and announced that he was a prospector.

"I ain't as young as I used to be," he added parenthetically. "You're Miss Barkley, ain't you?"

"Yes, I am Jean Barkley."

"Thought so. Air-mail pilot threw me down a paper an' I read about you."

He found a flat rock and, using it for a desk, drew a rude map, upon which, after consulting a small pocket compass, he indicated north, east, south, and west. Then he drew a sketch of three low red hills in a canyon, among which there was a water hole known as Misery Springs.

"I ain't much at writin', Miss Barkley," he said then, "so you write down the directions I tell you. Then you take this here an' my spare canteen down to them wolverines an' tell 'em I said they was to leave all their firearms with you. Make 'em take their coats off, so you can see if they got any pistols in shoulder holsters. Then send one of 'em over to the well for water, give 'em grub enough for about five meals, an' tell 'em to git goin'. If they don't believe I got that there flying machine hobbled, tell 'em to take a look."

"You priceless old darling," said Jean Barkley. "I could kiss you."

"Better not," he replied. "You might up an' die o' somethin' right afterward an' I aim to keep you healthy. You got fifty mile to ride on my jen-burro, Ruth, before we hit Bandon station on the railroad line an' wire your father."

JEAN BARKLEY returned to the Palace Hotel, and in about half an hour Smoky Jim saw the three survivors of the gang go to the airplane, inspect it, and then pass on down the canyon.

The girl called up to him, "I think I got everything."

Smoky Jim emerged and joined her at the Palace Hotel. On the ancient heat-warped bar were two machine guns with a dozen filled magazines, six automatic pistols, and two sawed-off shotguns.

"Come on," said the girl, "let's go down and put those platinum points back in the motor. Then I'll help you fill the ship with gas and oil, and we'll take off for Los Angeles."

"But I can't drive one o' the things."

"I can. I have a ship of my own and I hold a commercial license."

"I'm afraid," he confessed.

"You have never known the meaning of the word 'fear.' Moreover, Smoky Jim, the first airplane ride is always an experience. You come with me and meet my parents, and make your bow, and receive their thanks and a big fat check from Dad —"

"Don't you insult me, young woman." Smoky Jim's faded orbs flashed angrily.

"Oh, very well. But let's get to work on that ship and talk afterward."

AFTER an hour of hard work they managed to fill the ship with gasoline and oil, and then Smoky Jim stood on the little landing ladder and cranked the motor.

"Stand clear," the girl warned, and as the propeller started to turn she cut in the ignition, and with a roar the motor started. "O.K.," she chirped, and killed the motor. "Now you'll have to bury that wretch you killed and we'll be off."

"The coyotes'll take care of him," the desert rat replied carelessly, "but I certainly don't wish no coyote the hard luck o' findin' them other three after they hit Misery Springs. They'll have that canteen o' water you gave 'em all drunk up before they git halfway there. Never knew a tenderfoot that could conserve water in the desert. So they'll be right thirsty when they hit Misery Springs. Misery Springs is arsenic water. Even the coyotes know that and keep away from it. Them three won't never leave Misery Springs, Miss Barkley."

"How horrible, Smoky Jim."

"They would have proved mighty embarrassing, gal. An' they was guilty, wasn't they? What's the sense spending the state's money to prosecute varmints like that? The best way out is the easiest way."

"Well, Smoky Jim, they tried to kill you and I suppose it's your right to be judge and jury. Crank up again and we'll take off."

"I won't come," he repeated.

"Then I'll have to stay here with you, because I don't know the way home. You know California and should be able to direct me."

Smoky Jim heaved a profound sigh, climbed in beside Jean Barkley, and submitted to having the seat belt buckled around him.

The girl, having carefully taxied the ship down the gravel wash to the dry lake-bed, paused, gradually gave the motor the gun, and scurried off across the waste. They lifted into the air, and Smoky Jim scrouged down in his seat. The girl nudged him and pointed downward. Below them the shining rails of the railroad line stretched into the south.

"Foller them," Smoky Jim yelled.

"Bandon," yelled Smoky Jim.

So the girl calmly abstracted a map from a rack above her head, let go the stick, and permitted the ship to fly itself, while she laid off her compass course from Bandon to Los Angeles.

Smoky Jim was furious. "You didn't need me to show you the way. You knew there was maps," he howled.

"I do not tell everything I know," she shouted back. "You're my hero, aren't you?"

"Oh, dang the wimmin!" he shrilled. He was horribly scandalized. "Now I will git in the papers, an' as long as I live an' a human bein' knows me they'll never stop talkin' about it."

HE THOUGHT of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Nehemiah, Ruth and her colt, doomed to run wild in Coolgardie the remainder of their lives, of his abandoned outfit spread out on that canyon floor. But — he was not going back to Coolgardie. He could never go back. Somebody else could have that thirty-dollar gold. What need had he of gold? If he needed fifty thousand Jean Barkley's father would give it to him in sheer gratitude for rescuing his daughter. . . . Well, they'd be back before the kidnap agent had had time to collect the ransom. The dirty side-winders. . . . He visioned three corpses outstretched on the edge of Misery Springs — and suddenly he forgot his horror of publicity and interviews and cameras, and snickered. He leaned toward Jean Barkley and yelled:

"I bet a cooky them kidnappers took me for a sucker, eh?"

"And quite properly so," Jean Barkley shouted back. "You've made your last strike; you struck pay dirt and you're such a sucker you refuse to work the mine."

And she laughed when he glared at her.

DICK TRACY
SPALDONI
AFTER TRAILING SPALDONI, FIRST ON HIS BICYCLE THEN IN A TAXI CAB, JUNIOR DISCOVERED THE CROOK-LAWYER'S HEADQUARTERS TO BE AN OLD ABANDONED STEEL MILL AT THE CITY'S OUTSKIRTS... WHEREUPON THE BOY RETURNED TO TOWN AND SUMMONS TRACY....
YOU SAY YOU FOLLOWED THEM TO AN OLD STEEL MILL?
YES SIR, TRACY! SPALDONI AND HIS GANG HAVE A SECRET HIDEOUT IN AN OLD STEEL MILL AND I HEARD SPALDONI SAY HE WAS THE ONE THAT KILLED JEAN PENFIELD!
THE QUESTION IS, WHERE ARE THEY NOW? IT'S MORE THAN LIKELY THAT THEY WENT TO THE STEEL MILL ONLY FOR A TEMPORARY MEETING BEFORE SKIPPING TOWN.
WELL, WE'LL SOON FIND OUT TRACY. I'LL SHOW YOU WHERE THE PLACE IS.
MEANWHILE, ALTHOUGH JUNIOR THINKS HIS SHADOWING OF THE CROOKS WENT UNNOTICED..CONVERSATION AT THE OLD STEEL MILL PROVES QUITE THE OPPOSITE..
BUT, SPALDONI, WHEN WE HEARD THAT NOISE, AND SAW THE KID CREEP OUT FROM BEHIND THOSE FURNACES AND BEAT IT, WE KNEW HE'D DISCOVERED OUR HIDEAWAY. DIDN'T WE?
CERTAINLY!
THEN WHY DID YOU INSIST ON LETTING HIM GET AWAY? HE'LL BRING THAT DETECTIVE PAL OF HIS BACK HERE. AND-
THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT I WANT HIM TO DO- BRING THAT DETECTIVE PAL OF HIS BACK HERE!
DO YOU SEE THE CAT WALK ABOVE THAT OLD FURNACE? WELL, THERE'S A TRAP DOOR RIGHT AT THE MOUTH OPERATED BY THIS LEVER.
YEAH? WELL WHAT ABOUT IT, SPALDONI?
WHEN THE DETECTIVE COMES IN HERE... I WANT ONE OF YOU BOYS TO LET HIM GET A GLIMPSE OF YOU - THEN RUN ACROSS THAT CAT WALK AND HIDE BEHIND THOSE FURNACES.
AS THE DICK GOES AFTER YOU AND PUTS HIS FOOT ON THE TRAP DOOR, I'LL PULL THIS LEVER- HE'LL TUMBLE INTO THE FURNACE AND.. NOW LOOK!
CLANK
BY PULLING THAT RELEASE ROD FIVE TONS OF SCRAP IRON WILL DROP FROM THAT CONVEYOR LADLE RIGHT IN AFTER HIM, SEE? WHAT? HEY MILREY- DON'T PULL THAT!
CRASH
GEE, SPALDONI- I DIDN'T MEAN TO DUMP IT!
WHY, YOU DUMBBELL! NOW WE'VE GOT TO GO UP TO THE CHARGING ROOM OF THE FURNACE AND RELOAD THAT LADLE WITH SCRAP IRON!! COME ON!
EASY, BOYS! I HEARD YOU WERE HERE.. AND THOUGHT I'D CALL. I CAME IN THROUGH THE CAST HOUSE AND OVER THE ROOF OF THE INGOT SHED. STICK 'EM UP HIGH!
SEARCH THEM, JUNIOR... TAKE THEIR GUNS! AND KEEP 'EM UP, YOU GUYS!
THE SURPRISE APPEARANCE OF THE DETECTIVE AND BOY TAKES SPALDONI OFF HIS FEET. HE HAD NOT EXPECTED THEM SO SOON. FOR A MOMENT HE IS DAZED, THEN.. HIS UPRAISED HAND MOVES TOWARD A DANGLING CHAIN...
